REDS ADVANCE AS COUNCIL FOR TRUCE GATHERS

Nationalism of All Russia Aflame.

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

WARSAW, July 30.—[Delayed.]—Each hour brings the red hordes closer to Warsaw on constantly changing fronts north and east of the capital. The departure of the Polish armistice negotiators for Baranovitch, behind the red lines, brings no hope of the immediate suspension of hostilities, although the meeting undoubtedly will be a start in that direction.

Isolated groups of Polish cavalry under resolute leaders and old, experienced officers are fighting their way back through the Red lines to join the retiring main bodies, and in so doing are causing greater interference with communications with the enemy's rear.

In the Polish capital these days there is complete absence of confidence that the league of nations will be able to settle Russ-Pole differences.

The Poles appreciate that the league was not consulted when the Poles launched their offensive against the Reds two months ago.

League Not Recognized.

The Poles know the Reds do not recognize the league of nations, and refuse to consider the Russ-Pole war a matter in which other nations of Europe have a part.

Moscow, although still cherishing schemes of international revolution by propaganda, is not losing a single opportunity to take the fullest advantage of the new nationalist feeling, which, developing among the Reds, had the effect of uniting the various factions —even the dissatisfied peasants.

For once the Moscow dictators have laid aside all talk of international brotherhood and have resorted immediately to a stronger appeal to Russian nationalism.

Poland's Spirit Worn Out.

On the other hand, Poland having played the spirit of her new nationalism to the limit, has been forced to appeal for an armistice and now turns to the international prospects of the situation and demands actual aid from its European allies on the basis that their concern in the outcome of the conflict is greater even than that of Poland.

The Reds, expecting no outside assistance, will undoubtedly make the armistice terms as severe as possible and in the event of a break in negotiations will continue military penetration, reaping full benefit from their present strong position in the field.

Europe's Real Peril.

Such an outcome would be fraught with perils for the rest of Europe, as well as for the entire world.

The Red aim is to destroy all nationalistic divisions in the world and to replace them with class divisions—to overthrow all governments based on the individual's right to property and to establish a Communist régime in which power would be held by whatever party first should grab control.

If Poland succumbs, the soviet's Red flood would be brought westward that much farther. It would open the way southward into Czecho-Slovakia and Italy.

It would bring bolshevists to the borders of disgruntled and revolution torn Germany—now ruled by a minority party liable to overthrow by a radical left.

Ware a Red Napoleon.

Last of all, there is the fear that it would open an opportunity for a red Napoleon, who, at the head of 1,000,000 misguided Asiatics, might attempt another world war against western civilization.

From this distance it is easy to see how the present day developments in Europe are not fully appreciated in America, but nevertheless the danger at present is real.

"Fought and Lost."

Poland has made its fight and lost. Thousands of her sons have died bravely under the white eagle, while others —Americans, English, French, Italians —have suffered in the conflict. There has been a disposition on the part of the allied governments to furnish advice, munitions, money, and supplies —everything but the hot, active, actual BERLIN, July 31.—Three thousand Poles have been disarmed and interned in East Prussia. Three Russian cavalry regiments have surrounded 2,000 Poles at Lomza, and the latter are trying to cut their way out. Soviets are being established in every conquered town.

Russian officers on the German border have declared the armistice terms are so severe that Poland cannot accept them. This will give the Russians an excuse to continue encircling Warsaw.

WARSAW, July 31.—After tracted disagreement with the Soviet's representatives the Lithuanian government officials have all withdrawn from Vilna, leaving the city completely in soviet hands. It is believed here the development is partly due to the reported establishment of soviet councils at Kowano.

WARSAW, July 31.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Polish military delegates who left Warsaw at 9 o'clock yesterday morning crossed the front line at 8 o'clock tonight. Premier Witos was informed at 9 o'clock that the delegation had established contact with the bolshevik delegates on the road between Brest-Litovsk and Baranovichi.

LONDON, July 31.—I learn from a Russian source that the bolshevists recently have discovered in the archives of Tashkent, Gen. Skobeleff's plans for the invasion of India made by the famous Russian general many years ago. It is stated the bolshevists are restudying these plans with a view to putting them into operation, and that the propaganda in India is the first step, as it was the first step in the Skobeleff plan. It must be remembered that the Red army now has the services of most of the czarist generals who were trained in the Skobeleff tradition.

LEGION OBJECTS TO THOMPSON AS PICNIC SPEAKER

Bushnell, Ill., July 31.—The American Legion is protesting the appearance of Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago as speaker at the annual picnic at Blandinsville, a small city west of Bushnell.

This picnic is the one big event of the year at that place and each time those in charge secure a speaker of national reputation.

This year they selected Mayor Thompson, and on Wednesday window cards and other advertising were placed in Bushnell. Today, acting upon the protest of William Neuneker Post, American Legion, all advertising has been removed from the store windows.

All neighboring legion posts are said to be protesting to the post at Blandinsville against the appearance of Mayor Thompson at the picnic.

BLAST DAMAGES CRANE HOME AT WILD ROSE FARM

Mrs. Herbert Crane and her year old son, Antonio Raphael, narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when a pressure pump in the basement of their home at Wild Rose farm near St. Charles exploded, causing damage to the amount of $2,500.

Mrs. Crane, who is separated from her husband and is suing for separate maintenance, was seated in the parlor with her son a few moments before the explosion. They had just gone into an adjoining room when the blast tore a large hole in the parlor floor and damaged a number of pieces of furniture and valuable paintings.

DROWNS TRYING TO SAVE DEAD MOTHER'S RING

That J. W. Cowan met his death by drowning Friday at Wilson beach while diving for a ring given to him by his mother before her death, was brought out at the inquest held yesterday at 1359 Devon avenue.

The father, James Cowan, a conductor for the Pennsylvania railroad, identified the body and told the story of the ring. The ring had been Mrs. Cowan's engagement ring.

The verdict returned by the coroner's jury was death by asphyxiation due to drowning.

Last 7 Days President's Best Since He Became Ill

Washington, D. C., July 31.—The last seven days have been President Wilson's "finest week" since his illness, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, his physician, announced today.

The president accomplished a remarkable amount of work, keeping in touch with international affairs and the coal strike situation. The president took several long auto rides.

MAGYARS RAID AUSTRIAN BORDER

Steal 2,000 Rifles and 21 Machine Guns.

VIENNA, July 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Delayed.—A Hungarian force of more than 800 armed and uniformed men crossed the Austrian frontier early this morning, overpowered the guards and raided the Furstenfeld arsenal, seizing 2,000 rifles, 2,000 uniforms, and twenty-one machine guns.

The raiders returned to Hungary with the booty loaded on motor trucks.

The government has protested to the Hungarian minister, demanding punishment of the raiders, return of the loot an apology and payment of damages. It also has communicated the facts to the foreign missions.

It is feared that in raids on other arsenals the raiders obtained more than 4,000 small arms. An official account asserts that Hungarian and Austrian reactionaries plotted the raid, which was thoroughly organized and caused renewed rumors that the Hungarians are planning to aid Poland.

President's White House Sheep Soon to Be Sold

Washington, D. C., July 31.—President Wilson has decided to retire from the sheep business. The White House flock of forty-eight prize sheep, which has kept the lawns cut for three summers, is to be sold.

The yield of wool has gone to charity, this year to the Salvation Army.

In 1918 the flock produced ninety-eight pounds of wool, which was sold by the Red Cross throughout the country, bringing in more than $52,000.

Tooth Falls Into Lung; Kills Woman, Dentist Sued

New York, July 31.—[Special.]—The charge that a tooth was allowed to fall into the lung of Mrs. Cora Minns, resulting in her death, is the basis of two suits for damages brought by George R. Minns against Dr. Victor W. Crossman, a dentist, of Brooklyn. Mr. Minns has sued in the first action for $10,000, for "the loss of the services of his wife," and in the second action for $50,000 as administrator of his wife's estate.

AIRPLANE, USED AS AMBULANCE, SAVES OPERATOR

Portsmouth, Va., July 31.—[Special.]—Utilizing a naval seaplane as an ambulance, naval surgeons from the Hampton Roads base saved the life of a radio operator stationed at Cape Hatteras today.

Under the expert pilotage of Lieut. Enos, one of the most daring and successful officers of the air station at the base, the surgeon responded to the emergency call received by wireless in record time, covering the 240 miles round trip in 240 minutes, flying time.

The return trip, with the patient on board, was made in ninety minutes. Ordinarily it takes two days and a half to go to Cape Hatteras and return. The condition of the sick man in this case was so desperate, it was said, he would have died had not an operation been performed in a few hours.

Millerand Takes Wilson's Place as Rodin's Thinker

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

PARIS, July 31.—Le De Paris, a whole edition of which once was suppressed because it published a cartoon of President Wilson in the attitude of Rodin's Thinker without enough clothes on to satisfy the ideas of the American peace delegation as to proper dignity of their chief, publishes today another caricature of a Thinker. This time it is Millerand who rests his chin on his fist and is made to say: "I wonder why Wilson doesn't come over and save Poland; he invented it."

Wanted---A Slogan of 12 Words or Less for Cox or Harding

The Harding managers already have announced they will blazon a short political slogan over the length and breadth of the country.

The Cox managers are expected to do likewise.

EXAMPLES

"Wilson—He Kept Us Out of War."
"T. R.—and a Square Deal for All."
"McKinley and the Full Dinner Pail."

THE TRIBUNE will pay $110 in prizes for the best efforts, as follows:

First prize Harding slogan, $25.
Three other prizes, $10 each.
First prize Cox slogan, $25.
Three other prizes, $10 each.

The slogan must not contain over 12 words.

It may be less. The shorter the better.

Send in your slogan to Slogan Editor, THE TRIBUNE.

LOFTIS' DEATH DUE TO HEART, SAYS CORONER

Mystery Fades as Clews Fail.

Shorn of a thousand theories, the mystery of the death of Samuel T. A. Loftis, president of the diamond house of Loftis Bros. & Co., seemed last night to resolve into this finding: Loftis died of apoplexy.

Yesterday was a day of breathless excitement in police circles. There were a dozen raids. Persons who never had heard of Loftis were snatched from hitherto calm pursuits and examined in police stations. Fashionable apartments and west side saloons were entered. The flashlight of photographers and the rattling gears of taxicabs punctured the bustling of detectives.

The end sought was a clew to the "murder of Loftis." The result seemed to be that Loftis wasn't murdered; that he died from too much living.

Trail Leads to Prairie.

In twenty-four hours there had arisen a tangled web of circumstances that had taken the searchers from the north side home of Loftis to a prairie out in Cicero and back again to a saloon nestling beside a railroad bridge on California avenue, and into which the lives of a dozen people who yesterday morning had never heard of Loftis had become ensnared.

The murder theory gradually grew weaker, until early this morning it had been abandoned by the police. However, there remained the mystery of just how the girl who was with Loftis when he died obtained his jewels.

Will Release Shayne.

Roy M. Shayne, acknowledged admirer of Miss Ruth Woods, hotel bookkeeper, who dined and drank with Loftis Friday evening before his death, will be released this morning.

His story remained unchanged. The girl's narrative, too, was different only in minor details. Her story, involving a wild ride through the west side in a taxicab, the meeting with a strange man, the charge that she was attacked after being taken to a deserted plot of ground far out on the city limits, together with her version of the theft of jewels from the Loftis home, was believed untrue by the police. She was held for further questioning.

Both did confess, under pressure, that the story first related of Loftis' death occurring as he opened the door of his home to admit Shayne, was not the truth. They stated, later, that Loftis had died in a friendly scuffle between himself and the girl he had lured to his apartment.

The Girl's Newest Story.

"Loftis called me by phone yesterday afternoon," the girl's new narrative began. "He said he wanted me to come over to his apartment to discuss with him the question of setting Mr. Shayne up in business. I went to his rooms. He was drunk. When I came in he offered me liquor. Later I found that he had locked the door and I was virtually a prisoner.

"Then a dispute arose and he became abusive. I was able to evade him long enough to telephone Mr. Shayne, explaining my predicament. Mr. Shayne hurried over and as Loftis opened the door to admit him he appeared to trip and fell to the floor. He did not move after he had fallen and Mr. Shayne and I became alarmed and attempted to revive him. When our efforts failed Mr. Shayne telephoned for a physician and urged me to leave."

Her Earlier Statement.

Earlier in the day Miss Woods had said she was struggling with Loftis in a friendly manner when he fell. She then became frightened, she said, and summoned Shayne.

After leaving the Loftis apartment, she said, she engaged Herman Wexler, a Yellow Cab chauffeur, and was driven to the south side parks. Then Wexler's brother joined the party and attempted to attack her. She struck him with a whisky bottle, she said. It was during this struggle, she claimed, that she received the scratches noticed by the police on her back and arms.

Chauffeur Changes Story.

Attorney Samuelson of the Yellow Cab company visited the chauffeur, who was held by the police, and under his questioning Wexler entirely changed his first story.

He said Miss Woods had engaged his car at the Green Mill Gardens, Lawrence avenue and Broadway. His first story was that he had picked her

'L' CASH FARES GO TO 10C; TICKETS TO BE 4 FOR 35C

Utilities Board Orders Rate Raise.

The ups and downs of "L" fares during the last twenty-one months are shown in the following table:

Nov. 8, 1918, fare increased from 5 to 6 cents.
Aug. 6, 1919, fare increased to 8 cents.
Jan. 28, 1920, 7½ cent ticket privilege installed.
July 31, 1920, cash fares, 10 cents; ticket fares, 8¾ cents.

At 12:01 o'clock Wednesday morning Chicago and suburbs will begin paying the following increased "L" fares, authorized by the public utilities commission yesterday:

Cash fare in Chicago and to western suburbs, 10 cents.

Ticket fare in Chicago and to western suburbs, 8¾ cents; four tickets for 35 cents.

Ticket fare, Chicago to Evanston, 13 cents, or a Chicago fare ticket and 7 cents cash.

Evanston fares, 7 cents.

In a separate order the commission authorized an increase of Evanston surface line fares from 6 to 7 cents. An increase from 5 to 6 cents was granted May 1.

Earlier in the day the commission ordered the Chicago Surface lines to purchase $2,000,000 worth of equipment annually and directed that 8 per cent of the company's gross receipts, which, under the contract ordinances with the city, has been placed in the depreciation and renewal fund, be used to buy the new cars and trailers.

Granted on Petition of June 24.

The increases in elevated fares are granted on the companies' petition, filed June 24, declaring that additional revenue was necessary to meet the blanket wage increases, averaging 15 cents an hour, which went into effect June 1. The petition set the cost of increases at $1,756,512.

The new order is temporary. A final order will be entered in October, when the valuation proceedings which have been going on for nearly a year are completed.

In fixing the new fares the commission refused to consider the $163,649 spent by the companies in the valuation proceedings, as operating expenses. Income taxes amounting to $50,000 paid in 1919 also were excluded.

The commission was unanimous in fixing the increased fares, according to Chairman James H. Wilkerson.

Roads Entitled to Relief.

"That petitioners are entitled to the financial relief hereinafter authorized is beyond question," the order reads in part.

"Results of operation under the increased fares, heretofore authorized by the commission, clearly show that the relief thus granted has been the minimum that could escape a judgment of confiscation in our courts.

"In no case have the advanced fares thus authorized produced a rate of return which any court would consider reasonable on the least possible value which could be assigned to the properties.

"The recent large wage increase is a burden greater than the companies can bear without assistance, and it seems plain that they could not reasonably be asked to wait for further relief until such time as the issues in this case have been finally decided."

$13,945,000 Expenses in Year.

The order estimated that during the next twelve months $1,400,000 will be required for maintenance of way and structures, $1,450,000 for maintenance of equipment; $1,360,000 for power; $7,575,000 for conducting transportation and for other expenses, including rentals, licenses, and taxes; $3,160,000—a total of $13,945,800 for expenses.

The number of passengers which will be carried is estimated at 190,000,000 and fares from these passengers and other revenues will permit the companies to earn $17,570,000.

Deducting expenses from earnings, $3,625,000 will be available for depreciation and return on the investment.

5.1 Per Cent Return.

"Making no allowance for the depreciation annually accruing in the properties, this sum, $3,625,000, is equivalent to a rate of return of 5.1 per cent upon the value of the roads, $70,943,020, fixed by the city council Aug. 14, 1918," the finding continues.

Appended to the order is a consolidated income statement showing that on the basis of the $70,943,020 valuation the highest return on the investment during the last five years, was 5.01 per cent, without deducting anything for depreciation.

Chester E. Cleveland, Mayor Thompson's traction representative, immediately issued a statement in which he sought to make political capital out of the commission's ruling.

RATE INCREASE LARGEST EVER ALLOWED LINES

Passengers to Share Levy with Freight.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., July 31.—[Special.]—The greatest single advance of transportation rates in the history of government regulation was granted to the railroads of the United States in a unanimous order of the interstate commerce commission today. The award will increase the annual revenue of the roads by about a billion and one-half.

The increases in rates, allowed to enable the roads to meet the increased cost of operation produced by the war, partly to rehabilitate and expand equipment nad to finance the recent $618,000,000 employes' wage raise, are:

Western freight rates, 35 per cent.
Eastern freight rates, 40 per cent.
Mountain Pacific freight rates, 25 per cent.
Southern freight rates, 25 per cent.
Milk rates, 20 per cent.
All passenger fares, 20 per cent.
Excess baggage charges, 20 per cent.
Pullman sleeping and parlor car rates, 50 per cent surcharge.

All Demands Allowed.

The railroads were given substantially all the increase in rates they had requested to enable them to earn the 5½ per cent for service and an additional one-half of 1 per cent for improvement charges, making a total of 6 per cent provided by the transportation act. The roads will put the increased rates into effect by Sept. 1, when the six months' government guarantee period expires.

"In view of the existing situation," says the commission, "it is important that the increased rates be made effective at as early a date as practicable. The increases herein approved may be made effective upon not less than five days' notice to the commission and to the general public by filing and posting in the manner prescribed in the interstate commerce act.

"The authority herein granted will not apply to any rates, fares, or charges filed with this commission to become effective later than Jan. 1, 1921.

"Most of the factors with which we are dealing are constantly changing. It is impossible to forecast with any degree of certainty what the volume of traffic will be.

Price Level Changing.

"The general price level is changing from month to month and from day to day. It is impracticable at this time to adjust all of the rates on individual commodities. The rates to be established on the basis hereinbefore approved must necessarily be subject to such readjustments as the facts may warrant. It is conceded by the carriers that readjustments will be necessary. It is expected that shippers will take these matters up in the first instance with the carriers and the latter will be expected to deal promptly and effectively therewith, to the end that necessary readjustments may be made in as many instances as practicable without appeal to us."

Opinion of Commission.

The commission's conclusion as to to general increases follows:

"We are of opinion and find that the following percentage increases in the charges for freight service, including switching and special services, together with the other increases herein before approved, would under present conditions result in rates not unreasonable in the aggregate under section 1 of the act and would enable the carriers in the respective groups, under honest, efficient, and economical management and reasonable expenditures for maintenance of way, structures and equipment to earn an aggregate annual railway operating income equal, as nearly as may be to a return of 5½ per cent upon the aggregate value for the purpose of this proceeding of the railway property such carriers held for and used in the service of transportation and one-half of 1 per cent in addition—eastern group 40 per cent; southern group 25 per cent; western group 35 per cent, and mountain-Pacific group 25 per cent.

Differentials Provided.

"In view of the different percentages of increase herein approved, it becomes necessary to make provision for rates between the various groups.

"1. Where rates are constructed by the use of combinations upon gateways between any two groups, the through rates should be increased by applying to each factor its respective percentage.

"2. Rates between points within a group and points on the border line of such group should be increased according to the percentage applicable to the group. Where a river constitutes the boundary line between two groups, points on both banks thereof shall be considered as border line points.

"3. Joint or single line through rates between points in one group and points in other groups should be increased 33 1-3 per cent.

"4. In cases where the rates over different routes between the same points would, by a strict application of the varying percentages of increase herein approved, be subject to different percentages, the lowest percentage applicable to any of the routes may be applied to the rates over all of such routes.

Alaska Roads Excluded.

"In the construction of rates in accordance with these findings it is not intended that the group boundaries herein before designated should be strictly observed, but the territorial boundaries heretofore recognized should be observed. For example, Richmond, one of the so-called Virginia cities, should continue on the basis it has heretofore enjoyed.

"The above findings apply to all steam railroads subject to our jurisdiction, including so-called "short lines," but not to railroads in Alaska.

"While the New England carriers are included in the eastern group and are subject to the percentage for that group, the evidence as to the disproportionate needs of the New England lines makes it desirable that the carriers give careful consideration to the divisions of joint rates accruing to these lines."

Surcharge on Sleepers.

The conclusions as to increase of passenger fares.

"1. All passenger fares and charges may be increased 20 per cent. The term "passenger fares" may be considered to include standard local or interline fares; excursion, convention, and other fares for special occasions, commutation and other multiple forms of tickets; extra fares on limited trains club car charges.

"2. Excess baggage rates may be increased 20 per cent, provided that where stated as a percentage or dependent upon passenger fares the increase in the latter will automatically effect the increase in the excess baggage charges.

"3. A surcharge upon passengers in sleeping and parlor cars may be made amounting to 50 per cent of the charge for space in such cars, such charge to be collected in connection with the charge for space, and to accrue to the rail carriers.

"4. Milk and cream are usually carried in passenger trains, and the revenue therefrom is not included in freight revenues. Rates on these commodities may be increased 20 per cent."

In regard to increases allowed in charges for switching and special services the commission says:

"The carriers' original petition asked for percentage increases in freight revenue only. In their report to us revenue from switching and certain other special services is stated separately from freight revenue, and therefore, accepted literally, the proposal would result in no increases on switching service. However, it is conceded that the submission of the proposal in this form was due to a misunderstanding, and it is now proposed to apply increases to switching and other special services as well as to freight rates proper.

Switching Charges Go Up.

"No substantial reasons have been developed for exempting charges for switching from the general increases. It is our opinion that the charges for this service should be increased, together with the charges for transit, weighing diversion, reconsignment, lighterage, floatage, storage [not including track storage], and transfer, where the carriers provide separate charges against shippers for such services.

"The charges for other special services are not to be subject to the general increases herein authorized. The percentage to apply should be determined by the percentage applicable in the group where the service is performed, except that at points on the boundary line between two groups taking different percentages the higher percentage should apply.

"It should be understood that where tariffs now provide for the absorption by one carrier of the charges of another carrier in specific amounts such absorptions should be revised in harmony with the increases in charges herein authorized."

The commission devotes considerable space to a discussion of the plea of Chicago interests not to increase the Chicago differential over St. Louis.

"It is generally understood,' says the report,"that on traffic to and from western trunk line territory and the southwest Chicago enjoyed for years a 'differential' of 20 cents, first class, over St. Louis. This was thought to be a fixed, recognized, long standing difference, and well entitled to bear the title 'differential.' Under general order No. 28 it was increased to 25 cents.

History of "Differential."

"We are now asked on behalf of certain Chicago interests not to increase this differential. In this connection it is interesting to note that on traffic to and from the east the St. Louis rates are made uniformly 117 per cent of the Chicago rates, so that under any general increase in rates the spread between the St. Louis rates and the Chicago rates is automatically widened.

"In 1914 the first class rate from New York to St. Louis was 13 cents higher than to Chicago. The difference is now 19 cents, although the percentage relationship is the same now as it was in 1914.

"There is apparently no more justification for maintaining Chicago's differential over St. Louis on traffic to the west than for maintaining the differential of St. Louis over Chicago on traffic from the east. Practically all rates in official classification territory are constructed upon a percentage basis, and attention is directed to the important fact that not a single interest has here maintained, with the possible exception of Chicago, that we should depart generally from the percentage basis which has so long prevailed.

The Case for "Differentials."

"In favor of maintaining differentials, it is said that they have been fixed in most cases after careful investigation and that they represent the proper measure of differences in the rates; that often they represent the maximum differences which will permit more distant shippers to compete with those in close proximity; that to increase rates by a percentage tends to decrease the radius in which goods are marketed, and thus by lessening competition prices are advanced; and that in all cases the margin of profit has not increased proportionately to prices.

"Those who oppose maintaining differentials at this time contend that the value of the dollar, expressed in terms of commodities shipped today, is in reality but one-half its former value, and, therefore, a differential which was fixed at a given amount several years ago should, to have the same economic effect, be greater today; that there have been general increases in the prices of practically all commodities, in wages and in charges for nearly all services, and that differentials should not be made an exception to the rule; and that, as increased operating costs are the underlying reason for the proposed increased rates, the additional service represented by the differential, being more expensive than heretofore, should pay greater rates, as well as other services.

Reliable Statistics Lacking.

"The adoption of specific increases in cents per unit, instead of percentage advances, will, of course, maintain existing relationships. However, the carriers almost uniformly oppose this method, and it is not generally advocated by shippers.

"Further, the difficulty of its adoption is apparent, because of the lack of reliable statistics from which to determine the probable additional revenue from a given increase.

"It should also be noted that every one who advocated this method insisted that flat increases be applied but once to combination rates. The complicated nature of tariff publication to make such an arrangement effective, when different percentages of increase are being made in different groups, is apparent.

"Without attempting to pass finally upon the question whether in given cases differentials should or should not be maintained, it is evident that no general program of maintaining differentials can be made effective coincident with the increases here approved without materially delaying their effective date, as definite testimony covering individual situations is before us in only a very few cases.

Conclusion Without Prejudice.

"To maintain differentials by applying the percentage increases to basing rates and adding thereto existing differentials cannot be done without materially lessening the amount of additional revenue to be derived by the carriers, as generally differentials are added to rather than deducted from base rates.

"After carefully considering the situation we find that with the exceptions hereinafter noted general percentage increases made to fit the needs of the groups of lines serving each of the four groups must be considered for present purposes the most practicable. This conclusion is without prejudice to any subsequent finding in individual situations."

Water Lines Get Raise.

Coastwise steamship lines were authorized to increase their freight rates "to the same extent as herein granted the railroads operating between the same points or in the same territory." The commission ruled that in construction of rail and lake rates the present parity between Chicago and Duluth should be maintained.

The commission also gave electric railway lines permission to increase their freight rates by the same percentage as were approved for trunk lines in the same territory. The commission added that this was "not to be construed as an expression of disapproval of increases, made or proposed in the regular manner, in the passenger fares of electric lines."

The Greek government has decorated Dr. Blanche Norton of Eldon, Ia., for her services at Kerrasuside, Anatolia, in treating the eyes of Greek orphans. She herself contracted the disease of trachoma during her service and is being treated at Constantinople. This honor to Dr. Norton is the first of its kind to be given a woman.

FOREIGN NEWS —IN BRIEF—

LONDON.—More troops have been rushed to Ireland on report of new clashes between Sinn Feiners and soldiers. At Upper Church British police terrorized the village with bombs and hand grenades, finally applying torches and burning it up.

MEXICO CITY.—The oil companies have deposited with the treasury department about 4,000,000 pesos to cover the export taxes for the May and June period. The amount is based on the low valuation prevailing before Luis Cabrera arbitarily raised the tariff.

SHANGHAI.—Thomas R. Jernigan, former American consul, praises United States plans for big merchant marine to handle Pacific trade.

CALCUTTA.—The Khilafat committee governing the actions of agitators throughout Italy issues manifesto against purchase of British goods.

PARIS.—Stores for women's hats are only shops which weather soviet storm in Moscow. Open markets frequently raided by authorities.

NATIONAL CAMPAIGN —IN BRIEF—

Marion, O.—Senator Harding makes first front porch speech to two county delegations. Appeals for return to old time United States ideals of citizenship.

Dayton, O.—Gov. Cox sends all of his acceptance speech to the printers with the exception of a section which he withholds until Aug. 7, the day of the address.

RATE ADVANCE TOO LIGHT, RAIL EXPERT AVERS

S. O. Dunn Says Roads Needed More.

The increases in rail rates granted yesterday by the interstate commerce commission are insufficient, in the view of Samuel O. Dunn, editor of Railway Age and authority on rail matters in the United States.

According to Mr. Dunn, who was interviewed last night, the approximate increase of $1,500,000,000, or 31 per cent, merely is a temporary stay from ruin and is likely to put the railroads back approximately to the same state as they were in three or four years ago.

Roads Should Do Best.

Although he does not think the increase is sufficient, Mr. Dunn points out that the railroads should take hold and do their best to make the award pull them through.

"The grant is not so good and not so bad," Mr. Dunn said. "I will admit, though, that I was rather disappointed when I heard the decision of the commission. In making their request for increases which would bring to them additional revenue to the amount of $1,645,000,000 the roads figured closely. There is much to be done besides the payment of the recent wage awards to bring rail conditions back to what they ought to be.

Would Await Results.

"I would advise the railroads, however, to accept the award in good faith and see what they can do under the terms of the award. Time will tell.

"We ought to be able to determine before the rates have been in effect very long just how far they will carry the railroads."

EASTERN OFFICIALS PLEASED.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 31.—[Special.]—High railroad officials agreed the decision of the interstate commerce commission, granting $1,500,000,000 rate raise, was "favorable."

Samuel P. Rea, president of the Pennsylvania railroad system, was reached by telephone at his home in Bryn Mawr.

"At first glance," he said, "it looks as if the interstate commerce commission had taken a very broad view of the situation, and had tried to do everything it could to help out the railroads."

Agnew T. Rice, president of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, said:

"The interstate commerce commission is to be commended for its prompt constructive action. This must mean a restoration of credit to the railroads and will enable them to provide equipment and other facilities properly to handle the business of the country and undoubtedly will lead to further great industrial development."

Esch Awaits Results.

La Crosse, Wis., July 31.—Representative J. J. Esch, co-author of the transportation act under which the interstate commerce commission today awarded the railroads increased freight and passenger rates, tonight "reserved judgment" on the awards until he had time to study them thoroughly. On first consideration, he said, the rates apparently were "equitable."

"The rates should have been increased under the period of federal control," Esch said, "instead of running the roads at a tremendous daily loss."

"Award Satisfactory."

St. Paul, Minn., July 31.—"The rate increases allowed by the interstate commerce commission appear to be satisfactory," said J. M. Hannaford, president of the Northern Pacific, tonight.

WEST FEARS JAP INVASION; ASKS BARRIER

Wants Laws to Keep the Asiatics Out.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 31.—[Special.]—The Pacific coast again is becoming highly wrought up over the silent, steady penetration of that section of the country by the Japanese, and intends to press remedial measures at the next session of congress. The house committee on immigration has been investigating the situation, holding hearings in California and visiting the Japanese settlements, in preparation for action on various pending bills ranging all the way from outright exclusion of Japanese to amendment of the constitution, witholding American citizenship from American born Japanese.

Senator Phelan of California sees Japan reaching out for domination of the Pacific, and professes great fear that unless Japan is halted the United States will be worsted by the oriental power, not only in trade, but in war.

Our Civilization at Stake.

"Unless we take to heart the lessons of history," says Senator Phelan, "we will, by our lack of vigilance, permit a foothold to be gained by these people which will ultimately not only defeat us commercially in the carrying trade, as they are fast doing, but militarily in the next world war. Our civilization is at stake."

The fears of the Japanese mailed fist which Senator Phelan professes to entertain have not, however, caused him to espouse the cause of American preparedness for war. When the army reorganization bill was before the senate at the last session he was not numbered among the advocates of universal military training. On the great issue of preparedness he was silent throughout the debate.

Race and Economic Problem.

When it comes to depicting the dangers of Japanese aggression upon American civilization Senator Phelan is unequaled.

"A Japanese colony under the American flag is not compatible with the growth of an American state," says Senator Phelan. "The soil of California is being absorbed by the Japanese and legislation, state and federal, is now being evoked to stem the yellow tide. It is a race as well as an economic problem.

"California refuses submissively to permit its native population to be driven off the soil. If these people want California let them take it, not stealthily, by this process of economic penetration, but let them fight for it. California, unfortunately, is just as much their tributary territory today under our generous laws as though they had conquered it by the power of arms.

Owe Allegiance to Mikado.

"The Japanese government, not unlike the former government of the kaiser, looks after its nationals throughout the world, making them tributary to the home land and to the home government, not only in matters of money, but in military and naval organization. It can call on them wherever they are. They are not released from allegiance. Emperor worship—Shintoism—is their creed.

"In the Pacific a great empire is dawning, which, unless we are watchful, will some day dominate not only Asia but North and South America as well, for it seems to me that in the history of nations the older ones have sooner or later fallen, while the young have risen.

Gentlemen's Agreement Worthless.

"'The 'gentlemen's agreement' of 1907 is the means by which we are now, and have been since 1907, trying to keep out the tide, but the tide has not been kept out. In 1908 there were 9,544 arrivals, in 1918 there were 11,143 arrivals, although the 'gentlemen's agreement' is supposed to operate so as to exclude all except diplomatists, merchants, and legitimate students—noniaborers.

"The point about the 'gentlemen's agreement' is this: In the absence of an exclusion law, a measure which I have proposed and which is now pending in committee, the Japanese emperor may, any day, by revoking his agreement, open wide the doors to an influx which would overwhelm our western states. Hawaii is submerged now. The governor of the territory of Hawaii, recently testifying before congressional committees, says that there are 120,000 Japanese in Hawaii who have come there within the last fifteen years, and there are 12,000 Americans, and in less than ten to fourteen years the whites and Hawaiians will be outvoted and the Japanese will control the territorial legislature and fill the municipal offices.

"So without striking a blow the Japanese will govern an American territory which is supposed to be the strategic key of the Pacific.

HER HERO

Corporal Who Saved Boy from Death in Rhine and Girl He Left Behind.

If Henry S. Hughes, whose parents live at 17 West Sixtieth street, had kept a diary of the days of real sport the most oft repeated entry would have read something like this:

"Got a licking today for going swimming."

"Yes," mused Henry Hughes Sr. last night, "we just couldn't keep that boy out of the lake. He'd slip away and go swimming at Fifty-first street every chance he got."

CORP. HENRY S. HUGHES.

And then the corporal's father, with much pride, displayed a letter bearing an army of occupation postmark, a letter that he prized more highly even than another recent one telling him that Henry Jr. had been promoted to a corporal in headquarters company of the 13th replacement unit, stationed at Coblenz, Germany. It told how Henry had saved a boy from drowning in the swift current of the Rhine on July 1.

JOSEPHINE JEROSEK.

The boy had been caught in the eddy when Henry plunged in and swam to his side. The boy fought. A desperate battle was in progress and the fate of both was still in doubt when an army crew, practicing for the Fourth of July regatta, swept down the stream and dragged them both into the boat.

And bending over the father's shoulder, reading the details with glistening eyes, was Miss Josephine Jerosek of Arlington Heights. She's waiting for Henry to come marching home and keep his promise.

POLICE NAB "MAN WITH RECORD" IN $5,000 GEM THEFT

Wishing to avoid what she describes as newspaper notoriety, Mrs. Frank Cordon of the Surf apartment hotel, made no report of a $5,000 jewel robbery for ten days. During the period she employed private detectives, but they were unsuccessful.

It was soon after July 17 that the jewelry—two brooches, two diamond rings, and a pearl rope—disappeared from her apartment. Last Wednesday morning she notified the Sheffield avenue station. Three hours later Detective Sergeants John Buckley and Robert Gibbons arrested John Rosen, 4705 Lake Park avenue, a porter at the hotel. They say he has a record, and has worked at other hotels where jewelry has disappeared.

Rosen will be arraigned Tuesday in Judge Hugh R. Hazen's court, on a charge of grand larceny. No trace of the jewelry was found. Rosen disclaims knowledge of the theft.

Gun Cleaning Accident Fatal to Young Woman

Mrs. Mary Zeman, 22 years old, 1823 Larrabee street, died yesterday in the Grant hospital as the result of a gunshot wound received last Tuesday at her home. Joseph Menzl, a roomer in the Zeman home, was cleaning a revolver, he told the police, when it accidentally was discharged, the bullet striking Mrs. Zeman. Menzl is held at the North Halsted street station pending the result of an inquest tomorrow.

MITTEN REFUSES SAVINGS FUND OF CAR EMPLOYES

Tells Men He Cannot Accept Generous Offer.

Philadelphia, Pa., July 31.—[Special.]—Thomas E. Mitten, president of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company, today informed the 11,000 employés of the company, who yesterday offered to lend to the company the entire fund of their coöperative welfare association, that the company could not accept the offer.

Mr. Mitten told the men that the savings fund was their own and that it was not to be considered in any sense a P. R. T. fund.

The employés of the company had offered to lend not only their $500,000 association fund but also to lend their future savings, which at the present time amount to $1,000,000 a year.

The offer was made simultaneously with their offer to forego collecting the increase in wages, automatically due them at this time, until Mr. Mitten had found sufficient financial backing to go through with his fight against the financial interests represented by Mr. Stotesbury, Horatio G. Lloyd, and C. S. W. Packard.

The men agreed that they would forego their increases until the money could be spared and then they would take it in a lump sum.

Dr. A. A. Mitten, son of the company's president and secretary of the coöperative welfare association of the transit company, said today that his father was affected deeply by the action of the men because of the great confidence shown.

LEAGUE DEBATES MAKING TRAVEL SAFE IN EUROPE

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, July 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Making all of Europe safe for travelers was one of the problems before the council of the league of nations at its first session here today, presided over by Count Quinones de Leon, the Spanish ambassador to France.

The ambassadors' council cited many complaints, comprising a wide range of grievances, such as extortionate prices, difficulties with passport visés, and the confiscation of watches, jewelry, and other personal property at the frontiers of new countries in central Europe. A case of detention of travelers, even confinement, during the exercising of formalities, was mentioned.

Crossing Europe, it was pointed out, travelers are obliged to buy new tickets and register their baggage anew at each frontier, losing money on the exchange.

Representatives of all countries, it was decided, will be brought together at the end of October and asked to harmonize their regulations with the necessities of travel.

Application of decrees prohibiting exportation of money from different European countries was also considered by the councillors. Another question was the payment of the expenses of the Sarre basin boundary commission.

CHICAGO FIRST WITH OPEN AIR "AUTO CHURCH"

This will be Gasoline Sunday at the Third Presbyterian church, South Ashland boulevard and Ogden avenue. A general invitation has been extended to all automobile owners to attend. Flivver drivers have also been invited.

The automobile church services, said to be the first held in Chicago, will begin at 7:30 p. m. south of the church in Arcade court, which will be closed to general traffic during the services.

"August for years has been considered the 'dead month' of the year for city churches," explained C. A. Stone, one of the elders. "Our desire is to overcome that by having a pleasant, profitable, and inspiring twilight hour of worship, where people can enjoy God's out of doors and at the same time sing the old hymns, hear the scriptures read, and obtain practical religious ideas.

"Of course, the services are not exclusively for automobilists. We welcome all, the rich and the poor, afoot or on motorcycle. We have provided seats for pedestrians. There is parking space for more than 100 cars. Motorists may sit in their cars and enjoy the services."

William F. McDermott will deliver the sermon. His theme will be "Religion in Business."

War Hero Opens Fire on Street Car; Fined $10

Harry Scott, 28 years old, 10527 May street, was fined $10 and costs yesterday because he broke windows in a street car, following his discharge as a conductor. Scott was formerly a lieutenant in the marine corps in France and won the Distinguished Service Cross and the Congressional Medal.

Four Persons Killed as Train Hits Automobile

LIMA, O., July 31.—Four persons were killed at noon today when a fast train on the Pennsylvania railroad struck an automobile at a crossing near Lafayette. The dead are: Samuel Aisyre and two members of his family, and Alice Herr of Ada.

LEWIS DIRECTS MINERS TO END STRIKE AT ONCE

75,000 Will Return to Work Monday.

The coal strike is ended. The strikers, under orders from both John L. Lewis, international president of the miners' union, and Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois branch, will resume work Monday.

President Lewis from Indianapolis issued his order, direct to the officials of local unions early today. This done he sent a message to Farrington, at Springfield, informing him that the order had been issued and that he expected the state president to coöperate in seeing that it was obeyed.

Before nightfall Farrington's order for the ending of the strike within his jurisdiction was going over the telegraph wires.

President Lewis, in his order, stated that it was issued "in consideration of the request of President Wilson, that the strike be ended." Mr. Wilson's request was transmitted to Lewis from the White House Saturday night.

Victory for Miners.

Farrington, in sending out his order, stated that the "miners had won a victory in that the scale committees would be called together and would remove the inequities of the present wage scale."

The order of Farrington, supporting that of Lewis, removes any possibility that coal production may be handicapped by a series of "outlaw" strikes in Illinois, according to leading operators.

It was pointed out at the same time that the public is yet to get "kicked by the backfire of the strike."

Coal Shortage Coming.

Any coal shortage felt up to Saturday, coal men said, was the result of the prevalent transportation inefficiency. The effect of the strike itself has not yet hit Chicago, it was pointed out, inasmuch as from ten to fifteen days are required to move coal from the mines to the Chicago district. Consequently up to yesterday, it was said, coal was rolling into Chicago in as great quantity as before the strike.

Beginning this week coal and railroad men declared—with the last of the ante strike coal rolling in—the shortage will pinch until the miners have "caught up" for the period of idleness.

Fuel Reserves Low.

Washington, D. C., July 31.—[Special.]—Stocks of coal held by the railroads, industrial consumers, public utilities and retail dealers are less than at any time during the last four years, according to a canvass just completed by the geological survey. The estimates made by the survey show total stocks held by consumers amounted to only 20,000,000 tons on June 1, or only about half the amount on hand in the spring of 1919 and the early summer of 1918.

A constant increase in the exports of coal is shown in the weekly figures of the geological survey. Dumpings of bituminous coal at tidewater during the week ended July 24 totaled 25,690 cars for export. This is 2,890 cars more than the weekly average for June, when all records were broken.

The National Coal association in a statement declared that more than 80 pe rcent of the bituminous coal of the country has been moved from the mines at low prices. It blames speculators for high prices to the ultimate consumer.

150 Boys Quit Camp Roosevelt for Home

Muskegon, Mich., July 31.—[Special.]—Camp Roosevelt was quiet today. It marks the end of the first half and the return of 150 boys to Chicago. About the same number will arrive here tomorrow, coming by special boat from Chicago.

The boys left at camp were given a holiday. They were praised for their work before Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood and the members of his staff here yesterday.

Col. Frank J. Morrow, chief of the R. O. T. C. camps, who has been here for ten days, left for Washington this afternoon. Four officers in charge of R. O. T. C. units are here for observation and study. More are expected Monday.

Cook County Campers Warned of Fire Menace

Warning to the people of Cook county to be careful in making fires in the woods, was sent broadcast yesterday by Ransom Kennicott, chief forester.

"We are in great danger of losing our splendid forests through fires," the warning says. "We call on the public to assist us not only by exercising extreme care with their own fires, but also to extinguish fires started by other people."

THE TRIBUNE of yesterday morning in its editorial columns, urged Chicago citizens to care for the trees.

350 Suits Filed in One Day Break Court Record

More suits were filed yesterday in the Cook county Superior and Circuit courts than were ever filed previously in a single day, according to court attachés. It is declared that the more than 350 suits filed yesterday more than doubles the customary number. The surprising court activity was due to the fact that Saturday was the last day for the filing of suits to be heard in the September term of court.

FREAKISH TWISTS IN THE LOFTIS TRAGEDY

This photograph of Miss Ruth Woods, who was with Loftis when he died, was taken immediately after her weird ride with Wexler, the chauffeur. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Edward "Pegleg" Kay on Saturday was undistinguished except in the coterie of those who loitered in Aian's place. Last night he fell into the police net and became the figure in a tragedy.

When Loftis dropped dead Emil Aian was unknown save as the proprietor of a west side saloon. A few hours later he, too, was jerked into the maze because Miss Woods had become, by the merest chance, a patron of his place.

This is a photo-diagram showing a portion of the Loftis apartment at 5630 Kenmore avenue, the star indicating where Sam Loftis fell dead when Roy Shayne entered the door shown in the background.

Mrs. Wexler, wife of the chauffeur. On Saturday she was as good as a thousand miles from the Loftis apartment. Yesterday a freak of fate snatched her into the tragedy of Loftis' death when the police questioned her.

Herman Wexler, totally unaware of the tragedy, was catapulted into it when he took Miss Woods as a passenger on a rambling drive through the west side. He landed in custody of the police.

LOFTIS' DEATH DUE TO APOPLEXY, SAYS CORONER

Mystery Fades as the Clews Fail.

up in front of a drug store near the Loftis flat. A man was with her when he found her, he said.

They left the gardens and went to a saloon near Thirty-fifth and Halsted streets, Wexler admitted. Later they toured the boulevards on the south and west sides and drove down to a prairie in South Cicero, where all three alighted.

Retrace Taxicab Ride.

With Sergeants John Norton, William Dunne and John Hardy, Miss Woods and Chauffeur Wexler were taken over their route of the night before.

They first went along Wilson avenue to Lincoln street. The party then drove to Ahern's saloon at Kedzie avenue and Congress street. Wexler had claimed that Miss Woods had alighted there and drank a highball. She denied it. Then came a tour throughout the west side dives—with no remembrance on the part of Miss Woods as to her presence there the night before. Nothing had been gained when the tourists came back to the station.

Saloonman Identifies Wexler.

Last night, however, light was thrown upon the trip in the taxicab. Detectives had received a tip that in a saloon at California avenue and Taylor street would be found men who had seen the pair. The place was raided.

Emil Aian, proprietor, was among those captured. Yes, he admitted, he knew Wexler well. Wexler had come into his place the night before with a girl. Was that Ruth Woods? He looked at her and shook his head affirmatively. Yes—she was the girl. There was a trio sitting in the back room—two girls and a man. The man was Edward "Peg Leg" Kay, well known west side character.

Wexler had asked if he and the girl might join the party. Kay spoke up, inviting them. The girl and the chauffeur walked to the table, Alan said, and sat down. Kay ordered drinks and cigarets. The girl drank grape juice. Then she smoked—not one but many of the "coffin nails." And where might Kay be found? At Twelfth and California?

The police walked into a tiny eating place there twenty minutes later. A short, stout man, with one leg missing, was leaning with his crutch against the counter. "Peg Leg Kay?" he said. "Why, sure, I'm him." "Come on," said Sergt. Tony Gentile, shortly. "Where's your coat?"

"Peg Leg" Tells His Story.

In the waiting car outside a TRIBUNE man heard "Peg Leg" tell his story.

"I was sitting in the saloon with a couple of women—I know them well—when Wexler came in with this girl," he said. "I noticed she was all excited. He spoke to Alan, who was at the bar, and I invited them over to join my party. No, there was no other man besides Wexler there. They came over to the table and sat down. After drinks had been served I turned and spoke to the girl who had been quiet, and said: 'Cheer up! What's the matter? Why, you look as though you had lost your best friend!'"

"Can you imagine that? She just looked at me, but didn't say anything. And a little while later she and Wexler got up and walked out."

So, one by one, came characters from all parts of the city to join the strange collection that made part of this dramatic story.

Chauffeur's Brother Freed.

The next one was Max Wexler, brother of the chauffeur. Max declared he was waiting on table at a restaurant on West Twelfth street all Friday evening. His tale, investigated, was found a true one. So he was freed. A moment later Aian and "Peg Leg" went back to their districts to tell the story to all their friends.

Two women, one with a tiny baby, came haltingly into the Hudson avenue station. "I'm Mrs. Herman Wexler—he's held here on the Loftis case," she proffered timidly to the burly sergeant. A moment later she was talking freely.

"We have a baby, Bennett," she said. "He's just a year and one month old. My Herman? Why, he's always been a model husband. He came home every night and always he was sober. I never knew him to be a drinker—for he always worked too hard to drink. And each week, too, he brought me all his money. He is a good man.

Doubts Other Woman's Story.

"This other woman? I don't believe it. My Herman doesn't do such things. He might have been hired by her for this trip, but he doesn't rob or steal, nor does he take strange women out on prairies. If I thought that—" she paused and wiped her eyes.

Then Wexler's brother Louis was brought in. He, too, denied any part in the affair. His ignorance was conclusive; he was turned loose.

Crowds Watch Police Work.

Outside the station the street was black with people. A score of automobiles had silently arrived to join the throng. Each new movement of taxi, of patrol wagon, was the signal for a stampede. Boys, some not in their teens, scrambled up on barrels to peer into the windows. As each new development occurred they shouted down their news to those below.

Then came another man. His name was Emil Wagner. He, too, had been in the saloon on Taylor street. His story jibed with that of Aian's. He was playing cards, he said, when Wexler entered. Miss Woods was with the chauffeur and there was no other man. And Wagner, too, was turned loose.

"Lured Girls to House."

Miss Hulda Johnson, housekeeper to Samuel Loftis, told more details of the life within the mystery flat yesterday.

"They did not know, these girls he lured into his home, just what he was," she said. "And I, his housekeeper, could not warn them. When he was sober he was all right, but when he was drinking—disgusting! I'm glad it's over.

"He was so strong when he was drunk. He'd lock the doors and then the girls that he'd brought in——

"I think Miss Woods was lured that way. And that Shayne, finding out, came to the house. The two men maybe quarreled, came to blows. Then Loftis, weakened from his long bouts with alcohol, fell and died. It wasn't murder."

Awakened by Revelry.

"I sleep in a room at the rear of the apartment and many times I have been awakened at 2, 3, or 4 o'clock in the morning by shouting, cursing, the breaking of glasses, and other sounds of fighting and of revelry.

"One of these parties occurred Sunday morning. Loftis had been drinking steadily for the last two weeks. I had seen him walking out on Sheridan road with a strange man. And when I came back from church the house was in a mess. Glasses were broken and whisky spilled around the place. I think this man was Shayne."

Mother Aids Miss Woods.

From Miss Woods' mother yesterday the police gained a verification of Shayne's story. Shayne was at her house when Miss Woods phoned.

"Mother," the girl had said, "something bad has happened. Where can I find Roy?"

Then, as Shayne took the receiver and listened for a moment, he said: "All right, sweetheart, don't worry. I'll be right there."

Shayne left the house, shouting to her: "Ruth is at Loftis' house. They have been drinking and something awful bad has happened."

The minutes later Shayne phoned the coroner, telling him of Loftis' death.

"Cannot Prove Murder."

And so, while little clews from every corner of the city bade fair to throw some light upon the case, no real solution came.

Sergt. Norton of the homicide squad last night said:

"Loftis is dead. We think he died by accident, maybe by a fall. Or perhaps it was a scuffle. In neither case can murder be proved.

"If Shayne did knock him down and Loftis died from apoplexy just after he had attacked the girl, Shayne would be justified. If he died in a scuffle with Miss Woods she would not be culpable—for no jury would convict her.

Case Turns on Jewels.

"The whole question seemingly lies in the jewels. Why did she take them—and how did she get them? Did he give them to her? If so, for what? If she stole them, why?

"Were his jewels in his pajama pockets? Or were they in his room? If they were in his room, did she 'frisk' the room? She had no money when she was brought home. Did she have any when she left the Loftis house? If so, did Wexler get it?

"All these questions and many more must be answered before we give this case up conclusively. But Shayne doesn't figure now. It is up to Wexler and the girl. When their true stories are found out the case is solved. They will be held."

The police also planned to question Mrs. Josephine M. Hassel, Loftis' secretary, who lived at his apartment until last Wednesday. A letter from her to Loftis was found in the merchant's pocket. Miss Johnson, the housekeeper, told the coroner that a stronger tie existed between Mrs. Hassel and Loftis than that of the management of his business affairs. She had used her influence to prevent him from drinking, Miss Johnson said, and had left when he went on his last extended spree.

Mrs. Hassel appeared at the apartment Friday night when she learned of Loftis' death. In her grief she hysterically blamed Miss Woods for his death.

Funeral Not Arranged.

No arrangements for the funeral of Mr. Loftis have been made as yet. The body is at the undertaking establishment of Sam Piser, 4936 Broadway, but no member of the family has communicated with him. The body is being prepared for burial under instructions from employés of the Loftis concern, and will be held pending the arrival of a brother, J. Clifford Loftis, from California.

"Loftis Bros. is a corporation, and business will continue as usual beginning Monday morning," Mrs. Hassell said yesterday. "There is nothing in the death of Mr. Loftis that will affect the active conduct of the business. I am not at liberty to make public the names of the incorporators at this time."

She stated that she would remain the active business head until the incorporators made some other decision.

COTTON BROKER OWING $2,000,000 HALED TO COURT

Macon, Ga., July 31.—[Special.]—Richard F. Willingham's financial difficulties, in which more than $2,000,000 are involved as liabilities, with assets yet to be estimated, reached the federal court this afternoon when three petitions of involuntary bankruptcy were filed against the R. F. Willingham corporation, a half million dollar canning concern, established only a few months ago on the site of old Camp Wheeler.

Creditors extend all the way from New York to New Orleans. Willingham makes no denial of a report that 5,000 bales of cotton warehouse receipts which had been floated in various banks of the country had nothing back of them more than linters and in some cases no cotton at all.

These receipts reached the federal reserve bank in Atlanta, it was reported, and because of the magnitude of the transaction the bank started an investigation that ultimately led to the facts of his operations.

POSTAL MEN ASK WILSON TO HALT BURLESON EDICT

Clerks' Union Chiefs Try to Avert Tieup.

Pierce E. Butler, president of the Postoffice Clerks' union, announced last night that President Wilson would be appealed to personally to rescind the charges filed by Postmaster General Burleson against the eleven employés of the Chicago postoffice. The men are accused of "pernicious political activities" in pressing the demands of the postal workers for a living wage.

A conference of the executive committee of the clerks' union will be held at the Atlantic hotel at 10 o'clock this morning. Two representatives will be selected to accompany President Butler to Washington to see President Wilson. The delegation will leave tonight.

After the conference with President Wilson appeals will be made to Senator Warren G. Harding and Gov. James Cox, Republican and Democratic candidates for president. They will be asked to put themselves on record as against the "Burleson gag rule tactics."

Will Not Ask Walkout.

Mr. Butler said that regardless of the action of the Washington authorities no attempt would be made to influence the 4,000 members of the clerks' union to walk out or resign. Such action would tie up the Chicago postoffice.

Nevertheless the postoffice teemed with talk of general resignations if the eleven men under charges are dismissed.

"I can't say just what action will be taken," one of the clerks said, "but I do not believe the membership of the union will stand for the summary dismissal of the union officials."

Prepare Reply to Burleson.

An answer to the charges of the postmaster general will be prepared today by the eleven employés ordered to show cause why they should not be dismissed. They are accused of soliciting money to influence congress to increase postal employés' wages; using Chicago and Washington newspapers to advertise concerning the unbearable working and living conditions in the Chicago postoffice, and their objection to equipment and conditions which, the clerks say, would not be tolerated in any office of a privately owned institution.

James E. Stuart, chief postoffice inspector, said Mr. Burleson's order had been contemplated for some time. Orders were given to his inspectors to obtain evidence against the postal clerks' union several weeks ago, he added.

"A Chance to Explain."

"The government is giving the men a chance to explain why they took the action for which they were censured," he continued. "What further action will be taken I cannot say. As far as all the postal employés are concerned I do not believe they will resign in a body."

Herbert Hoover Quits the Armenian Commission

New York, July 31.—[Special.]—Following the resignation of Col. William N. Haskell, U. S. A., as allied high commissioner to Armenia Aug. 1, Herbert Hoover announced his withdrawal from the same commission today. The commission's work has been completed.

MILK JUMPS 1C; FINAL RAISE OF 1920, IS CLAIM

Dealers Say Peak of Price Is Reached.

Chicago milk dealers signed contracts at an executive session in the Hotel La Salle yesterday between their organization and the Milk Producers' Coöperative association to pay $3.70 per 100 pounds for the next three months. This is an increase of 50 cents per 100 pounds over the July price.

Although no official announcement was made, it is understood that the dealers will notify their patrons this morning or tomorrow of a retail increase of 1 cent per quart.

Final Raise for 1920.

It was agreed in the conference that there will be no further increases during 1920 either to dealers or consumers. However, decreases may come before the end of the year, it was pointed out.

"Both sides feel that conditions throughout the country will be stabilized soon," said W. J. Kittle, secretary of the producers' organization. "They are already in such a position that we were able to sell our product for a period of three months for the first time since 1917.

Cost More Last Year.

"Although the price is higher, the rise from July into August this year is not as high as the same time last year. The increase last year was 52 cents, while this year it is 2 cents lower. Then again, the price was increased 3 cents in September, and then 10 cents more per 100 pounds in October."

The producers' committee was headed by J. H. Love. Among those who represented the dealers were F. K. Kuhlman of the Bowman Dairy company and Harry Reeser of the Borden company. Representatives of condensed milk interests were also present.

7,330 at Northwestern; 4,427 Students Are Men

There were 7,330 students at the allied schools of Northwestern university last year, of whom 4,427 were men and 2,903 women, according to the annual catalogue issued yesterday. A total of 508 students—308 men and 200 women—received diplomas. The nine schools were lead by the school of liberal arts in Evanston, where 1,909 students registered. The catalogue names 608 members of the faculty.

Slapping His Girl's Face Brings Him $200 Fine

"No gentleman," said Judge Hayes, "ever pushes a woman in the face. It isn't being done any more. Never think evil of a woman; $200 and costs."

The judge was speaking to Marvin Olson of 5921 South Sangamon street. Olson's former sweetheart, Emma Andrasco, 18, 859 West Eighty-sixth street, had caused his arrest, charging he had slapped her.

POLICE SPREAD TERROR IN ERIN; BURN UP TOWN

Use Hand Grenades on Citizens.

LONDON, July 31.—More British troops were rushed into Ireland today, as new reports of fighting between Sinn Feiners and British government forces were received here.

The worst outbreak of the day, according to dispatches this evening, occurred in the village of Upper Church this morning, where the police were the aggressors. The constabulary sought to terrorize the inhabitants of the town by bomb throwing.

Torch Is Applied.

Dispatches received here told how the police rushed through the streets, amid grenade explosions, while the people fled. The torch was applied to several buildings, and fire swept over part of the hamlet, reducing a number of houses to smoking ruins.

Meanwhile Premier Lloyd George was planning to push through parliament with all possible speed the new measure authorizing more drastic measures to suppress the guerilla warfare which exists in Ireland.

Troops Use Lorries.

With railway trains standing idle on the tracks, their crews refusing to carry soldiers, and a hostile crowd looking on, 1,000 Royal Fusileers marched ashore from a transport at Queenstown this morning, climbed into motor lorries, and were distributed to points considered menaced by the Sinn Feiners.

The transport also brought field guns, which were hauled through the streets under heavy guard for fear rebels might attempt to capture them. Other war paraphernalia was landed from the ship, which had been forced to lie over here many hours, due to delay in arrangements for landing the men and munitions.

JAPAN TO CALL SAGHALIN ACTION ONLY TEMPORARY

TOKIO, July 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—Outlines of Japan's answer to the note of the United States relative to Japan's intention to occupy Saghalin, Siberia, are printed today by the newspapers, which report that the reply was drawn up at yesterday's cabinet meeting.

According to the newspaper accounts the answer, in pointing out Japan's policy, will say that occupation is unavoidable to maintain her national privileges and that the decision to occupy the island will not be changed.

It is reported also that the reply will again emphasize that Japan has no territorial ambitions and that the occupation would be only temporary until a stable government was established in Russia.

FORMER CHICAGO MAN GETS ITALIAN WAR DECORATION

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920.]

ROME, July 30.—[Delayed.]—The decoration of Commander of the Order of the Crown of Italy has been conferred on James Ellsworth of New York in recognition of his "active and continuous support of hospital and other work during the war."

Mr. Ellsworth is the owner of the Villa Palmieri at Florence, which he turned over to the Red Cross, and of a castle near Lucerne. He expects to return to the United States with his wife in August.

James Ellsworth formerly lived in Chicago, but he removed to New York City many years ago because of high taxes, he said. After living in the east several years he left the United States and filled his magnificent villa near Florence with an art collection. While in Chicago Mr. Ellsworth owned one of the finest collections of ancient porcelain and glass in the world.

BODIES OF ALL TUSCANIA DEAD TO BE HOME SOON

LONDON, July 31.—It is expected that by the end of this week all the bodies of American soldiers who lost their lives when the transport Tuscania sank off the Irish coast in February, 1918, will have been removed to Liverpool from the island of Islay, where they were temporarily buried, for shipment home. The victims numbered approximately 300.

Two hundred and fifty of the bodies have been brought to Liverpool by the steamer Gronigen, which was chartered for the purpose.

The Gronigen is now at Islay taking on the remaining bodies.

French Senate Adopts Spa German Coal Bill

PARIS, July 31.—The senate today adopted the bill, approved by the chamber of deputies yesterday after a frank address by Premier Millerand setting forth the urgent reasons for its adoption, authorizing the 200,000,000 franc monthly advances to Germany provided for in the government's coal arrangement reached at the Spa conference.

The vote was 321 for the bill to 81 against it.

The chamber today repassed the amended budget, but with new amendments which will necessitate its repassage by the senate.

Compulsory Military Service Ends for Teutons

LILLIAN HELD.

New York, July 31.—[Special.]—Mrs. Lillian Bachman, wife of a Manchester, N. H., cigar manufacturer, who appeared on the vaudeville stage under the name of Lillian Held, was found dead in her apartment in West Fifty-eighth street today. According to the police the apartment was filled with gas and all the windows were closed when the door was forced by a patrolman. Even the keyhole had been stuffed. The authorities believe the woman committed suicide.

CADDIES STRIKE AT ONWENTSIA; STAGE A BATTLE

A caddies' strike yesterday at the Onwentsia club caused the greensward of that exclusive retreat of Chicago millionaires to be converted into a miniature Donnybrook fair. The Lake Forest police were summoned to disperse the strikers. The board of governors had failed to accede to their demands for a 5 cent per hour increase.

And now the club is under surveillance of pickets, and members are either carrying their own golf bags or are being caddied by obliging gardeners, chauffeurs, valets, and in some instances even by maids. The strike was called yesterday morning. Sixty of the seventy-five caddies walked out.

They demand 30 cents an hour straight time. They now receive 25. They want overtime of an additional nickel, or 35 cents, after 5 p. m., and 60 cents an hour for carrying two bags. For this they now receive 40 cents.

Wallace C. Winter, president of the club, informed the strikers at noon that their demands could not be met immediately. They then staged a demonstration in front of the clubhouse. They hooted the president and the board of governors. Garfield Leaf, caddymaster, sought to quell the disturbance. He slapped Robert Spellman, according to Richard Bennes, one of the strikers, and Robert's brother, Raymond, thwacked him abaft the shoulder blades with a mashie.

There was a general melée, participated in by the nonstriking caddies and the strikers. It was ended by the arrival of the police. They tried to capture some of the strikers, but the policemen were afoot and were outdistanced. Later they tried to catch some of the pickets, but they also proved too nimble of limb.

The caddies issued an ultimatum demanding unconditional surrender of the board of governors. The board at first declared it would never submit. Frank C. Waller, chairman of the golf committee, said last night, however, that he would meet a committee of the strikers early this week and that it was hoped a compromise would be effected.

ADVANCE WORRIES PARIS

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]

PARIS, July 31.—There is the greatest apprehension in Paris diplomatic circles as a result of the continued advance of the bolsheviki toward Warsaw. The allied diplomats and military men fear that in order to turn the positions covering Warsaw the bolsheviki will invade Eastern Prussia.

If they do so two outcomes are possible. If the Germans allow the Reds to pass through it will amount to Germany breaking its neutrality and becoming a silent partner of the soviets.

If Germany refuses permission for passage and resists it can demand the allied demand for disarmament be abandoned and that Germany be permitted to raise an army to fight.

The allied diplomats are worried over the possibility of a situation which will force them to decide either to give Germany free reign against Russia or make Germany a virtual ally of Russia.

Military experts point out the reason why bolsheviks may invade East Prussia. Following a frontal attack on Warsaw, they must cross the Narew, Nurtchyk, and Bug rivers. On the bolshevik left wing no rapidly advancing attack is possible on account of the marshy Pripet region. There remains the possibility of turning the rivers by the bolshevik right wing. This movement could be most easily executed by going through East Prussia to Suwalki.

RED GAINS CONTINUE

LONDON, July 31.—Continued successes for the bolsheviki are announced in an official statement issued Friday by the Russian soviet government at Moscow and received here today by wireless. The statement says that the bolsheviki advanced to Brest-Litovsk on Thursday. The communique reads:

"Our forces have occupied Bialystok. In the direction of Bielsk [thirty miles south of Bialystok], after fierce fighting our troops forced the river Marva and are continuing to advance.

"We occupied Prushani Tuesday and advanced to Brest-Litovsk Thursday. In the direction of Kovel our troops are driving the Poles back to the river Stotskod.

"In the Crimea sector fighting continues between the river Dnieper and south of the towns of Alexandrovsk and Nogaisk."

PRUSSIA MENACED

PARIS, July 31.—[By the Associated Press.]—Bolshevik cavalry forces have advanced to the East Prussian frontier, according to a report from the French military mission in Warsaw to the French foreign office. The bolshevik line extends from Suwalki, fifty miles northwest of Grodno, more than sixty miles to a point almost directly north of Warsaw.

The bolsheviki have not actually crossed the borders of Allenstein and Marienwerder, but are fraternizing with the Germans.

The mission says it understands the Germans and bolsheviki are negotiating at Suwalki. The northern wing of the bolshevik army now is menacing Warsaw directly from the north as well as from the east. The bolsheviki now are twenty-five miles southwest of Bialystok.

BERLIN ASKS ACTION

BERLIN, July 31.—The allied troops in the plebiscite area, according to a semi-official communication, have been withdrawn from the frontier. Polish detachments which have crossed into Germany have been disarmed by the security police.

In view of the increasing difficulty of the situation, the government has asked the president of the peace conference in Paris to reply to its recent note seeking permission for Germany to take necessary measures to maintain neutrality on the eastern frontier, as the forces there now are not sufficient for protection.

The military authorities in the frontier region have been instructed to act as circumstances warrant.

He was chief draftsman for the Chicago Telephone company.

WHEAT DROPS 50C IN WEEK; FLOUR ON THE TOBOGGAN

H. C. L. Periled by Bumper Crop Estimates.

Optimistic crop predictions, bettering the government figures for June by millions of bushels and bales, have sent the prices of grains, meat, and cotton tumbling downward during the last week for the most sensational drop ever recorded under legitimate conditions. The high cost of living bugbear is threatened in the two most vital spots—food and clothing.

Cash wheat dropped in price from 16 to 28 cents a bushel yesterday. It was selling 50 cents cheaper than a week ago. Flour dropped 50 cents a barrel, $1.50 under the price quoted a week ago. Similar drops were recorded in oats, rye and other grains.

Pork on Toboggan, Too.

Dressed pork was quoted yesterday at $2.02½ per hundred pounds cheaper than a week ago. Short ribs had tumbled 83½ cents in price.

Cotton fell off from 42 to 69 points during the day's trading in the New York market.

The drop in the price of wheat was general throughout the country. Rural elevators everywhere are disposing of their grain in 5,000 and 10,000 bushel lots. The prediction is that wheat and flour will go still lower, with corn, rye, oats, and other grains following suit.

Rains Cause Price Drop.

The slashing of prices yesterday was largely due to the reports that heavy rains in Missouri, Nebraska, Illinois, and Indiana had saved or benefited the crops in those states. These, coupled with advance reports on what the government figures in grains and cotton will be for July, have produced the prediction that corn may even go as low as $1 a bushel for December.

The wheat yield for the year was fixed at 809,000,000 bushels in the June estimate of the department of agriculture. Reliable private reports now place the figure nearer to 830,000,000 and perhaps 850,000,000 bushels.

The early spring predictions of the cotton crop placed it at 10,500,000 bales. Now it is estimated the yield for the year may surpass 15,000,000 bales. This would be more than enough for an ample surplus at home after export orders are filled.

Hard on Cotton Planters.

While the drop in cotton prices will be of great benefit to the consumers, it will work a hardship on the southern planters who have made big loans abroad on the prospects of their yield. These loans must be met.

It is also feared that unless the farmers withhold their grain from the market, a continued sudden drop in price will produce a harmful financial reaction throughout the farming districts. If they do continue dumping the wheat on the market at the present rate, traders say—and there appears to be plenty to dump—it is likely to reach a level as low as $1.75 a bushel.

In the meanwhile the consumer is grinning.

Low Cost Shaving Lotion Almost Removes His Face

Casting about for a remedy for the high cost of clean shaves Arthur Wolf, 822 South Wabash avenue, hit upon a face lotion guaranteed to devitalize the beard. Now that Mr. Wolf's face is healed, he is an almost daily visitor at the city health department, where he is seeking to have the sale of the lotion prohibited. But little sympathy came his way, he declares. The health department said a sample of the lotion is being analyzed.

HARDING PLEADS FOR OLD IDEALS IN PORCH SPEECH

Warns Against Trend to Class Distinctions.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Marion, O., July 31.—[Special.]—Senator Warren G. Harding gave his first front porch address of importance today to a delegation of more than 2,000 citizens of Richland and Crawford counties, his neighbors of central Ohio.

Augmented by Marion citizens, who followed the bands and the banners, the crowd overflowed the lawn and blocked the street.

Mrs. Gordon Farrow of Mansfield, who flew to Marion in a machine with Louis Androw, former army aviator, related an adventure above the clouds, the airplane being caught in a storm marked by thunder and lightning. Thick clouds hid the place where they were supposed to land in Marion, but they skirted the storm and finally sighted an open field where they landed. Mrs. Farrow presented the greetings of Mansfield women to Senator and Mrs. Harding.

Tells of Pioneer Days.

Senator Harding, in his address, let his mind run back into the past, recalling the stories that his great-grandmother used to tell him of the pioneer days before the star of empire had set westward into Ohio. He pictured her riding horseback with a bag of wheat to the Lexington mill, her homeward journey hastened by the cries of wolves.

"Sometimes I am accused of living in the past," said the senator, "but frankly, I find the story of their making of Ohio very fascinating and drink new inspiration in recalling the paths they trod and the works they wrought. The miracle in developing America has its lessons, and emphasizes our resolution to hold fast to all the advancement they made and go on securely toward all we hope to be."

Cautions Against Class Lines.

The especial thought in his mind for the day, the senator said, was the interdependence and mutuality of interest of all our people. He cautioned against class distinctions. Factory and farm make one fabric of America. He recalled the days of 40 cent wheat, and took occasion to deny that he had ever said that dollar wheat was enough for today.

"Mounting farm prices, mounting wages, mounting expenditures—all are inseparably linked, and a grim mutuality will ultimately assert itself no matter what we do. Mindfulness of this mutuality will spare us the inequalities and grievances which come of forced adjustment.

"There is no living today or tomorrow according to the standards of yesterday. Every normal being is looking forward."

Discusses Excess Profits Tax.

Referring to war taxation, he said:

"We must work a real adjustment for stabilized and prosperous peace. We ought to make wealth bear its full share of tax burdens, and we ever will. Having this thought in mind and also thinking of the excessive cost of living, I doubt if the excess profits tax for war precisely accomplishes the end we seek in peace, though we do not disagree about the worthy intent.

"Its operations have been disappointing, its costs multiplied and pyramided, and righteous changes and modifications ought to be sought at an early day.

"I would gladly recommend a change, but I am not yet prepared to suggest an equitable substitute, though I should have no hesitancy in asking congress to seek the earliest possible solution.

Try Cycling on Our Lake

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Ye thrilling sport of cycling, so much affected by our English cousins, may now be enjoyed by red corpuscled Yankees upon the water as well as on the land.

David Swarthout and James Smith, proprietors of a motor repair shop at 836 Custer avenue, Evanston, have built a "bicycle pontoon." In layman vernacular, it consists of two airtight tin tanks and a bicycle frame. The pedals turn the sprocket wheel and chain, thus revolving the screw.

They have made several trips. One can pedal sight miles an hour with one passenger or six miles with two. The inventors commend it to the seagoing public because of the low cost of motive power. The only expense is rubber half soles.

NEW CHIEF OF CITY CHARITIES ARRIVES TODAY

Sherman C. Kingsley, first superintendent of the United Charities, and for four years executive officer of the Cleveland Welfare federation, will return to Chicago tomorrow to take up his new duties as director of all Chicago's charitable organizations. The position is that of executive director of the Chicago Council of Social Agencies.

SHERMAN C. KINGSLEY. [Moffett Photo.]

The council is composed of 120 welfare societies, and will administer charitable work along specialized lines, giving its full support to the various organizations which are to be grouped into sections devoted individually to the several branches of work.

The council was organized four years ago, but has been inactive because of the absence of a paid head. Lucius Teter is president of the council.

Trio Arrested After Bloodless Gun Battle

Grand Crossing station's "flivver squad" captured three men last night after a pistol battle in which thirty shots were exchanged but no one injured. The men said they were Charles O'Neil, 4145 Washtenaw avenue; John Conners, 4724 Lake Park avenue, and Fred Steinfurth, 1219 Wabash avenue. Nearly $100 in nickels were found in their possession and the police will question the trio regarding recent robberies of telephone boxes.

Charge Indiana Man with Attacking Widow

Princeton, Ind., July 31.—[Special.]—Jesse Kern, 36 years old, Princeton business man, was arrested here on an affidavit of E. J. Smith, foster father of Mrs. Emmeline Smith Cleveland, 19. Smith accuses Kern of attacking Mrs. Cleveland. Kern is a widower and Mrs. Cleveland a widow. Kern pleaded not guilty at his arraignment in a justice court, and was released on $2,000 bond, pending his appearance in the September term of court.

REMUS WON'T END HIS HONEYMOON TO SAVE $10,000

Lawyer with Bride Forfeits Bond.

Rude interruption of the honeymoon trip of Attorney George Remus, married to Mrs. Gene Holmes of Evanston on July 8, is scheduled for today if he can be found by United States deputy marshals armed with warrants for his arrest. The attorney is said to be somewhere in the east.

GEORGE REMUS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Commissioner Mason issued new warrants for his arrest and forfeited his cash bonds of $10,000 when he failed to appear for a hearing yesterday in connection with the charge that he withdrew thirty barrels of whisky from the Sibley warehouse on forged permits.

Arrest in New York Asked.

Telegrams were sent to New York, where Mr. Remus and his bride are supposed to be stopping at the Pennsylvania hotel, asking that he be taken into custody. He was warned before he went on his honeymoon that his bond would be forfeited if he did not appear, but he refused to change his plans.

Remus was first arrested in May, when it was charged that he, while acting as a notary public, put his seal and name to a withdrawal permit made out to Angelano Provenzano for the removal of liquor from the Sibley warehouse. Government agents learned of the plan to move the liquor and intercepted it as men were taking it away.

Asserts Action Is Legal.

At the time Remus admitted signing the permit, but declared that the whole transaction was genuine and legal. He was arrested, however, and government agents charge that he has been mixed up in other deals similar to this one.

Assistant District Attorney John J. Kelly declared that the case against Remus would be vigorously prosecuted.

ONE AUTO TOOK HIS TOES; LIFE IN DANGER NOW

Max Richter of 900 South Sixth avenue, Maywood, whose injuries in an automobile accident a month ago necessitated amputation of the toes of his right foot, was able last night to leave Parkside hospital in an automobile with his brother, John.

Within an hour he was back in the hospital again. His brother's car had collided with a car driven by Morris Walkovitz, 3636 West Division street, at Diversey boulevard and Burling street. John escaped with a shaking up but Max was hurt internally. Physicians at the hospital say his condition is serious.

Robert Warner, 19 years old, 2500 North Ashland avenue, was booked at the Sheffield avenue station on a charge of assault after his machine had run down and seriously injured 4 year old Leona Baronski at Greenview avenue and Montana street. The girl, whose parents live at 1513 Montana street, was taken to St. Joseph's hospital in a serious condition.

Finds $25,000 Gem Bag Autoist Lost; Tells Owner

Hastings on Hudson, N. Y., July 31.—A black bag containing about $25,000 worth of jewels, which fell from the automobile of Mrs. Cecil Page, a society woman of Tarrytown, was picked up here early today by Henry McGuckin. McGuckin found Mrs. Page's card in the bag and telephoned her husband, who said the bag must have dropped from the machine while Mrs. Page was on her way to Massachusetts. Mr. Page said he will give McGuckin a reward.

Capt. Andrew Resigns Soldiers', Sailors' Home

Quincy, Ill., July 31.—Capt. John E. Andrew today tendered his resignation as superintendent of the Illinois Soldiers and Sailors' home, giving as his reason a desire to escape the growing responsibilities.

LEGION NOTES

Delegates and alternates to the state convention of the legion, to be held in Chicago Sept. 2 and 3, will be elected by Kenwood post at the Kenwood club, East Forty-seventh street and Lake Park avenue, Tuesday, at 7:30 p. m.

Historical post hopes to form an American Legion club, to purchase the Khaki and Blue Club building, and, after securing permission of the United States government, have the building moved east to the inner harbor and placed upon piling adjoining the shore line of Grant park.

Chipilly post will hold its first outing on Aug. 11. Tickets can be had at the armory at Sixteenth and Michigan on Monday, Wednesday, or Saturday evening.

At 3 o'clock tomorrow the Chicago Veteran's association will lay the cornerstone of the monument it will erect and dedicate at Mount Olive cemetery on Sept. 5, in memory of the many soldiers buried there. A fifty-six foot flagpole also will be erected tomorrow.

FAMILY TREE COSTS $20,000, BUT HE'S HAPPY

Twenty thousand dollars is a high price for a tree, but Henry Musser, wealthy Manila, P. I., manufacturer, paid that for his and doesn't begrudge a cent of it. It is a family tree.

"They called me a German during the war," Mr. Musser explained yesterday, while in Chicago on his way from Virginia to Oklahoma, "and told me I'd have to get a passport to get into the United States, but I'll show 'em when I get back. I've established myself as an American so thoroughly now that no one in the world will ever question it again. I've got proof of a family tree planted more than 300 years ago."

Musser came to the United States last spring and spent several months investigating dusty records for proof of his citizenship. He found his mother's people came from Ireland and settled in Virginia in 1791. His father's ancestors came from Holland to New York in 1614.

G.E. Patterson of Kankakee Is Promoted by I. C. R. R.

Kankakee, Ill., July 31.—G. E. Patterson, superintendent of the Illinois division of the Illinois Central railroad, has been promoted to general superintendent of its northern and western lines, effective Aug. 1, it was announced here today.

CONVICT WHO HURLED GUARD OFF TRAIN TAKEN

Fugitive Awakens to Face Ring of Guns.

Harry O'Neil, fugitive convict since last March, when he tossed a guard from a passenger train, was captured yesterday at the home of a half-brother at 5827 South Kildare avenue. Lieut. Michael Hughes and a squad from the detective bureau surrounded the place while the tenants were asleep.

O'Neil is a desperate character, the police say. Some years ago he was convicted of robbery and committed to Joliet penitentiary. He feigned insanity and was removed to the state hospital for the criminal insane at Chester. The authorities there discovered the ruse and ordered him back to Joliet.

Threw Guard Through Window.

As the train was leaving Springfield, Ill., one of the two guards left the car for a few minutes. O'Neil leaped upon the other, choked him, threw him out the window, and then jumped after him.

No trace of him was obtained until a few days ago, when Lieut. Hughes received information that he was hiding at the Kildare avenue address.

Awakes; Faces Guns.

O'Neil was in bed when the detectives entered his room.

"Better come along quietly," Hughes advised.

The ex-convict surveyed the circle of drawn pistols and without comment put on his clothes and accompanied the detectives.

Honeymoon Spoiled by Arrest of C. F. Atherton

Charged with selling to too many persons the "exclusive rights" to Wisconsin and Minnesota territory for the sale of an electrical transformer, Claude F. Atherton, who declares he is a Chicagoan, was arrested yesterday in Milwaukee. Atherton and Mrs. Auburn W. Osborne Atherton were on their wedding trip.

New M. E. Bishop of France Will Leave Tomorrow

Bishop Edgar Blake, chairman of the board of Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal church, who was recently appointed bishop to France, will leave Evanston tomorrow for Paris with his wife and two daughters, the Misses Charlotte and Rachael Blake.

COX WITHHOLDS PART OF SPEECH IN ADVANCE COPY

Sends Rest to Printers; Silent on Contents.

BY ROBERT N. SMITH.

Dayton, O., July 31.—[Special.]—Gov. Cox, Democratic nominee for president, completed his acceptance speech today and sent it to the printer. As soon as proofs are struck off the speech will be given out for distribution among the newspapers. Until the time of its release, when Cox delivers it on Aug. 7, no inkling of its contents will be made public.

In addition to the copy sent to the printer today the governor expects to write an "insert" which will have to be telegraphed to the newspapers just before the speech is made. The governor is saying nothing about the contents of this "insert," and there is much speculation about its purport.

Reserves His Fire For Harding.

Gov. Cox made no reply today to Senator Harding's charge that powerful international financial interests are going to back the Democratic campaign to secure ratification of the peace treaty and the league of nations. He indicated that he did not care to enter into a telegraphic debate, and that he desired to reserve all his fire until he delivers his acceptance speech. He is confident that he will clear up all doubts as to his stand on the treaty issue.

The only caller at Trailsend today was Prof. Irving Fisher, economist, of Yale university. It is understood Dr. Fisher urged the governor to stand by the league of nations and discussed the matter of finance and taxation with him.

Mayor Switzer issued a proclamation today declaring next Saturday a local holiday in honor of the governor's formal notification of his nomination. Dayton is going to keep on its holiday duds, which it donned for yesterday's celebration, for the next week.

Unless there is urgent need for his presence at the state house in Columbus, Gov. Cox will remain at Trailsend until after his notification.

Asks Tennessee Suffrage.

Washington, D. C., July 31.—[Special.]—George White, chairman of the Democratic national committee, it was announced tonight by the National Woman's party, has sent a telegram to each Democratic member of the Tennessee legislature urging ratification by the Democratic delegation of the suffrage amendment at the special session which convenes Aug. 9 and asking for "a favorable response by wire."

French Senators Ratify Treaty with Bulgarians

PARIS, July 31.—The senate today ratified the peace treaty with Bulgaria. The chamber of deputies already had acted favorably on the treaty, having passed the act of ratification on July 27.

WEDDING CROWNS ROMANCE INSPIRED BY LOYALTY TO U. S.

Romance begun by the war and nurtured in a Chicago business house, brought about the marriage last night of Miss Hazel Vivian Hansen, daughter of Mrs. Minnie Hansen, 1550 North Kedzie avenue, and Orville C. Verner, a buyer for a loop store.

MRS. O. C. VERNER. [Lewis Smith Photo.]

Patriotism led Mr. Verner to enlist for the battles overseas, while the same motive set Miss Hansen to work in the same store which employed Mr. Verner. When he returned the two met, and the culmination of the romance was written at the Bethlehem Lutheran church last night.

After a honeymoon in the Berkshires Mr. and Mrs. Verner will be at home at 6253 Sheridan road.

MAJOR WHO SAVED THE U. S. $436,732 MUSTERED OUT

Maj. Samuel L. Nelson, constructing quartermaster of the army warehouses in Chicago, for thirty-five years before the war, vice president and general manager of the McKinley traction lines in downstate cities, was mustered out of the service of the army yesterday. Maj. Nelson left last night for Peoria to join his family.

MAJ. SAMUEL L. NELSON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Maj. Nelson superintended the construction of ten huge buildings in West Thirty-ninth street between Ashland and Western avenues. For this work, $10,271,674.65 was appropriated, and he effected a saving of $436,732.94.

On May 12, 1917, Maj. Nelson, who is 61 years old, entered the army as a captain with a son who was given the same rank. After an automobile tour Maj. Nelson will devote his efforts to Peoria financial institutions.

Chases Boy Thief Through Offices and Dance Hall

After a chase through two doctors' offices and a dance hall on the second floor at 842 East Forty-seventh street Detective Sergeant Joseph B. Walsh yesterday captured a 17 year old boy who had stolen $142 from the cash drawer in the policeman's wife's store on the first floor of the same building. The boy gave his name as Frederick Brissa, 5900 South State street.

LOCKER OF U. S. FAIRLY BULGES WITH "RED EYE"

Enough Booze to Treat Every One.

Washington, D. C., July 31.—Federal Prohibition Commissioner John F. Kramer now is custodian of nearly 50,000,000 drinks of whisky, it was estimated here today. This is enough to give one man-sized drink to nearly every male in the United States.

"It's whisky we seized in raids," explained R. E. Hall, chief supervisor of Kramer's detective force. "We will have to hold it, I guess, until we get court orders for its disposal.

Liquor Is Guarded.

"So far no court has given us any directions because no important cases have been disposed of. Meanwhile we're having to guard the liquor. Some of it is stored in federal buildings and some in bonded warehouses and liquor storehouses. Most of the liquor was seized in Chicago and New York."

Measured by ordinary standards, the seized whisky is reported to total more than 2,000,000 quarts. This, however, is a mere drop in the grand total of amounts seized throughout the country, since national prohibition went into effect Jan. 16. Police, sheriffs, and other local officials who do not report to Kramer's have seized far more than Kramer's agents.

Captured at Border.

Customs officials also are busy separating contraband alcohol from Americans returning from Canada and Mexico. All trains entering the United States from Canada and Mexico are searched by customs officials.

Whisky now in custody of the government is worth more than $10,000,000 at bootleg prices. It is unlikely that federal officials will be willing to lay themselves open to the charge of inconsistency by selling it to persons licensed to buy for nonbeverage purposes. This has been considered and practically rejected, it was said today.

A large quantity of the confiscated whisky is of the moonshine variety, and, therefore, good for nothing, according to prohibition officials.

Drys to Publish Record of Harding and Cox

Montgomery, Ala., July 31.—Dr. P. A. Baker, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, announced today that a committee of seven, appointed recently from that organization, would meet Aug. 11 in Birmingham, Ala., and publish the records of Senator Harding and Gov. Cox on the prohibition question.

Four Bridges Ordered Closed Today for Repairs

The following bridges will be closed for repairs today during the hours noted, the city bridge division announced yesterday:

Rush street and North Western avenue bridges, 1 to 6 a. m.

Michigan boulevard bridge, 12:30 to 8:30 a. m.

Madison street bridge, 7 a. m. to 8 p. m.

DRUGGIST BARES U. S. OFFICIALS IN BOOZE GRAFTING

Dry Agent Gets Confession of Payments.

Further charges that federal officials were mixed up in the "liquor rings" operating in the city were made yesterday by Capt. Hubert Howard, federal prohibition director for Illinois.

"There is no end to the liquor graft in the government forces," said Mr. Howard, "and much of our work is nullified by the crooked work of officials who should be aiding in enforcing the law.

"I investigated the record of a druggist who had one of the cleanest records of any man who had taken out a permit. He denied that he had been mixed up in crooked deals at first, but later confessed. He recited a number of cases where he had paid graft to government officials. The facts, however, are not ready for publication as yet."

The wholesale liquor permit of Michael J. Clancy was revoked by Capt. Howard. Clancy is nominal owner of the whisky mixed up in the "million dollar whisky ring," exposed by the police Thursday. He will not be allowed to reënter the business. It is probable, however, that he will be allowed to dispose of the warehouse receipts for the whisky if he can satisfy the government that he has not been violating the law.

A wanton zephyr lifted a corner of a tarpaulin on a motor truck and Detective Sergeants James Mullin, Joseph Connolly, and Policeman Stephen Casey of East Chicago avenue followed it. It entered the garage of George and Joseph Weisbecker, 1704 Larrabee street. They removed the tarpaulin and found sixty cases of bonded bourbon. It was seized and the Weisbeckers were detained for interrogation by federal officials.

WAR VETERAN SUES Y. M. C. A. FOR $10,000 DAMAGES

The Chicago Young Men's Christian association was named defendant in a $10,000 damage suit filed in Circuit court yesterday by Abraham Greenfield, attorney for Frank Garvey, an ex-service man.

Greenfield charges that Garvey, who was wounded and gassed while a member of the Fifty-eighth infantry, 4th division, was attacked by three employés of the association in the Y. M. C. A. hotel on the night of June 16.

"Garvey was told to stop smoking," Greenfield said, "and when he did not instantly comply was forced into a room and three men, one of whom was Van Dorn, key clerk, administered a severe beating. His injuries were such that he was a patient for five days in the army hospital at East Forty-seventh street and Drexel boulevard.

SHAYNE

The August FUR SALE at Shayne's

Shayne furs in all seasons enjoy the distinction of being the utmost in style and quality at the lowest price that it is possible to charge for furs of undisputed worth.

For the period of the August sale there is added to this attraction a worth while actual saving in the 20% discount that is allowed.

The sale this year offers two revelations of importance — the richness of the Shayne display in materials and design, and the astonishingly low price of even the most exclusive of models.

LUNDIN, THOMPSON, AND THE YES MAN, SMALL.

The people of Illinois, as represented in the constitutional convention, have been much exercised for fear the people of Chicago might get control of the legislature. Their delegates have been insisting upon a restriction of Chicago's representation.

If the people of Illinois are afraid of the people of Chicago, we suggest that they give some attention to the mayor of Chicago. He seeks to control the state.

The people of Chicago are fairly harmless. It might be injurious to a proper political balance to have city control of the state legislature, but it would not be a wreckage. Thompson's control of the state would be.

Thompson seeks control through Len Small of Kankakee. Small, his candidate for nomination, is his puppet. If he were not his puppet he would not be his candidate. Lundin, Thompson's manipulator, is not in the business to promote individual candidacies and elect independent men. He is in the business to advance biddable men and elect yes men.

The yes men take orders. They do not give them. Lundin is as sympathetic to independence as Lenin is. Small is Lundin's yes man or he would not be Thompson's candidate. If Small were governor, Lundin would sit in the executive office, with Thompson at his side.

These two would control state affairs just as they control city affairs. Gov. Lowden says that Thompson attracted to his organization all the elements of disloyalty and discontent in the city and with them built up a Tammany.

New York Tammany never was successful in getting outside New York City, and probably Chicago's Tammany will not be successful in getting outside of Chicago. We have it here, and it is hard to dislodge, but it will be hard for it to spread if Illinois is half as fearful of Chicago city government as it seems to be of Chicago city people.

We have it here because when Thompson was first a candidate he made a good appearance and good promises. His political connections had not been good, but there was reason to believe that he might make a good mayor. He was of old Chicago stock and had been associated with fine manly American enterprises and sports. There was something of the Roosevelt suggestion in Thompson's personal activities, but there was no Roosevelt fiber in Bill. One of the finest hidings he ever got was from Roosevelt.

He was first elected when there was hope that he might have real ambitions to serve his city. That hope lasted about a minute. Lorimer's old lieutenant, Lundin, took charge of him and, by patronage, bunk, and bulldozing, an organization was built up which is sitting on Chicago's neck and may sit there for some time.

When such a control has been established it is hard to shake off. It is easy enough to avoid the clutch, but when it has been fastened on it paralyzes resistance. The state has not yet offered its neck.

In Chicago there has been no leadership against Thompson and Lundin, and as a result the imposed upon citizens are as uncertain and timid as sheep. His own compact organization of active yes men is held together by patronage, by the spoils of office, by the full crib. Outside of that organization he handles bunk to the credulous and bulldozing to the obstinate, and the people he does not befuddle he intimidates.

That is the situation in the city, and the government of the state is susceptible to such treatment just as the government of the city is. Business men in Chicago are timid because if they show fight they may come in contact with some municipal activity. There is building inspection, smoke inspection, etc., and the police department. If a citizen feels that he has been gouged or mistreated he keeps his mouth shut for fear he will get worse.

He contributes to horn blowing funds and hopes to save his bacon. He speaks softly and he does not fight. He has lost the power and the will to fight.

In handling bunk, Thompson and Lundin appeal to a class which does nothing for progress or stability, but is easily moved to want things for which it is unwilling to work. Thompson implies that he will get for it what the other fellow has. Thompson proceeds upon the theory that property owners are crooks.

The farmer must be a crook because he has a farm. He is a profiteer, a tax dodger, and his profits ought to be taken away from him and the man who does nothing to increase the wealth of the state ought to be tax exempt and supported.

It is an appeal older than the Roman cakes and circuses, and by bunk on one side and bulldozing on the other Thompson works his crib fed organization and the city government has been run out of gas and left in the ditch.

Thompson now is paying city debts with city hall scrip and we have just begun to feel the effects of being busted. We suppose it all must be paid some day. Thompson says that he intends to make taxpayers pay their taxes. We'll admit that he will. There will be a tax bill presented to Chicago which will drive industries out of town. The tax paying times are coming.

This is the government which seeks an extension over the state. All the people of the state have to do is to accept the yes man, Len Small, and the state activities will be used just as the municipal activities are used.

There will be new uses for bank examiners, for grain inspectors, for the health department, for factory inspection, and even, we imagine, for the fish and game wardens.

All the state has to do is to take on the yes men.

BRITAIN OILS THE WHEELS OF PROGRESS.

Owners of some 7,500,000 motor vehicles in the United States out of a world's total estimated at 8,000,000 should have a keen personal interest in any news affecting the supply and price of gasoline. The news that the British government, through the newly formed North Persia Oils company, has negotiated a deal with the Persian government for the development of the oil fields of the five provinces on the Caspian sea is of vital significance. This development will give Britain control of the entire petroleum output of Persia. England's foresight is worthy of imitation.

The United States needs reserves of oil even more than England. Ninety per cent of the world's internal combustion engines are now in use here. Our shipping board's requirement for fuel oil in 1919 is put at 50,000,000 barrels, and for 1921 at 70,000,000 barrels. An ultimate increase of at least 4,000,000 motor vehicles in this country is expected. The supremacy of oil over any other fuel for motive power, and hence for both war and commerce, is constantly increasing. With all these factors to be considered the importance of Britain's steady extension of oil interests throughout the world can be readily understood.

The recent war has proved that oil and gasoline are indispensable to military success. Ludendorff has written: "We would not have been able to exist, much less carry on the war, without Roumania's oil." England's greatest fear of defeat came with the danger of interference with her supply of oil from Mexico. Commercial and military success, domestic prosperity and peace, appear equally dependent upon oil resources. Great Britain sees that point plainly.

In Mesopotamia, and throughout Persia now, the British control appears absolute. The situation is such that even if the country eventually were thrown open to development other nationals would be unable to compete. In India only British companies are now permitted to operate. The Egyptian field, the Trinidad field, and fields in various parts of the British empire are closed to Americans. British nationals, on the other hand, can operate on the same terms as Americans in America.

While this situation obtains in the development of the world's oil resources, our production is failing steadily farther below our consumption. While we consume 80 per cent of the world's output, we are producing now approximately 60 per cent. We must provide for the future. Britain is acting within her rights, and acting wisely. It is equally the part of right and wisdom for the United States to extend development and control of oil resources in countries still open to us.

The oil shale deposits of the United States may some day solve the problem, but that solution promises to be slow. In the meantime we should encourage provision of oil resources outside our own boundaries. The future of our motor industry, the future of our merchant marine, the future of our army and navy, the future of our nation, are involved.

OUR WAR IN PEACE.

Mr. Harding's foreign policy begins with the promise to recognize a fact. The fact is that we are not at war with Germany. Peace does not have to be made. It is made. It needs only to be recognized as existent.

Germany, Austria, and the United States, at war by Wilsonian conception, are about the only nations which were in the war and which are now at war in theory and at peace in fact. The nations which made peace are all at war somewhere in the world.

A foreign policy which begins with refusal to recognize a fact when it exists can proceed to any extravagance, and that is precisely what the Wilson policy does. It does so because it wants to consider the policy of the United States as wholly related to the past and not as related to the future.

Mr. Wilson insists that the war should be regarded as continuing in order that the league of nations should be viewed as a means of ending that war. Thus as an instrument of peace it seems to promise a continuance of usefulness, the proof proceeding from a fiction and not from a fact.

Harding would sweep these fictions out of the way and the United States would proceed from a clean start to make its international relations with regard to the future. Mr. Wilson is still fighting the war which has stopped. Mr. Harding wants to avoid the next one.

The position of the United States with regard to Germany is one in which a nation seldom finds itself. We never did in a foreign war before. This position reveals the single object which the United States had in the war. That object was to promote its own security.

There are no boundaries to fix. There are no indemnities to determine. There is no question of how much of this or how much of that is to be obtained. There is only the question of restoring property rights and trade from a military to a civil basis. Everything is done virtually except to recognize that it has been done.

The delay of that recognition keeps our domestic laws on stilts and it enables the continuance of war power over civil rights. The situation is inherently bad and Harding says it will be cleared up as soon as congress will act on his recommendations.

Editorial of the Day

PUBLIC UTILITY SERVICE.

[Kewanee Star-Courier.]

What the people demand of their public utilities is good service. The public does not want to wait ten minutes when a telephone call is made. It does not want to ride in street cars that are so decrepit they are dangerous; it does not want gas pressure off half the day; it does not want its electric lights to be uncertain and erratic; it does not want its telegraph messages delayed; it does not want the trains cut down in number so that there is a jam on every car that is operated.

The public does want accurate, courteous, adequate service along the line of all its public utility work. It is willing to pay whatever is reasonable and right to get such service. The people do not relish increased charges on public utilities service and they will not stand for extortion or undue profits, but the time has passed when political capital can be made of every public utility corporation's affairs.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

WE might give a guess at the whereabouts of last year's snows, but a disappearance that more intrigues us is that of the people who used to ride on the Twentieth Century Limited. The present passengers are a rum lot. Some of them try to blow out the electric lights, and others have to be shown how to work the faucets in the washroom.

Tell me, Prince, where they now abide,
The people who paid the excess fares.
Where are the folk who used to ride?
Where are the old-time passenjares?

CHEER up, advises the Old Ben Coal Corporation. "As Garfield said in a certain terrifying situation, 'God is in his heaven and all's well with the world.'" That cheered us for a minute or two.

Still a Treat to Him.

Sir: The other evening we sat on the hotel porch. Said the missus dreamily, "Don't all the lakes in this part of the country look alike to you?" And I said, "Oh, I dunno. There were some pretty good ones here last week." And she said, "What are you talking about?" J. U. H.

DOESN'T it seem strange to you—or doesn't it?—that there are no Irish police dogs? Why should our police be obliged to employ only Germans and Belgians?

IN WHICH DIAMOND CUTS DIAMOND.

[From the Rusk County, Wis., Journal.]

While working with a surveying party near Island Lake, John Diamond Jr. cut his leg quite badly with an ax. The lower part of the leg is cork, but either fortunately or unfortunately it was the flesh part that was cut. If the cork part had been cut, it wouldn't heal up, but would have to be replaced or repaired, but the victim would have escaped the pain. Anyhow, Fate decided it.

"BREATHE the wine-like air of Mountainland," beseeches the Northwestern Railroad. You may do so legally, as it contains only one-half of one per cent.

FOR THE LEAGUE.

Sir: Shackleton's return from the Antarctic was shown on the screen in Cedar Rapids. When the ship was seen entering a South American port the orchestra played "God Save the King." The audience rose and stood at attention. Does this show that Cedar Rapids is for the League as it was, or did they think it was the seventh inning? W. H. S.

A HEADLINE in the Congressional Record advises us that "the nation should be aroused to the danger of peyote." Peyote, or mescal, would seem to be a satisfactory substitute for the stuff which made Kentucky famous, and is enthusiastically described in the Record as follows:

"Time is lengthened; a minute is like an hour, and an hour is like a whole night. Things seem far away. Common sounds seem wonderful, so that one note struck on the piano seems like a whole chord. Each note produces a new series of wonderful colors. Clothed in these kaleidoscopic colors all kinds of animals and objects are seen, some beautiful and alluring, and some grotesque and fearful, but it is the colors constantly coming and going that make the most fascinating and satisfying appeal."

IF the world is to be destroyed by a flood of bunk, as is not improbable, we had better be planning another Ark. What shall we take in it, brethren? With your assent, we shall begin by booking the Smith Brothers, Trade and Mark.

Clarification Is Vexation.

Sir: Fear not the sediment in home brew; it is really beneficial. The "fining" process of the brewers is just for effect, and bears no added value to the larger motif. The Eighteenth Amendment is a blessing in disguise. It has turned us mentally lazy Americans to the sublimest of studies, chemistry. By the study and practice of chemistry we get closer to God, and reach a more respectable attitude toward the things he intended us to have—yea, even home-made hootch. R. H. D.

WE agree with the foregoing to the extent of believing that home-made hootch gets us nearer to the hereafter.

WHEN HIGH COST PAYS ITS WAY.

IN America we are in the midst of the healthiest season in our history.

Since typhoid fever and diarrhoea among babies have come so well under control, July has become a healthy month, but this July is a "blue ribboner."

According to a report of the United States census office in the week of July 10, there were twenty-one American cities with a death rate of less than ten per 1,000 in a list of fifty-four cities with a total population of more than 25,000,000. Fifteen years ago the healthier cities of this list boasted when their death rates fell much below the worst rates given in this list.

Every one recognized the fact that however much society has gone backward in the last few years in some directions, it has gained in health promotion. When we come to the explanation of the improvement, the theories are not always in exact accord. An English authority ascribes it to improvement in wages. It is the undue amount of sickness among people with small incomes which keeps the death rates high. Give these people more wages and some of the increase is spent for better, cleaner homes, bathtubs, more soap and water, better food and more of it, and more time in the open air.

Dr. George A. Soper has a closely allied, but at the same time a somewhat different explanation. Parenthetically, Dr. Soper was the discoverer of Typhoid Mary, did much to bring typhoid fever under control by spreading the doctrine that much typhoid is spread by carriers, and lately has had an extensive army experience.

Dr. Soper says that with the exception of pneumonia we do not have any old fashioned disease. Should typhus, cholera, or plague get into this country they would not spread, and we need not be afraid. There is no longer old fashioned scarlet fever, measles, or diphtheria.

The improvement in typhoid fever and the diarrhoea rate among babies has been greater still. The very great improvement toward eliminating smallpox is due to vaccination and some of the improvement in regard to diphtheria is due to anti-toxin.

But the great factor in the improvement is due to greater cleanliness. We bathe more frequently, keep our houses cleaner, and insist upon clean water, clean milk, clean food, and, in some measure, clean air. He says: "Simple cleanliness is one of the most healthful as well as one of the most educative measures known. Any measure which contributes to cleanness, convenience, and order in a community helps to eliminate disease."

To pure water, pure milk, sewage disposal, garbage collection, fly prevention he adds good paving and plenty of parks. Raising of standards of living works to lower the sickness rates and death rates.

NEEDS SURGICAL CARE.

H. F. R. writes: "I have been watching your column hoping some one would ask questions about empyema. I was operated on about three years ago for that disease. Previous to that I had lung trouble. In all I have been operated on four times and it keeps on draining. The last operation was the removal of a section of the rib, and the drain seems to be worse. I am losing weight. From 216 pounds I am down to 154. After an operation for a time I feel better until the wound starts to heal, then I get worse again. What I would like to know is will I have to be operated on every so often? Is there a chance of my getting better or well? Could you advise me to take some kind of treatment?"

REPLY.

Your history is not an unusual one. Your infection may be tubercular, but it probably is due to some pus coccus. Many such cases recover. It is often necessary to remove several ribs and permit the chest wall, to cave in and thus obliterate the pus cavity. Your hope lies in getting the best surgical skill and care available.

YOU HAVE NERVE; KEEP IT.

W. H. C. writes: "When I left the farm I weighed 140 pounds. That was eight weeks ago. I now weigh 148. I am 20 years old, 6 feet 2 inches tall.

"1. Is my weight correct considering I have only one leg?

"2. My bowels move regularly at 7 a. m. My pulse is 70. Judging from the above am I in good health?

"3. Is nuxated iron helpful?

"About a year ago I was shot in the knee with a soft nosed .38 caliber bullet while hunting. The bullet went clean through, breaking the bone and tearing away three inches of the main artery. This was late in November, and after riding over twenty-six miles through sleet and snow in an old rickety buggy I arrived at the hospital at 4:30 p. m. The accident was at 9:30 in the morning. During the whole time I never lost my head. Judging from the position I was in it is a wonder I am alive.

"4. From the above would you say I have a good constitution?

"5. How is my heart?"

REPLY.

1. You are about right now. You needed the extra eight pounds.
2. Yes.
3. It is about an average good iron preparation.
4. Yes. You have nerve, grit, and a cool head.
5. I have no way of knowing, but you write nothing that indicates heart trouble. Guard against watching your innards. Don't spoil your record by becoming a neurasthenic.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters for this department must be signed with names and addresses of the writers.

SERVICE HERE.

Chicago, July 29.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I reported a defective rain gutter at 2009 Bingham street at two different times to the health department. The first complaint was in February last up to the present date there has been nothing done in regard to repairing same. Hoping this is not asking too much. H. B.

Replying to your complaint of recent date regarding 2009 Bingham street, I wish to advise you that we have no record of a complaint made to this department in the month of February. However, our records do show that there was a complaint made of defective roof gutters on April 20, which was investigated by an inspector. On April 23 a notice was sent the owner to repair or replace defective roof gutters and downspouts.

Several inspections have been made since that date, and on June 6, the owner of the building, having failed to comply with the requirements, suit action was started.

JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

TO JOIN BRITISH.

Quincy, Ill., July 26.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Where can I find out what the British law requires of an American citizen who wishes to serve in the British forces?

Does joining the British forces make an American citizen an alien to the United States? B.

Requirements for serving in the British forces may be learned by addressing an inquiry to the Military Attaché at the British Embassy, Washington, D. C.

In peace times, if an American citizen should join the British forces, therein taking allegiance to the British flag, and foreswearing allegiance to the United States, he loses his United States citizenship.

However, in time of war, it is not possible for an American citizen to thus expatriate himself. If the man whom you have in mind joins the British forces at this time, or before peace is declared, he will join under the war time provision.

HE CHANGES HIS NAME.

Chicago, July 29.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am of age and wish to change my name. (1) Do I have to go through any court proceedings at all? (2) Would it cause trouble with my insurance? (3) And about property, if I buy a lot would I be the legal owner under the new name? (4) Do I not have to register my name where I was born? (5) Property left me under my old name in the future—could I claim it even though I had another name? BUNKHEAD.

1. No.
2. No legal trouble would be necessary We would advise you to inform them of the change, but to continue your dealing with them under your old name if they so prefer.
3. Yes.
4. No.
5. Yes. You would merely have to prove that you were the same person.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A BUNDLE OF COMPLAINTS.

Chicago, July 29.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I wish an improvement could be made on Washtenaw avenue from Chicago and Northwestern railroad tracks to George street.

1. Earth from Chicago and Northwestern railroad falls down and piles up on the sidewalk.
2. The Consumers' Coal company fence is in a dangerous condition.
3. Clean dirty street caused by the Borden's Dairy company. K. H. S.

The Chicago and Northwestern railroad has been notified to construct a retaining wall along their elevated right of way on Washtenaw avenue from their tracks to George street, to prevent the dirt from washing down on the walk.

The other complaints contained in this communication have been attended to.

THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

THE NEW GAS RATES.

Chicago, July 28.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Answering letter received by you and signed "W. R. Watson," wish to advise correspondent that the new gas rates as listed in his communication are correct and authorized by the state public utility commission. These rates became effective on all meters read June 16 and after, covering gas consumed during the preceding month.

WILLIAM H. REID,
Commissioner of Public Service.

MEMORY TESTS. CAN YOU ANSWER THESE?

AMERICANISMS.

1. From what phase of American life do we get our word stampede?
2. From what language do we obtain our word "powwow," meaning a conference both wild and rowdy?
3. What is the origin of a dish called "succotash"?
4. Who is a "squatter," a term of American origin?
5—From what race of people do we get our expression "to bury the hatchet"?
6. Who are our Creoles?
7. What were our "copperheads"?
8. Whom do we call a pickaninny."
9. What is the meaning of our rather slang Americanism, "gone coon"?
10. What is the meaning of the term "bonanza" and what does it come from?

HISTORY ANSWERS.

1. Who were the "Carpet Baggers" in the reconstruction period following the civil war? Northern men who sought to influence the Negro voters for unworthy purposes.
2. In what war did Benedict Arnold, American general, turn traitor to his country and attempt to turn West Point over to the enemy? In the war of the revolution.
3. For what was Sir Francis Drake noted? An English naval hero and first English circumnavigator of the globe.
4. Who led our Rough Riders to victory at San Juan hill? Col. Roosevelt.
5. What American general in 1847 landed before Vera Cruz, in Mexico, and took the city? Gen. Scott.
6. What has been pronounced the decisive battle of the civil war and one of the decisive battles of the world? The battle of Gettysburg.
7. What European soldiers did Great Britain hire to fight us in the war of the revolution? Hessian soldiers.
8. Who was Anne Boleyn, and what was her fate? The second wife of Henry VIII., king of England; she was beheaded.
9. What United States possession was formed into a territory in 1900? Hawaii.
10. What was the first state admitted into the union? Vermont, in 1791.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE SILENT MOVIE.

Berwyn, Ill., July 25.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I wonder how the public likes the musicless movies? People say I can make a piano talk, but unfortunately I belong to the wrong union. If my parents would have used the money they spent on my musical education by letting me study law today, probably, I would be in a better position to provide for my family. The lawyers have a union, only they have a different name for it. No offense meant. We have one in the family. I studied my instrument for eight years and for eighteen years have been in the show business. The movie managers are filling their patrons full of "screen bunk" about their musicians getting $50 a week, but they do not say that these men put in forty-four or more hours a week and that they work on Sundays and holidays. When everybody has a holiday then is the time when the musician in the picture house puts in the most hours. Do they get time and a half or double time on those days? They do not. Did you ever hear of one getting a Christmas present from his employer or a two weeks' vacation with pay? You never did and you never will.

My boy wants to be a plumber. I asked him why, and he said "they get $10 a day and they don't have to work on Saturday afternoon and Sunday." Which is fair enough and a good answer from an 8 year old boy. People harp on the high cost of living. Why, doggone it, a man can hardly afford to keep clean, much less live, on a musician's salary. In 1914 and 1915 I was working in a loop house and I received $32 a week, equivalent to $60 now. In June, 1920, I was working in a picture house on the west side, for which I received the "magnificent" salary of $37 a week. In 1920 I was a better musician and a better performer than in 1914 (in other lines of business those are the kind that are retained). It cost me 100 per cent more to live and I got less than 20 per cent to do it on. It cannot be done. The last leader I worked for had $3,000 invested in music. If you had that much invested in a business what would you consider a fair return on your investment—besides a living. The men that own the chain picture houses are unfair—unfair to the public and unfair to the musicians. They have discontinued their orchestras and retained the same price of admission. Others are giving their patrons mediocre vaudeville, which is merely a subterfuge to keep up the price of admission. AN EX-MUSICIAN.

A REMEDY FOR LANDLORDISM.

Evanston, Ill., July 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. Hertz of Wyoming, Ill., either misread my communication or is unfair in quoting me as favoring taxing farm tenants to discourage farm tenancy.

What I did say, in substance, was that in the interest of conservation and upbuilding of land fertility, improvement of buildings, and living conditions on American farms, increasing production and reducing cost of production and cost to consumers of food products, I favor legislation that will discourage the holding of more farm land by an owner than he makes use of in his own farming operations.

Mr. Hertz admits that 8 per cent investments can be had. Then why should retired farmers hold on to land, even the $500 land he mentions, that returns, net, only 5 per cent? It means that the tenant is paying for all taxes, insurance, and repairs, and $25 an acre, or $4,000 a year on 160 acres, in addition.

A state remedy is at hand similar to the one used to prohibit corporations from owning more land than they use in their own business but as a federal remedy is desirable an income tax on rentals received from farm lands would solve the problem. This as stated should be 20 per cent the first year, 40 per cent the second, 60 per cent the third, 80 per cent the fourth, and 100 per cent the fifth year. Before this persuader got fairly started the retired farmer would have sold his farm and made the better investment Mr. Hertz mentions. The remedy is simple and has been applied before as state bank currency was destroyed by a federal tax of 10 per cent.

Landlordism is the curse of Mexico, of Ireland, and of Russia. It caused the French revolution and unless it is sharply checked it will bring disaster to our own country. GEORGE E. DICKSON.

A REASONABLE STRAPHANGER.

Chicago, July 27.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Just a word, if you please, from one of the straphangers who would rather dig down for a 5 cent fare than 8 any time, and yet realizes that the street railroad company ought to be given half a chance at least. Doing business at the old prewar prices is just as great an impossibility for the traction company as for any other concern or institution.

We are told, and it is a fact, that the dollar of yesterday is worth but 50 cents and less today. Then by the same token the 5 cent fare of yesterday amounts to but 2½ cents today.

Personally I do not own a single share of street railroad stock. I simply pay my fare and take my chances on getting to and from my home and office, as do thousands of others. And I am willing to pay the increased fare until conditions are again such as will allow a reduction and guarantee existence.

That's why I cannot find it in my heart to sympathize even a little bit with the attitude of Chester E. Cleveland in the present fight against the street railroad company. To me it doesn't appear at all fair. GEORGE J. MEYER.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"Mrs. Warren's Daughter" [Macmillan], by Sir Harry Johnston.
"The Rescue" [Doubleday-Page], by Joseph Conrad.
"Mrs. Craddock" [Doran], by Somerset Maugham.
"Marqueray's Duel" [McBride], by Anthony Pryde.
"The House of Baltazar" [John Lane], by William J. Locke.
"The Third Window" [Houghton-Mifflin], by Anne Douglas Sedgwick.

NONFICTION.

"White Shadows in the South Seas" [Century], by Frederick O'Brien.
"The Land of the Blessed Virgin" [Knopf], by Somerset Maugham.
"Rather Like" [Lippincott], by Jules Cautier.

Last week's six best circulators in the public library were:

"This Side of Paradise," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"The Economic Consequences of the Peace," by John Maynard Keynes.
"Now It Can Be Told," by Philip Gibbs.
"The Rescue," by Joseph Conrad.
"Woman Triumphant," by Blasco Ibanez.

"ENSLAVED" is the title of John Masefield's new volume of poetry, a peculiarly appropriate title in a metaphorical sense, for, even more than in his youth, John Masefield is enslaved by beauty. The long narrative poem which gives the name to the volume is the epic of a mediæval love which took its victims into slavery and out again into the joy of freedom and the hawthorn blossom of Maytime.

It is the old English ballad made gracious by a beauty of observation. The ballad in its early form was merely a statement of facts. In Masefield's hands it becomes a chronicle of vibrant life. There is something just a little sad about this volume, something less of the fire of youth, of the surge of the sea fever, something more of the peace of old age and the comfort of a hearth. The spirit of the entire volume is essenced in "On Growing Old," one of the most beautiful poems which John Masefield ever wrote, a plea for the memory of the beauty of fire from the beauty of embers. Two stanzas of the lovely double sonnet are:

Be with me, Beauty, for the fire is dying;
My dog and I are old, too old for roving;
Man, whose young passion sets the spindrift flying,
Is soon too lame to march, too cold for loving.

Beauty, have pity, for the strong have power,
The rich their wealth, the beautiful their grace,
Summer of man its sunlight and its flower,
Springtime of man all April in a face.

From a letter which I have just received there is this illuminating paragraph about Aldous Huxley, the author of that remarkable book "Limbo"—not "Bimbo," as it was printed in the Tabloid in flaming letters.

"I'm interested to see that Aldous Huxley's stuff is to be done over here. He's a rather extraordinary person from what I can learn about him, young, not over 25, I believe, somewhat of a prodigy intellectually, like his own Richard Greenow, disillusioned to an unusual degree even in this day of disillusioned youngsters.

"He was at Oxford when the war broke out, and, not strong enough to serve in any way, stayed on there until the armistice. A friend offers a pretty theory about him—that, without scientific preoccupation of any kind to engage his attention, he was simply forced to watch the world go mad while he perforce stayed sane. The result is a pitiable bitterness and, because unbelieving, an equally pitiable preoccupation with sex—as if when every other illusion had gone he had said to himself, desire at least is real and important.

"But he doesn't believe it. You can see that in his story 'Happily Ever After,' in 'Limbo,' or in the play 'Happy Families,' where he makes of lust a capering, half witted savage. It is evident in all of his poems, too, most of which will probably be included in 'Leda.' Of course, his work is 'unhealthy' and as yet he seems never to be quite sure what he's driving at. Give him a few years, though, and the courage to admit to himself that even if he doesn't believe in anything life remains amusing—really to admit it, not merely to pose as believing it—and you may find him becoming a first class ironist."

James Branch Cabell is at work on a new story which will probably be published next spring. It is the story of King Manuel, father of Etarre [of "The Cream of the Jest"], and of Countess Dorothy, Jurgen's first love. Some one says that Mr. Cabell is keeping an extra careful watch upon his hero to see that he does not emulate the conduct of the unfortunate young man who almost became his son-in-law.

An "emergency committee" in New York, composed of Edward Hale Bierstadt, Sidney Howard, and Barrett H. Clark, have just prepared a report "Jurgen and the Censor" which should be of interest to any one concerned with the freedom of literature. The report contains an account of the activities of the Society for the Suppression of Vice in relation to the suppression of Jurgen, contributions by Cabell, Gilbert Cannan, and others, and correspondence upon the subject from such men as George Moore, Hugh Walpole, H. L. Mencken, Sinclair Lewis, Christopher Morley, and others. There will also be a contribution by Mr. John S. Sumner, the secretary of the vice society, outlining the society's attitude toward Jurgen and other impugned works.

One of the most interesting of the pamphlets announced for immediate publication by B. W. Huebsch is an American reprint of the London Nation's widely discussed American supplement, in which there were five papers, each by an authority on as many phases of current American thought. Morris R. Cohen wrote on "American Philosophy," Francis Hackett on "American Fiction," Joel E. Spingarn on "American Criticism," Padraic Colum on "American Poetry," and H. L. Mencken on "Chicago as a Literary Center."

"Sporting Rifles and Rifle Shooting," by John Caswell, late a major in the ordnance department of the A. E. F., has some interesting illustrations, which include a series of photographs showing the vital spots of the big game animals. Cross marks where bullet entered is guaranteed each hunter who remembers these pictures. The book is a manual of sporting rifles and rifle shooting, target and game—most of which is lost on such lay readers as I am, for instance. The pictures would fascinate any one, however.

"If You Don't Write Fiction" is a useful little handbook by Charles Phelps Cushing for those who want to write special articles for newspapers and magazines. It tells how to prepare a manuscript, how to take photographs, how to judge the sort of place where your "story" will be acceptable, and gives a cheerful record of Mr. Cushing's own experiences in writing other than fiction.

Susan Glaspell, whose "The Glory of the Conquered" is one of the best stories of the University of Chicago which has ever been written, has for the last few years been one of the pillars of that parthenon of dramatic art, the Provincetown players, and the plays in this volume were all written for them, and were produced either at the Wharf theater in Provincetown or at the little theater in MacDougal street which kept its artistic integrity by admitting only members of the association, and never sold out the house to speculators except for such moral and upright purposes as to provide a Roman holiday for a Sunday school in Brooklyn. The Provincetown players is one of the most worth while experiments in the field of amateur dramatics—and the most successful thus far.

"Plays," by Susan Glaspell, is destined for the shelf of drama in any one's library who pretends to keep that shelf up to date.

Beg Your Pardon: Last week I confided the title of the new Johan Bojer book as "Thirst." It's to be called "Life."

"Interim," the fifth volume of Dorothy Richardson's "Pilgrimage," is now available for those who are enmeshed in the story of Miriam Henderson's life.

The "Visions and Beliefs in the West of Ireland" have been collected and arranged by Lady Gregory, whose work has been introduced and annotated by William Butler Yeats. These two volumes are an exceptionally thorough and representative study of the psychic sensitiveness in Ireland and are of inestimable value to any one who wants really to understand something that is hauntingly present in every bit of Irish art.

"On a Passing Frontier" is a collection of sketches of the old cowboy days by Frank B. Linderman. They are not even short stories, so short and so barren of technique are they, but they do preserve—in the merest sketchy incidents—the spirit of the days which are alive only in the movies. There are a few grim stories, a few very funny ones, and practically every one of them could be worked over into a longer and more thrilling story if the author cared about doing it. As they are, the sketches are to a regular short story what an artist's sketch pad notes are to his real work. Sometimes those notes are of more real value than the finished picture.

"The War, the World, and Wilson" is the modest title of George Creel's latest book. "How We Advertised America" was the outpouring of Mr. Creel's heart immediately preceding—by a few weeks—his latest. The methods which he used as head of the bureau of public information are disclosed in the first and repracticed in the second book. He certainly "advertises" Wilson and his relations with the war and the world.

An anthology of the "Great Modern American Stories" was made by William Dean Howells before his death. The volume contains just the sort of stories one would expect him to choose, thoroughly representative American ones, most of them of a generation past in thought, but all of them classics in their own right.

You will be surprised to find such men as Charles Warren Stoddard and Ambrose Bierce in the list, men very little known and each of them unrivaled in this special field, beside such obvious eligibles as Sarah Orne Jewett and Francis Bret Harte. This anthology gives little heed to the extremely "modern" American story—O. Henry, for instance, does not appear among the twenty-four short story writers represented, though Theodore Dreiser, Henry B. Fuller, Edith Wyatt, and George Ade do.

Not the least attractive part of the book is the gentle, reminiscential introduction in which Mr. Howells tells why he chose each one of the stories.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

TO LUCASTA, ON GOING TO THE WARS.
By Richard Lovelace.

Tell me not, Sweet, I am unkind,
That from the nunnery
Of thy chaste breast and quiet mind,
To war and arms I fly.

True, a new mistress now I chase,
The first foe in the field;
And with a stronger faith embrace
A sword, a horse, a shield.

Yet this inconstancy is such
As you, too, shall adore;
I could not love thee, Dear, so much,
Loved I not Honor more.

Mandel Brothers

Furniture floor, the seventh.

31st August sale—greatest of them all:

Million dollar furniture stock
—reductions up to fully one-third

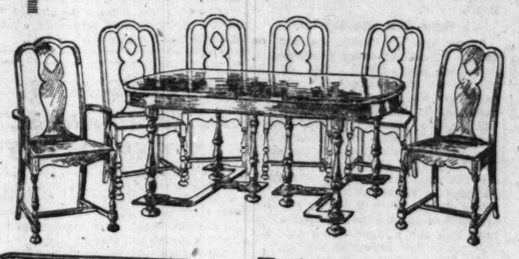
The superb "quality" of Mandel furniture—the artistically correct design, expert cabinetwork and beautiful finish—lend supreme interest to the moderation of August sale prices. Exceedingly advantageous purchases from Grand Rapids' premier furniture factories, account in large measure, for the great number and exceptional attractiveness of August's furniture values. Furniture floor, the seventh.

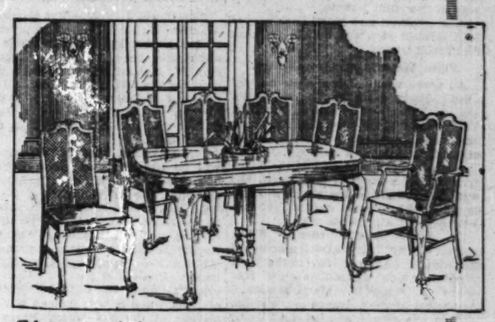
Experienced shoppers will particularly appreciate the comprehensiveness of the collections—and the thoroughgoing fashion in which lower prices have been applied to entire suites for living room, breakfast room, dining room, library, bedroom and sun parlor, and to separate pieces adapted for every room in the home.

The August specials illustrated and described below are but a few out of hundreds equally attractive.



Tudor dining suite, 7 pieces, $205

—designed by our own artists, built under our personal supervision and beautifully finished in Jacobean oak. We were fortunate to secure an additional consignment of dining suites in this favored design, to offer at the same low prices.

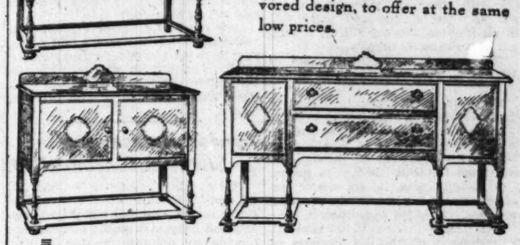


Chippendale 7-piece suite, 247.50
—finished in rich walnut

Very unusual value in an exceptionally attractive dining suite, comprising an oblong table, 48x60 inches, with 8 ft. extension, five side chairs and one arm chair with blue leather seats; as sketched above. Seventh floor.

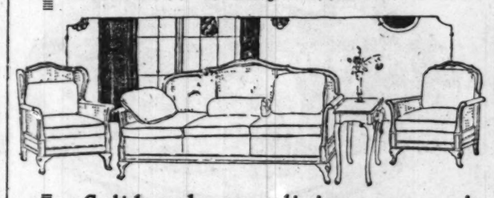
Overstuffed living room suite, $398

Davenport and chair, constructed with loose, spring filled cushions and spring edge, large arms and soft spring back that affords the utmost comfort. Available in a wide choice of rich velours. The sketch suggests the beauty of this suite. The value is very much superior to most you will encounter at anywhere near the price.



The Tudor suite sketched above

includes oblong table, 48x60 inches, extending to 8 feet; five side chairs and one arm chair with wood panel backs and blue leather seats. The suite is also available in mahogany, with cane backed chairs—7 pieces, $215. Tudor buffet to match, in oak, 72 inches long, $185; in 66-inch length, $150; china cabinet, $119; serving table, $95.



Solid mahogany living room suite

Queen Anne suite of cane and mahogany, upholstered in velour and with loose spring filled cushions. Davenport, $222; arm chair or rocker, $114; high back wing chair, 90.50. Rocker is not pictured.

3-piece fiber sun parlor suite, $90

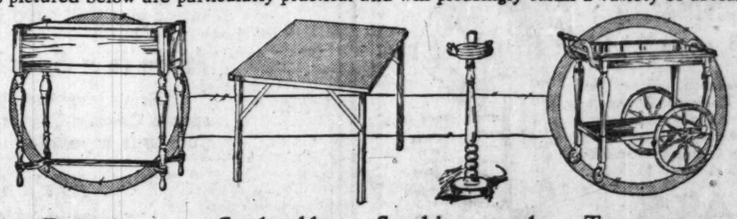
An attractive, well built suite finished in ivory enamel and fitted with loose cushion spring seats, upholstered in colorful cretonne. The settee, $40; the arm chair, 29.75; the rocker, 29.75. See the sketch. Seventh floor.

Queen Anne bedroom suite

—finished in walnut or brown mahogany; artistically emphasing the prominent characteristics of the Queen Anne period. Dresser, $161; full or twin size bed, $86; vanity dresses, 153.50; dressing table, $99; chiffonier, $116.

A miscellany of smaller pieces at August sale prices

The pieces pictured below are particularly practical and will pleasingly fulfill a variety of useful purposes.



Ferneries at 5.95

In William and Mary design; attractively finished in brown mahogany or Jacobean oak.

Card tables at 2.48

Smoking stands at 2.48

Finished in mahogany; with tray and matchbox holder. See the above sketch.

Tea wagons at 21.25

Of brown mahogany, in Queen Anne design; with rubber tired wheels, and tray.

We cannot accept telephone, C. O. D. or mail orders for the card tables, ferneries, tea wagons or stands.

Other interesting August furniture specials, not illustrated

The pieces mentioned below typify many more which space makes it impossible to describe or illustrate.

Child's wood crib, 8.75
—well made, with drop side, and finished in white or ivory enamel; size 24x46. Same style, size 27x51, 10.75.

Maple porch sets, 16.70
—made of seasoned maple, strongly constructed, with flat back and seat. Chair or rocker, 3.98; settee, 8.75.

Reed ferneries, 8.75
—made of genuine reed, with 8 x 28 inch metal pan; nicely finished in attractive shade of brown. August special.

BOGOTA VISITOR DIES IN TRIANGLE CLIMAX IN N. Y.

Chorus Girl and Other Man Wounded.

New York, July 31.—[Special.]—Dr. José Arenas of Bogota, Colombia, reputed to be wealthy, was shot and killed in his living rooms at 116 West Seventieth street shortly before 6 o'clock tonight.

Miss Ruth Jackson, 20, a chorus girl of 129 West One Hundred and Third street, was slightly wounded in the right breast with a bullet. She was taken to Roosevelt hospital by Ignacio Marti, whose address was unknown to the police late tonight. Marti also had a slight flesh wound in the right arm.

Three bullets penetrated the body of Dr. Arenas. Two separated by about an inch were in the left breast. One was in the right temple.

Miss Jackson and Marti both agreed that Arenas sent the bullets at them and killed himself.

Fatal Wounds at Close Range.

All three wounds were close contact ones. There were powder stains on the dead man's shirt and in his hair. The police said the wounds on the man and woman apparently were caused by shots from the same revolver.

According to the story told the detectives by Miss Jackson and Marti, she and Marti went to the doctor's room to get some articles of clothing she had left there on a previous visit.

Dr. Arenas said to them, "Won't you sit down?" Miss Jackson accepted the invitation and sat down in the front window, which was about eight feet above the sidewalk. Marti remained standing near the entrance to the room.

Then the doctor accompanied Juan Maldano of 21 West Sixty-fifth street to the front steps as the latter departed.

The doctor came back to the dresser at the rear of his alcove room, which, separated from the living room by portieres, contained his bed. He opened the third drawer from the top and a revolver shot sounded immediately afterwards.

Saved by Feigning Death?

Miss Jackson arose from her chair near the open window, clutched her hand over her left breast, and sank back again. Marti thought she had been killed and tossed a rug over her body. Miss Jackson, the police say, asserted that she knew she had been slightly wounded, but thought it best to feign death.

A second report was heard and this time a bullet grazed Marti's right breast. He leaped from the open window and ran down the street—"looking for a taxi," he told the police. As he went out the window, Marti says, he heard three more shots.

Marti found a taxi within the block and returned to the house, picked up Miss Jackson, and carried her out. He told the taxi driver to hurry to the nearest hospital.

Questioned further by detectives Marit said that Dr. Arenas had shot Miss Jackson and tried to kill him before he destroyed himself because of jealousy. He said the doctor was very fond of Miss Jackson and objected to his attentions to her. He was still being questioned at a late hour tonight.

Mutilated Collars Puzzle Sleuths.

A peculiar feature of the tragedy was that a half dozen varicolored collars such as are worn mostly in summer with soft shirts were found on the floor, each collar cut as if with sharp scissors or a knife. Whether or not this indicated that someone had started to destroy Dr. Arenas' clothing in a rage before the shooting, detectives hadn't decided tonight.

Miss Jackson told the police she was an actress, and the wife of an auto salesman who is now in Toledo, O.

An examination of the body revealed that Dr. Arenas, although a slim young man, wore corsets.

TWO STORY FALL KILLS BABY.

Eleanor Striffel, 20 months old, who fell from a second floor porch at her parents' home, 2931 Lowe avenue, Friday night, died yesterday.

YOUNG JOURNALIST AT HEAD OF UNITED PRESS ASSOCIATIONS

New York, July 31.—The election of William Waller Hawkins as president of the United Press Associations was announced here today. He succeeds Roy W. Howard, who has been president for the last eight years, and who resigned to become general business director of the Scripps-McRae League of Newspapers. The change is effective Aug. 1.

Mr. Hawkins, who is 37 years old, will be the youngest chief executive of any of the world's great press associations. He is a native of Springfield, Mo., where he did his first newspaper work. For several years he worked under Col. Henry Watterson on the Louisville Courier-Journal.

From there he joined the old Publishers' Press and participated in the organization of the United Press Associations when it was formed out of a merger of the Publishers' Press and Scripps-McRae Press association in 1907.

MEN WHO MOPPED 'EM UP TO SHOW HOW IT WAS DONE

First Division Circus to Be Here Aug. 19.

The First Division circus is headed this way with every device known to modern warfare except gas. The city authorities, while feeling very kindly to the soldier boys' own show, thought the gas might get loose and become engaged in a brawl with the stockyards smell, which would take away interest from the main show.

The 1st division made a tremendous hit with their circus on the Rhine. They even took it to Cologne and made the British laugh and the Germans forget their troubles, and had the time of their lives. This same show is the one the 1st is bringing to Chicago, plus a big battle feature they call "Over the Top."

Some Real Mopping Up.

"Over the Top" will be put on as the windup of every performance, in which more than 1,000 of the pick of the 1st division will show Chicago for the first time what things were actually like "Over There." There will be two trenches, one of doughboys, and the other of imitation Jerries. Star shells will make "No Man's Land" as light as day, and you can see the engineers cutting the wires and making ready for a drive.

The doughboys will annoy the Jerries with machine guns and bombs that have had the stinger taken out, but that make fine fireworks display.

The 6th and 7th field artillery will lay down a barrage with genuine exploding shells, but they won't hurt anybody. Then the doughboys, led by ten battle scarred tanks, will go over the top with the bayonet, take the Jerry trenches and mop up.

Also—a Regular Circus.

But that is not all the show. Mercy, no. It's a regular three ring circus with all kinds of trick riding and acrobatic work. The headquarters troops of the 1st division, the champion monkey drill outfit in the regular army, will do their stunts, and there will be all kinds of cowboy riding, roping, and miscellaneous stunts.

The circus is coming to Chicago on Aug. 19 to play two weeks at White City.

The circus is given to complete the fund which is being raised to build a battle monument to the 1st division in Arlington cemetery at Washington. The 1st division went all through the war from Chateau Thierry to Sedan. The division was in six major engagements and a multitude of small ones and had 49,000 casualties.

Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, in command of the 1st division in France and still commanding, will come to Chicago to take general charge of the circus.

FOUR GENERATIONS HELP CELEBRATION OF GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Markus.

For thirty-two years Mr. and Mrs. Charles Markus have resided at 1737 Augusta street. Last night their home was visited by nine children, nine grandchildren, and one great-grandchild, who helped them celebrate the golden anniversary of their wedding.

Mr. Markus has been a resident of Chicago since 1855, has always lived on the west side, and has seen the "village" grow from a population of 28,250 to its present grandeur. Mrs. Markus has lived here since 1864.

PICTURES POINT TO "FERNANDEZ" AS "GENE LEROY"

Detroit, Mich, July 31.—[Special.]—Detectives here are convinced, they say, of the identity of "Eugene Leroy" and the "Oscar J. Fernandez," sought in Saltillo, Mex., as a suspect in the "trunk murder mystery."

This assertion today followed comparison of photographs sent from San Antonio, Tex., and declared to be a good likeness of "Fernandez," and the recollection of several persons who had known "Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Leroy" when they lived at 105 Harper avenue, the address from which the trunk containing the mutilated body of "Mrs. Leroy" was sent to New York, where it was found a week ago in an express company warehouse.

Patrolman Leo Trumbull, his wife, and others who visited the "Leroys" frequently saw the photographs and said "That's Leroy."

Now there is a rumor current that "Fernandez" is the man's real name, that he is the son of a former Mexican official, and that it will be "impracticable" to extradite him, as the Mexicans would not deliver him to U. S. agents.

Vandals Deface Lincoln Statue at Cincinnati, O.

Cincinnati, O., July 31.—Chas. A. Wilson, a teacher at the Avondale public school, reported today that vandals had defaced a statue of Abraham Lincoln by painting its face. The World War Veterans today organized a patrol to search for those who defaced the statue.

AUTOISTS, HERE'S CHANCE TO GIVE KIDS REAL SPORT

500 Cars Needed for Orphans' Outing.

Want to help give the orphan children of Chicago an outing? If you do, lend the use of your automobile to the Orphans' Automobile Day association on Tuesday, Aug. 10, when 3,500 youngsters and 600 old folks in the institutions of the city will be guests at the sixteenth annual outing of the association.

After an automobile ride through the business section of the city the guests will be taken over the boulevard route to Lincoln park, just north of Grant's monument, where the fun for the day will take place.

Five Hundred Machines Needed.

Five hundred automobiles will be needed to convey the children and the old people from the many homes to the park and back again. The cars will be in use approximately between 9 a. m. and noon and again between 3:30 and 5 p. m.

Volunteers who care to register their cars for service are requested by H. N. Fowler, president, to write to Charles E. Gregory, chairman of the transportation committee, 2257 South Michigan avenue.

A Day of Real Sport.

Besides the automobile ride, the children will be provided with luncheon, ice cream cones, candy, flags, noise makers, and rubber balls. There will be games and races, and there will be a trained dog show, Punch and Judy show, and gymnastic performers from vaudeville shows.

The Chicago band will furnish music and playground apparatus will be erected on the ground for the youngsters for their entertainment after they have experienced all the other joys.

KIDNAPER AGAIN READY TO RETURN COUGHLIN BABY?

Norristown, Pa., July 31.—[Special.]—Blakely Coughlin, the 13 months' old baby stolen from his crib at Norristown two months ago, was not returned to his parents because the $12,000 hidden for the kidnaper by George Coughlin, the father, fell into the wrong hands.

This was intimated in a letter which Mr. Coughlin has received from "the crank" making a new offer. The father has accepted the terms made by the kidnaper and hopes that at last his child is about to be restored to him.

Mr. Coughlin was instructed in this latest letter to indicate his willingness to abide by the kidnaper's condition in an advertiseemnt inserted in a newspaper. He already has done this, but without result thus far.

GOING TO FUNERAL, KILLS MAN.

Kankakee, Ill., July 31.—Henry Bade, 77 years old, of Bradley was run over and instantly killed by an automobile driven by Z. Papineau, a farmer, who came to town to attend a funeral. As the procession left the church for the cemetery, going through the main business section, Papineau, carrying the priest, who was eager to get to the cemetery ahead of the procession, turned out and Bade stepped in front of the car.

WORKERS POOL SURPLUS TO PLAY PONZI SCHEME

Boston, Mass., July 31.—[Special.]—A full week of "Ponzi" excitement fails to find public interest abating.

Although the federal auditing of his books began yesterday, his admirers look upon him as vindicated. Many employés of the big department stores, factories, etc., have formed pools and are waiting impatiently for the chance to place the money with Ponzi on his 50 per cent in forty-five days scheme.

Edwin L. Pride, auditor in charge of the examination, said it would not be completed before the end of next week.

"I shall not make public my methods of doing business," Ponzi said tonight.

"At least for the present I shall continue to maintain my secret. Some time I may tell how I did business, but it would be manifestly unfair to persons who have been associated with me to divulge the methods at present."

SLEEPING SICKNESS VICTIM.

Oshkosh, Wis., July 31.—August Schumann, 42 years old, died at his home in the city of Neenah today after an illness for five weeks with sleeping sickness.

'GIMME JIMMIE'; CAN YOU BEAT IT FOR A SLOGAN?

That's Just One of Many Good Ones in Contest.

"Gimme Jimmie."

With that snappy slogan the Democrats can romp to victory says W. W. Swink of Elmhurst, who sent it in yesterday to be entered in THE TRIBUNE'S campaign slogan contest. It arrived with a thousand other catch phrases, some for Harding and others for Cox.

C. J. Kugel, a discharged soldier, contributed one for Harding that brings back the war. "You tell 'em Harding—they sent me to Siberia," the slogan reads. Kugel is positive Harding would never send him that far from home without cause.

Among others received are:

"Back to earth with Harding."—H. G. Gilmore, 30 North Dearborn street.

"Cox will preserve the peace that America shed her blood for."—M. F. Quinn, Blue Island.

"No more foreign guarding if you vote for Warren Harding."—H. M. Legler, 7648 Eastlake terrace.

There were many, many others.

Remember, slogan contributors, that there is plenty of time and plenty of room for more. Send them along. Keep them short. Twelve words are enough.

Send one that will be picked up by everybody. Do you remember the popularity of the "Wilson—he kept us out of war"? Send in one to beat that and you will cop the prize.

HISS OF BRITON CAUSES RIOT AT MANNIX SAILING

5,000 Cheer Archbishop at Baltic's Pier.

New York, July 31.—[Special.]—Archbishop Daniel Mannix of Melbourne, sailed at 1 p. m. today on the White Star Liner Baltic for Ireland. There were fully 5,000 men and women at Pier 60, North River, foot of West Twenty-first street, including 2,000 outside with the Sixty-ninth regiment band.

For one solid hour, despite the intense heat, the enthusiastic crowd on the pier cheeher Archbishop Mannix as he stood beside Eamonn De Valera on the promenade deck.

At noon an imprudent Englishman, who had become annoyed at the placards carried by the crowd on the pier, leaned over the rail and hissed just after the archbishop had boarded the liner. The longshoremen working on the baggage heard it and went for him at once with wild yells. He was James Shaw, a coal operator of Leeds, in Yorkshire, and he had red hair and wore spectacles, but he did not take the attack made upon him lying down and put up a good fight.

Not Room for All.

His wife, who stood beside him on the deck, took his part and tried to save her husband from injury. Fifteen of the longshoremen got to the promenade deck and others climbed down from the boat deck to assist them, but, fortunately for Shaw, there was not room for them all to get at him.

The archbishop was not on the deck when the excitement was at its height, but came from the salon campionway just as the longshoremen were trying to use Shaw, who was still fighting, as a sweeper.

His efforts, combined with detectives and the assistance of the ship's officers, stopped the fray, and Shaw and his wife were rushed into the deck pantry and locked up for safety until the Baltic had left its pier.

A crowd of longshoremen from other piers had mustered on the lower piers after 12 o'clock when they knocked off work to be in readiness in case the crew of the Baltic had refused to sail the ship and tried to come on shore.

Placards Anger Shaw.

Some of the placards which roused the ire of Shaw, the red haired Yorkshireman, read: "Lloyd George, you admit American public opinion counts —rights." "God has defined the boundaries of Ireland," which was accompanied by a map done in green to emphasize the action of Deity in surrounding it with water. Another placard read: "Independence for Ireland or the world in a blaze."

The cheering that greeted Archbishop Mannix was more enthusiastic than anything heard on the Chelsea piers before. American and Irish flags were waved all the time, especially by the women.

When President De Valera stood on the deck with the archbishop it was whispered that he was going to sail for Ireland, but at the last whistle he started to come down the gangway to the pier.

Working for Peace.

It took fully five minutes for the archbishop and De Valera, with Bourke Cochran, to get to the gate and in the struggle he was cut off from the priests and members of the party who came with him from Archbishop Hayes' house.

After reaching the deck of the ship, Archbishop Mannix gave out a statement to the reporters. He declared that he really was working for peace in Ireland, inside and outside the British empire. He said the peace he hoped for "is a peace, not resting on force, but on justice and the free will of the people concerned."

CITY HALL MAKES CONQUERINGHERO OUT OF "BIG TIM"

"Big Tim" Murphy came home to the city hall yesterday and was welcomed as an old pal snatched from the grave.

Before the former dictator of the city white wings had completed his triumphal tour of the city offices he had laid the foundations for his return to recognition as the representative of the city street sweepers, the position he held when his career was interrupted by the death of "Moss" Enright.

On the question of whether he or "Buck" Lynch, who assumed control of the white wings when Murphy went to jail, is to be recognized "at the hall" Big Tim was brief and to the point.

"I've got the men, that's all I need," he declared. "Lynch has a charter, but what good's a charter without the men? I can deliver. That's what the city hall wants."

Office boys and department heads joined in extending the glad hand to Murphy. No questions were asked about the death of Enright and nothing was said of Tim's sojourn on the north side. The city hall merely was glad that the young labor chief, who can tell stories and sling slang in a way that makes the city hall laugh, was back again.

In spite of reports that Enright's friends were "after" Murphy, the latter had no friends along to guard him. As soon as he entered the first floor the words, "There's Tim Murphy" were on every lip, and by the time he had reached the second floor where he was welcomed by a dozen aldermen, there were twenty-five curiosity seekers and hero worshipers with him.

From there he went to the fifth floor, passed the time of day with clerks in the mayor's office, and dropped down to the office of Commissioner of Public Works Charles R. Francis, who must recognize him if he is to be taken back as guardian of the white wings' destinies.

After a five minute talk with Murphy Mr. Francis indicated that Murphy will be recognized if he has the backing of his men.

"I don't know who has the street sweepers' charter, and I don't care," said Mr. Francis. "It's the men that count. The city is paying $5.65 for street sweepers and they are scarce at that. I'll deal with any man who can bring me men. As for Murphy, he has always been square with me."

Murphy declared that the original charter of the street sweepers' union from the A. F. of L. was lost many months ago, and that Lynch obtained a renewal of it on payment of $2.

ENVOY OF CHINA BACKS U. S. BLOW IN PACIFIC TRADE

Only What British and Japs Did.

BY J. B. POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

SHANGHAI, July 29.—Thomas R. Jernigan, former consul and American judge, representative for China at The Hague tribunal for twenty years and leading corporation lawyer here, in an interview widely published in China, approves of the recent congressional action for a hundred per cent American merchant marine, which is the chief object of news in the far east now.

The interview traces the development of both British and Japanese shipping in this part of the world and says America has ample precedent in British laws for the last half century whereby the British merchant marine carefully was nurtured and protected. He says England became a world-wide empire through protected shipping, and Great Britain has no kick, if America seeks to protect her own.

Jap Claimed Pacific.

"There is no reason," he says, "why the most resourceful and productive nation of the world should not have ships on the seas to carry to foreign parts products of American farms and factories, and to bring to the home ports cargoes from other lands.

"So long as the Japanese government votes huge subsidies to shipping companies, prohibits American ships from participating in Japanese intercoastal trade, handicaps American ships calling at Japanese controlled ports in China, Japan need not be surprised that its presumed right to the Pacific ocean will be successfully contested by American legislation just as effective."

Sees Return of Clipper Days.

Mr. Jernigan further declared the present law is certain to return American ships to the Pacific similar to the old period preceding the civil war, when American clippers dominated the China trade. He says every clause of the recent American enactment duplicated in British shipping laws favoring their own nationals, and hence the British, have no legitimate kick at American legislation.

"Economic War on Japan."

OSAKA, Japan, July 30.—The chamber of commerce adopted a resolution today declaring the American shipping law to be economic imperialism, under which foreign steamers, and especially Japanese, are treated unfairly. The resolution says the law is tantamount to a proclamation of economic war on Japan.

Hart, formerly vice president of the Mid-City Trust and Savings bank.

ALGONQUIN PUTS SMILES BACK IN SAMMY'S LIFE

Funds for Camp and Free Ice Are Swelled.

Sammy came back from Camp Algonquin, THE TRIBUNE'S free hospital and rest haven for poor convalescent mothers and their children, yesterday looking and feeling quite different than when he left Chicago several weeks ago.

Sammy is 11 years old and when he left his home with his mother and her three other children he hadn't strength enough even to smile.

Different Sammy Now.

But gaze on Sammy upon his return after several weeks at the camp. His face is bronzed to a healthy shade, he stands with his shoulders erect, laughs, runs about, and is already teaching the other kids in his neighborhood how to play the games he learned at Algonquin.

Through the contributions of TRIBUNE readers Sammy was able to get back on the right side of the ledger so far as his health is concerned. Others like him are also going to Algonquin through the kindness of TRIBUNE readers. But the list is even greater. If none are to be disappointed those who have not yet contributed should send in their mite at once.

Scholle's Semi-Annual Sale of Good Furniture

Hepplewhite Mahogany Bedroom Suite

Twin Beds, Dresser, Chifforobe, Dressing Table, Stand, Bench, Chair — 8 pieces — Reg. Price $1318 — Sale Price $988

YOUR interest in this special sale of Scholle furniture should be, if possible, greater than usual.

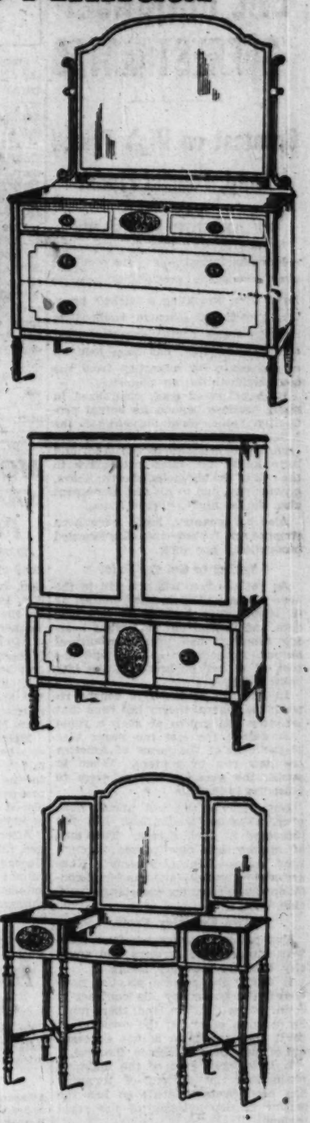
There never was a time when we were more careful to give unusual values than we are right now during this sale; the quality of our furniture is fully up to the Scholle standard and the assortment is very complete.

Orders placed now by us at the factories are on a basis of prices that would indicate little change in retail prices this year; but whatever comes you may rest assured you will not only get the best to be had, but you are certain of complete satisfaction.

Take, for example, the bedroom suite shown in our illustrations; eight pieces for $988.00, and Scholle quality through and through.



It is only fair to you to say we have only three of these suites; which means that only those who come early will have an opportunity at this unusual bargain.

Rugs

We have anything you are likely to want in fine rugs, domestic and oriental. And never forget that our rugs are sold subject to return unless they give you complete and continued satisfaction. This is a safe place to buy rugs. Come and see!

FARM TENANTRY EVIL PROBABLY OVERESTIMATED

Greatest on High Priced Land, Tourist Finds.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Sioux City, Ia., July 31.—[Special.]—Farm tenantry is one of the problems over which the production experts have been wrinkling a wicked brow. The growth of absentee landlordism in many states, particularly those east of the Mississippi, has been held up as one cause for migration from the countryside to the city factories.

High prices of land, capitalized in many sections beyond its actual productive value, have discouraged the hired man, whose ambition has always been to get a stake in the land, and have made him more responsive to the call of the big cities, shorter hours, greater pay, and to his disillusionment also, the far higher cost of living.

Also by tenantry, lands have been stripped and robbed—meaning lessened productivity per acre.

Trying to Get the Data.

As yet the theorists are still in the bog. Commissions in some states, as in Illinois, are seeking to assemble data and to find out just what bearing tenantry has upon agricultural output, farm labor supply, and the cost of a loaf of bread in the city baker's shop.

In advance of the 1920 census reports the general theory has been that tenantry has grown at such a rapid rate during the last ten years that 50 per cent of the farms of America are now run by renters. When in doubt, the guessers always seem to hoist the 50-50 flag.

Out here in the tall uncut, however, absentee landlordism has not increased at such a rate. This tour of inquiry has now passed through four states—Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska—and has found conditions as to tenantry exceedingly variable.

Two Tenantry Facts.

Two points that protrude from talks with hundreds of farmers and small city business men are these:

1. Under the general practice nowadays, the tenant by his contract is bound to fertilize the land; there must be rotation of crops; the owner sees to it that the juice is not squeezed out of his source of income, the land.

2. In a large part of the mid-west grain belt the growth of tenantry has been overestimated; so has the matter of depopulation of the rural regions.

Grows with Added Land Values.

An analysis of the figures indicates the largest increase in tenantry has come where lands are highest, most farmers in these sections retiring to live on the velvet. Where land is cheaper ownership is easier to acquire.

In some communities, such as Fremont, Neb., where land is high, we find some tenants have banked enough to start paying for high priced farms of their own. Much depends on management. Many prosperous farmers, as their bank accounts grew, have been buying farms for their sons, which is not actual tenantry. In Kansas and Nebraska, during the last two years, thousands of farmers, according to state authorities, have turned over their farms to their sons upon their discharge from service on a 50-50 basis.

The whole subject is one of vital importance, but so far little of value in the nature of a real measurement of the evils of tenantry and a formula for their remedy has been evolved.

UNCLE SAM'S R. F. D. PLAYS CUPID ROLE IN DISTANT ASIA

MISS MARY HUBBARD.

Over in Asia Minor, near Sivas, in the Cæsarea district, Uncle Sam had a rural mail delivery route for the famine stricken natives. The mailman was Charles V. Farnham, the son of Henry W. Farnham, of Wheaton, Ill.

One day there came a letter addressed to Miss Mary Hubbard, Near East Relief Expedition, Sivas. The mailman delivered it and learned she was from the U. S. A., White Plains, N. Y. After that they met often. And yesterday a letter was received from Sivas, signed by Mr. Farnham and Miss Hubbard, announcing their engagement.

MOHAMMED ALI OUTLINES INDIAN PLAN OF REVOLT

ROME, July 31.—Hohammed Ali, head of the Indian Mussulman delegation, has been received by Pope Benedict, Premier Giolitti, and Count Sforza, the foreign minister, and presented to them the aspirations of his people.

After his audience at the vatican Mohammed reported that the pontiff had heard his statement sympathetically and had expressed pleasure at the spirit of tolerance toward other religions now being shown by the Indian Mussulman.

Mohammed said his principal protest was because "England has not maintained the pledges made with respect to the holy places, having instead practically abolished the Caliphate and placed the holy places all under direct or indirect British domination."

After declaring that the "entire east has fallen into the hands of Lloyd George," Mohammed declared: "We cannot tolerate British and French mandates over places where the Mussulmans consider themselves as God's mandatories."

"Hooch" Makes Him Try to Shoot Up Sky; Arrested

James Belsky, 1615 Spring street, frightened his neighbors late yesterday, after he had imbibed freely of "hooch." Arming himself with a revolver and rifle, he went to the front porch and opened fire on the atmosphere. He was arrested.

BOY BURNED IN ALCOHOL EXPLOSION.

Charles Smaney, 8 years old, 2957 Eighty-first place, at play in an areaway, found a container of alcohol. He set a match to the can, causing it to explode. He is in a critical condition from burns on the head and body.

WOMEN'S HATS SURVIVE SOVIET LID IN RUSSIA

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, July 14.—I have been asked many times since returning from Moscow about the shops. Every one is interested in private trade, and I have had to answer every time that the only shops which remain open through all changes in government policy are the stores for women's hats. They were the first to reopen after the decree abolishing all private trade had been somewhat altered, and they weathered the April storm which resulted in the closing of the luxury shops, which had been permitted a month of trade, and the private bookshops. Their most extensive custom, according to Russian women of the middle classes, is from the wives and mistresses of government officials.

There are extensive open markets in Moscow, where the peasants are permitted to sell their goods unmolested and ask what they will. In Petrograd the market is smaller and more closely controlled. Every week, sometimes twice a week, the Red guards surround the market there, arrest the "merchants" as speculators, and the next day the same goods appear on the market again in the hands of friends of the militia. I was in Petrograd a week and twice witnessed this general "round-up."

New Privileged Class.

"It is the usual thing," said a man high in government circles to me, "and something we seem powerless to overcome. There are too many men in the party who are looking out simply for themselves. They are the new 'privileged class' of Russia.

Trading in liquor is absolutely prohibited. All stocks have been seized by the government. A small bottle of vodka can be obtained illegally for 22,000 rubles. A bottle of wine can be bought for 50,000 rubles. But that doesn't prevent the cellars of the Kremlin, home of most of the high officials of the government, from being well stocked.

On Easter eve Karl Radek entertained a small group of friends in his apartments at the Kremlin. Among them was an English journalist living at the same house I did in Moscow. He came home in a very happy state and told me of the party. Fine French wines, prewar vodka, and even English whisky had decorated the tables, and in no small qauntities, to judge from the results. All of it was from confiscated stocks.

Commissars Handle Money.

Radek and the high officials are not the only Communists who manage to obtain all the "wet goods" they want, for the cellars of Moscow in prerevolutionary times were famous, and their contents are now almost entirely in the hands of the commissars, great and small.

Trading in money is absolutely forbidden on penalty of arrest and confiscation of the money involved. I changed my money directly with a commissar, for by dealing with him directly I obtained the best value and avoided the profits of the middleman. The commissars are seeing to it that foreign money gets into the proper hands, and they immediately exchange their soviet money for other coin.

INDIA MANIFESTO SHOWS PLAN FOR BLOW AT BRITISH

BY HENRY MERCER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[By Special Cable.]

[Copyright: 1920: By the Tribune Company.]

CALCUTTA, July 26.—The chief agency of unrest in India, the Khilafat committee, has sent out a manifesto to the people of India with reference to the proposed general strike and boycott against Great Britain. This manifesto is being circulated throughout all India so far heard from, particularly in the frontier provinces where bolshevik influences also have been working fever ishly.

The Khilafat committee is the executive board governing the activities of hundreds of agitators throughout the provinces. Its rallying cry is a moderating of the terms of peace with Turkey by the powers. It was started by leading Moslems of India, but today includes large numbers of other faiths.

Here Is Manifesto.

The manifesto in part says:

"The Indian Moslem members of the Khilafat committee and the non-Moslems sympathizing with them will, by way of caution, refrain from putting into operation any suggestion such as noncoöperation with the government, etc., unless and until it is made certain that no Indian, be he Moslem or non-Moslem, residing within British India or Indian states, shall take up the job resigned by his brother or shall work against the joint action.

"No good can be achieved by simply resigning the government posts, because the Indian government requires only an infinitesimal fraction, i. e., 1.7 per cent, of the population of British India.

Refuse to Pay Revenue.

"About four-fifths of the population of India are agriculturists. Unless and until we succeed in uniting the great force of Indian peasantry into one united voice of refusing to pay revenue, no good can be achieved by adopting the movement of noncoöperation.

"It will be national suicide to begin the fight half heartedly and disunitedly.

"I believed in the satyagarha movement. I believe in the noncoöperation, but let us first make calculation that at least one-third of the population will join us before we determine to take the serious step.

"The alternative course by which we may achieve our object in the long run and be able to compensate the loss of Turkey is to educate the masses not to use goods produced or manufactured in those countries who have joined in sealing the fate of Turkey, and to use instead those produced or manufactured in Turkey and India.

"MANCHERSA D. LAVANGIA,
"Vice President Khilafat Subcommittee."

The 8 Leverages of Profit in the Waterbury Investment

There are leverages in business that correspond to the leverages in mechanics. These leverages are what determine profits and consequent success of industrial enterprises. As this investment is a business investment for a business man, we herewith set forth the leverages that we are employing in the building of this business, that he may determine for himself the soundness of the principles underlying the business itself and the principle on which it depends for its success.

The Money-Making Leverages of the Waterbury Investment

In this investment, like in all other big volume organization investments, the leverage is applied to create volume of profit and the increment of increase in volume in the product and that which creates it. In addition to the fact, that grapefruit land is the most valuable of all horticultural lands, and the further facts that in Manatee County, Florida, there are the largest grapefruit propositions in the world and the most successful ones, and that the James L. Waterbury Company lands are in the heart of this section of all grapefruit districts, there is the further fact that this company has so applied leverages to the creation of this investment in the growing and marketing of grapefruit that the consequent money advantage to each investor has been increased as it has in no other horticultural investment of which we have any knowledge.

Leverage No. 1

The success of the factory and the mill rests upon the expert supervision in each department given by men who know their business. In the growing of grapefruit it is necessary that one hundred thousand cars—the services of men who have grown old in the grapefruit industry, who know soil, climate, trees and the care of the trees, men who know fruit and the care of fruit. Such men are able to demand large salaries—salaries that the individual could not afford to pay. $300,000 per year will buy the services of a score of experts who will devote their entire time to the care and direction of this proposition. If an individual attempted to bring a ten acre grove to cultivation—a grove that would be worth $25,000 when in full bearing—he would feel in duty bound to employ a superintendent who would draw at least $2,500 a year. However, he could not employ twenty experts, each of whom would draw $15,000 a year. The James L. Waterbury Company, however, can employ these high grade men for him, and their services to him will cost only $300 per year—$2,000 less than he would pay one man of mediocre ability to superintend his grove. This saving of $2,200 a year plus the giving to each grove expert supervision—the best that money can buy—is the first great leverage of profit in this investment.

Leverage No. 2

The expert supervision of such men as we have mentioned in the preceding paragraph—men able to earn $15,000 a year—will earn a better balanced soil, healthier trees, capable of greater production, better quality of fruit and more of it. This, of course, means higher price for the product and a greater volume of production from each tract—or more net profit to each grove owner.

Leverage No. 3

The price of grapefruit on the market depends upon the grade of fruit. Therefore the better the quality of fruit grown, the greater will be the price obtained. It is only by the intelligent supervision of horticultural experts that fruit can be grown free from blemish so that it will grade high. The mediocre or poor quality grapefruit and oranges that we see on the market are the result of neglect, bad management, and ignorance of soil and horticultural principles. The James L. Waterbury Investment, founded on the supervision of the greatest grapefruit experts in the world, guarded and protected by scientifically trained men who are devoting all their time to this enterprise, means for the investor something that he could not buy for himself as an independent grower. When "Waterbury Grapefruit" is established on the market there can be no question that it will be as superior to the grapefruit world as the "Sunkist" orange is in the orange world. Manatee County grapefruit is inherently today the world's best grapefruit. By expert supervision and care it can be made better grapefruit than it is today, grapefruit that can be graded not only as to size but as to weight and appearance. Such grapefruit should command a market price far in excess of the grapefruit grown in other sections, or under other conditions.

Leverage No. 4

It is a well established fact that the larger the operation the lower the unit cost of labor. The systematizing and specializing of the different lines of work will automatically reduce labor costs. The automobile manufacturer that turns out one hundred thousand cars a year has a lower per unit cost of labor than the automobile concern that turns out but one thousand cars per year. The supervision, the pruning, the cultivating, the spraying of a ten thousand acre grove will give a cheaper per unit cost on the same principles of specialization. This is the fourth leverage which makes for the profit for each tract owner.

Leverage No. 5

The brand of grapefruit can be established on the market in the same way that an automobile or any other food product can be established—by proper selling and advertising campaigns. When these groves are producing four million boxes of fruit per year, a gross charge of 20c per box will give $800,000 per annum for advertising and selling expenses. This is one of the greatest leverages that any organization can have and one that has been successfully employed by the California Citrus Fruit Exchanges, the Raisin Growers' Exchange, and the Nut Growers' Exchanges of that state.

Leverage No. 6

Primarily the net earnings of each tract owner will depend upon the prices received for the fruit. Let the reader not misunderstand this statement. The James L. Waterbury Investment would be a good investment if grapefruit should in the future sell for less than it has ever sold in the past. However, grapefruit, without any advertising, without being pushed by any large sales organization, without being popularized, has won its way to the breakfast table of ten million American families in the short space of ten years. Can you conceive of the popularity of this fruit, when $800,000 per annum is being spent to tell of its uses and the uses of its by-products. Necessity will then force this big volume organization to preserve the fruit until the late summer so that the supply of grapefruit will not be limited to a few winter months. Instead of marketing the product of the whole grove during the first three or four months of the year, big, luscious, delicious, well preserved, perfect grapefruit will be available in the middle of summer. This means to each unit holder, to each investor, a higher price for his product than has ever been obtained on the open market, and this we call the sixth great leverage of profit in this particular investment.

Leverage No. 7

A lot in the heart of Edgewater is worth considerably more than a lot carved out of a hundred and sixty acre farm, twenty-five miles from Chicago. A ten acre unit in the heart of the James L. Waterbury ten thousand acre grove will be worth far more than any individual ten acre grove, no matter how successful it may be, in an isolated section of this great grapefruit district. Two things will contribute to its value—organization and location. Recently raisin grape lands in California have sold for thousands of dollars an acre, but they were lands in established raisin grape sections, and you will find that lands in the established horticultural sections of the United States all carry values that nearly stagger the imagination. It is our purpose through organization, through the high prices obtained from the products, through substantial yields obtained by expert care and management of trees and fruit, to establish as high prices as possible on the land itself, and its development for each and every tract owner. This to our mind is one of the great leverages in this investment; for this is a leverage that is the most natural one and one that has a precedent in every established horticultural section in America.

Leverage No. 8

This investment is limited to one thousand investors. There will be one thousand ten-acre tracts—no more. Over six hundred of these have already been sold. When these thousand tracts have been sold and developed, it will end the grapefruit development work of this institution. With this proposition limited to one thousand investors there should always be a liquid value in the units of this investment. Florida entertains a million and a quarter people every winter. Some of these people come to amuse themselves and some to make a profit. All of them have their eyes open to the opportunities offered by investments in this semi-tropical land. Developed grapefruit groves in the Waterbury project should, when they are bearing, command almost exorbitant figures. The hundreds of thousands who come from the north will naturally be drawn to the "greatest grapefruit grove in the world." They will come, they will see—and their desires will be conquered. Those who have looked on the prosperous groves of California, the wonderful apple orchards of the northwest, the luscious grape lands of Michigan, and the developed grapefruit enterprises of Florida, have felt the desire of ownership so strongly as to run the prices of land in these sections up to almost prohibitive figures. This market for the limited number of tracts that can be bought in the future should and will constitute the leverage of value—of increased value—the leverage that we call "the raising of intrinsic worth." As the diamond is precious because of its rarity, so the grapefruit grove that can produce such profits as the Waterbury grove should produce will also be valuable, because of their limited number.

The West Coast of Florida

The lands on and near Florida's west coast offer, to our mind, the greatest opportunity for real estate investments in America today. There is no other climate in the world just exactly like this climate. There is no other land in Florida or any other state, so gently rolling, so well drained, so peculiar in its variations, so adaptable and pleasing to the people of the middle west. Last winter hundreds of thousands of middle westerners sojourned on the west coast, and all bore very noisy testimony to the opportunities, the climate and the recreational advantages of this favored section. In offering this west coast opportunity to the people of the middle west—an opportunity backed by the big volume organization principles with leverages of profit rarely found in any investment—we feel that we are offering a most unusual opportunity for participating profits and one that is modern in its conception and progressive in its method of execution.

BORAH TO TAKE TO THE HUSTINGS FOR G. O. P. TICKET

Idaho Senator Lines Up for Harding.

Senator William E. Borah has started active work in behalf of Senator Harding and Gov. Coolidge in his own state of Idaho and has placed his services as a speaker at the disposal of the Republican national committee. This was announced at Republican national headquarters in the Auditorium hotel yesterday by Congressman James E. Good of Iowa, who will be connected with the speakers' bureau at headquarters.

It removes any doubt there might have been as to the attitude of Senator Borah and assures managers that the party will present a solid front in the campaign, with Senator Lafollette the only leader of prominence outside of the party breastworks.

Representative Good conferred with Senator Borah while he was in Idaho on an official inspection of national parks and reclamation projects.

"Senator Borah will speak for Senator Harding," said Mr. Good. "In fact, he is already taking an active part and is making a number of speeches in Idaho. He assured me he would go wherever he is assigned between now and November. He is very friendly to Senator Harding and will give enthusiastic support to the ticket."

County Judge Election Called.

Gov. Lowden yesterday issued a call for a special primary and a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of County Judge Thomas F. Scully. The special primary and the special election were called for the same dates as the regular primary and election.

Four minutes after a special deputy of Secretary of State Emmerson had delivered the governor's call at the office of County Clerk Sweitzer a petition signed by 4,150 names was filed by Edwin A. Olson as a candidate for the Republican nomination for the vacancy. This petition was accepted by the county clerk.

Earlier in the month a petition for the nomination had been filed by Frank S. Righeimer. This petition had also been accepted, although at that time the governor had called no primary or election for the Scully vacancy.

Olson's contest for the seat of Judge Scully is in the Supreme court on appeal. Pending a decision, the Brundage-Deneen forces have taken the position no special election could be called, for if Olson won there would be no vacancy. In making up their ticket they named no candidate for the place. Neither did the Democrats.

The Thompson forces, however, filed Righeimer's petition with the rest of their slate and they contend he is entitled to first place even though he filed before the election was called. However, to be sure of a place on the ballot he will file another petition tomorrow.

Chance for Democratic Harmony.

The issue of the special call affords the Democrats with an opportunity to restore the harmony which was destroyed when Michael L. Igoe filed a petition for the Democratic nomination for state's attorney against Maclay Hoyne, the slate candidate. Immediately after the call the Democrats offered the nomination for county judge to Igoe, with the view of removing him as an opponent of Hoyne.

However, Mr. Igoe did not take kindly to the offer and his friends were asked to try to induce him to accept the county judgship nomination.

Other candidates for the nomination began to appear. Among those prominently mentioned in case Igoe declines are Judge George Kersten, Francis X. Busch, and Colin C. H. Fyffe.

Smith Recognizes City Hall.

Col. Frank L. Smith, Thompson-Lundin candidate for United States senator, yesterday used his office as chairman of the Republican state central committee to give formal recognition to the Thompson county committee, in spite of the decision of the Supreme court knocking out the primary law under which it was elected.

In a letter addressed to members of all Republican committees Col. Smith holds the primary election of April, 1920, was valid; that all comitteemen elected before that date are out of office, and are "merely intruders and usurpers" if they try to act; and that no act of any convention subsequent to April, 1920, can be questioned.

William F. Kramer, Republican candidate for congressman in the Sixth district, and William J. Sheridan, Democratic candidate for state representative in the Twenty-first district, withdrew their petitions at Springfield.

CITY HALL CLAN TO OPEN 'BARREL' IN STATE FIGHT

Vast Sums to Be Spent to Elect Ticket.

Lavish expenditures of campaign funds, which, it is predicted, will be on a scale that Illinois has never experienced, are relied upon by the Thompson-Lundin machine to "put over" its state ticket.

The Lundin-Thompson state candidates open their formal campaign tomorrow at an evening meeting in Elgin, but campaign expenditures have already begun on a scale that is amazing old timers in state politics. Candidates for congress, the legislature, and even county offices have received offers from the Thompson-Lundin managers of financial aid for their influence in their respective territories.

"Go ahead and we will finance your campaign if you're with our ticket," they have been told.

Some candidates have hearkened to the offers, this explaining sudden shifts in the position taken by them on "Thompsonism."

City Hall Organ Free.

Offers made to candidates are not the only evidences of the lavishness of the Thompson-Lundin expenditures. Throughout the state voters have received letters signed by George F. Harding, former state senator and now city controller, notifying them that "The Republican," the Thompson organ, has been mailed to them free. The letters are similar to those sent out in Chicago in the spring primary campaign, except that the Chicago letters were signed by Thompson candidates for ward committeemen.

No one except those on the inside can give an even approximate figure as to what the Thompson-Lundin machine intends to spend. It is possible, however, to make an estimate.

As a witness before the senatorial committee that investigated campaign expenditures in the presidential primaries, Eugene R. Pike, a close friend of the mayor, testified that the Chicago primary fight cost about $350,000. If expenditures in the state fight are on the same scale as they were then that would mean that $1,000,000 would be needed, as the Republican vote in the entire state is about three times that in Chicago.

Wealthy Men on Ticket.

Stupendous as is this sum, it is not believed it will stagger the Thompson-Lundin machine. In addition to being well fortified in Chicago, it is especially fortunate in the selection of the candidates on its state ticket.

Two of the wealthiest of the Illinois state bankers are among them. Len Small, Thompson-Lundin candidate for governor, is owner of a chain of banks in some of the most prosperous cities in Illinois. Col. Frank L. Smith, on the same slate for United States senator, is also a banker and one of the wealthiest farm land owners in the state.

TWENTY HURT IN TRAIN CRASH.

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 31.—A score of persons were injured today in the wreck of a passenger train on the Oregon Short Line near Downey, Idaho, according to telephone reports received here by railroad officials. The train was said to have been derailed while traveling at high speed.

Gardening Class

The summer school of the Chicago Normal college, which had the largest enrollment of any previous year, will close tomorrow. Five hundred and eighty-two teachers and principals, nearly all Chicagoans, attended the five weeks' course.

It takes from twenty to thirty years to make a perfect teacher, according to Superintendent of Schools Mortenson, who spoke at the closing exercises yesterday. Supt. Mortenson said that to keep really fit a teacher should take special courses every year.

Supt. Mortenson declared that pupils of today did not seem as bright as those of twenty years ago, because only a few specially bright children from each grammar school graduating class went to the high schools in former years. He said that many children of years ago never completed the eighth grade. Consequently common school graduates and high school students were nearly all bright. Today, he said, practically all grade school graduates go into the high schools.

Part of yesterday's exercises was an exhibition by the class in agriculture and nature study operating a walking tractor, or "iron mule." The graduates will have charge of home garden work in the various schools.

SEEK NEW GRAND JURY ACTION ON KITTREDGE CASE

Foreman Tells Why a 'No Bill' Was Voted.

With the swearing in of the August grand jury tomorrow, efforts to reopen the murder charge against Ben W. Kittredge, Evanston millionaire, will be pressed by Mitchell Kagan, whose 17 year old boy Frank was killed by Kittredge's new $8,000 automobile.

A coroner's jury held Kittredge for murder, but the grand jury released him.

The state's attorney said the case was dropped because of a letter written by Mitchell Kagan, stating that he had received $10,000 from Kittredge and did not care to prosecute. Kagan then wrote a letter to Mr. Hoyne saying he wanted to prosecute.

Jury Foreman Tells of Case.

"The letter of Mitchell Kagan naturally had some influence on the jury," Harlo R. Grant, the foreman of the grand jury, said yesterday. "At the time it was presented we were given to understand it was the father's true sentiments. But, nevertheless, on the evidence we heard we could not have returned an indictment and I feel certain that any other group of men presented with the same evidence would have exonerated Kittredge as we did.

"There was no evidence to show that Kittredge was intoxicated, as previously charged. The bottle of whisky in evidence was still sealed. We carefully considered every angle of the case and spent more time on it than any other case we handled.

"An Unfortunate Accident."

"Our conclusion was that it was an unfortunate accident and we could take no other course despite the prejudice of public sentiment which arises against a motorist in such cases and the sympathy for the victim, even when the victim is partly or wholly to blame."

Owing to the absence from the city of State's Attorney Hoyne, Mr. Kagan's second letter has not yet received official notice.

THOMPSON MAN ATTACKS DOUBLE TAX BY CITY HALL

W. F. Struckman Sues to Halt Assessment.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The city of Chicago is not paying its bills. Its creditors are going into court and obtaining judgments. That has been going on for some time.

To pull the city out of the hole the voters sixteen months ago approved of a bond issue of $9,500,000 to pay judgments and interest on them. The city owed the sanitary district several million, the banks several more and the sundry individuals small amounts. The property owners will be paying interest on that debt until the year 1939.

But that is not all. Last week the charge was made in Judge S. N. Hoover's court that the city is collecting twice in one instance to pay interest on judgments.

W. F. Struckmann Makes Charge.

Such a charge by a prejudiced witness is one thing. It might be passed over if it had been made by a lawyer with a grievance against the city administration. But it was made by William F. Struckmann. He is a follower of the Lundin-Thompson organization. He said so yesterday. In addition he is a member of the country towns machine which is affiliated with the city hall crowd. Furthermore, he is a lawyer and a legal tax exert. He is the attorney for the board of assessors. His reputation as a tax lawyer is so good that he was employed by John W. Ellis, another lawyer, to appear in the tax objection cases, now being heard by Judge Hoover. Accordingly his opinion of what the city has done is entitled to consideration.

Tells of Double Taxation.

He told the court that the judgments and interest of them were paid by bonds and to pay the bonds and interest the city had levied taxes. Then he charged that the city levied still more taxes to pay interest on judgments, which had already been paid by the bonds.

But better perhaps would be Struckmann's own phraseology. Part of his argument reads:

"Then what did they do? The testimony here showed that they didn't pay this $495,000 out of the taxes levied. They issue bonds and take the proceeds of those bonds and pay interest with it that is there appropriated. And they have levied taxes to pay those bonds as the principal and interest become due; and we, as taxpayers, are going to pay taxes to meet the principal and interest on these bonds, the principal of which was used to pay this interest (on judgments). And now not only are they taxing us for this interest by way of a bond issue, but they are also taxing us for this interest by way of direct taxes. They are collecting twice to pay that interest that they are paying on these judgments."

Plan Appeals to Supreme Court.

Judge Hoover has made no comment upon this contention. He has said, however, that the other points raised by the objectors to this tax levy are insufficient. Accordingly he has overruled the objections.

But that does not satisfy Struckmann. He still contends that the more than $400,000 assessed was illegal and said yesterday that he will appeal to the Supreme court.

Robert N. Holt of Landon & Holt, attorneys, is also going to the Supreme court on the same contentions for other tax objectors.

Merits of Judgment Menaced.

The merits of the judgments have not have investigated by the court and attorneys. Struckmann said at one point that he was not interested in the application of the funds. He added that if the money had been "used to buy green apples" it would not make a particle of difference in the court action pending. He was interested only in ascertaining whether the money was appropriated for a legal purpose for which the city could use the money.

In fact, Struckmann at another stage in the proceedings stopped the city from showing the necessity for the money.

"Do you want to open up the question of the legality of these questions between the sanitary district and the other people?" asked Struckmann of Leon Hornstein, assistant corporation counsel.

"I object to that statement," said Hornstein.

"I ask you if you are going to open up the door," repeated Struckmann.

"Counsel knows better than to make that statement," said Hornstein.

"No," said Struckmann, "I am sincere on that. That is what they were—in collusion."

"I say that counsel is not observing proper decorum in this court, when he says that any judgment against the sanitary district was obtained through collusion," Hornstein replied.

City Agreed to Suit.

He probably intended to say "against the city" instead of "against the sanitary district." But he stopped that line of questioning. He said: "In fact, I want to inform the court right now that I have gone as long as I care to go along this line, because I have shown that the amounts for which they were appropriated were large, and that it was necessary to make that kind of an appropriation on April 2."

One of the trustees of the sanitary district once said that the city had agreed to permit the district to obtain a judgment, but no other charge in the matter has heretofore ben printed.

BEG YOUR PARDON

In last SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE it was stated that the Dearborn observatory at Northwestern university is open to the public every clear Thursday evening from 8 to 10, except during the summer vacation. Philip Fox, director of the observatory, states the observatory is open at the hours stated every clear Thursday night, summer and winter, and that this has been the case without interruption for years.

VERDICT IN RED TRIAL EXPECTED EARLY TOMORROW

Duel of Oratory Draws to a Close.

The Red trial will end tomorrow with the finish of Special Prosecutor Frank Comerford's argument to the jury. Judge Oscar Hebel will then instruct the jurors, and a verdict is expected within a few hours. An all day talk yesterday by Mr. Comerford did not quite conclude the state's case.

Comerford's imitation of Clarence Darrow pleading for the right of free speech for his clients caused the jury and judge to laugh and the bailiffs had to rap for order to suppress the mirth of the crowded courtroom.

In referring to a portion of the argument of the defense, Mr. Comerford said:

"The defense brought in the trial of Christ was cited as a comparison with the trial of these men. Comparison of the teachings of Christ and his disciples with that of the teachings of William Bross Lloyd and his followers is sacrilege."

"Christ taught love. These defendants teach hate. Christ taught 'Thou shalt not steal.' These defendants teach 'Thou shall seize private property without compensation.' Christ taught the brotherhood of man. They taught class hatred. Christ was poor and pure. Lloyd—well there is no evidence on that point.

"When these defendants said union labor was bribed in the war their tongues dripped with falsehood. When they said the American Federation of Labor was untrue to the cause of toil standing back of the flag, they branded themselves as liars and traitors. They lied."

MEXICO'S COMIC OPERA ARMY IS REBEL AT HEART

Majority of Officers Are Illiterate.

BY SIDNEY M. SUTHERLAND.
FINAL ARTICLE.

Militarism is a state of mind. It is no less a curse to a country because its advocates and practitioners are too lazy to goosestep their way across a parade ground, but prefer to lie in the shade of a Mexican cactus and plan new guerilla forays on the property of other people.

The curse of Mexico is a militarism none the less blighting to peace and order because it is ridiculous when judged by our standards of discipline and military efficiency. There are more than 3,000 "generals" in the Mexican army, more than 4,000 colonels and lieutenant-colonels, 3,000 majors and captains, more than 5,000 lieutenants and sub-lieutenants and sergeants and corporals.

And all this mob of military incapacity and dishonesty to command an army which, if it could be assembled in one group, would not number more than 35,000 private soldiers, including infantry, cavalry, artillery, and aviation.

Officers Are Illiterate.

More than 15,000 officers, and more than half of them unable to write their names, to command 35,000 troops! And 95 per cent of the officers grafters, bullies, and assassins; and every soldier a loafer and murderer and illiterate. Both officers and men of this professional army are incorrigible "revolutionists" who will rebel against any constituted authority that mentions work; and all of them firmly purpose to continue drawing undeserved pay from a government long since insolvent and discredited.

Why work long hours under the Mexican sun in the field or at the bench—indeed, why work at all, when by riding a sore-backed horse and wearing a pistol and cartridge belt one may raid ranches and little towns, burn railroad bridges, dynamite tunnels, seize the women, drink unpaid for tequila and mescal and pulque, help themselves to clothing and provisions in the stores, blackmail oil and mining corporations and native and foreign business houses, and sleep lazily among the flies and lice and disease germs propagated by filth, personal uncleanliness, and a pleasant Mexican sun?

Always Rebels at Heart.

They have the rebel habit and they will never consent to correcting it. Secretary of War Calles has battled from dawn to dark for three months striving to disarm the generals and other ludicrous army officers and send them to their homes to work, while incorporating their "armies" of ten, or a hundred, or a thousand "soldiers" into a national army to pacify the country and face the inevitable intervention by United States armed forces.

Outlawry is second nature down there now: as a matter of fact, it is first nature, but was repressed by Porfirio Diaz only to break out in the strange procession of "presidents" who followed him.

Each armed man figures himself personally superior to and braver than ten American soldiers; and they gaze about their vast deserts with infrequent water holes, their pathless mountains, their shadowy jungles, their great stretches of territory, and they believe they can fight the hated gringo till the latter has enough and withdraws.

To a certain extent there is basis for their military madness. It's a big job the invading Americans have before them, but it's not too big.

U. S. Naval Blockade.

A naval blockade over the ports to cut off smuggled munitions; 500,000 infantry to police the cities and hamlets; 250,000 cavalry and 5,000 airplanes to run down the guerrilla forces; 150,000 picked native troops officered by Americans to form a constabulary which will help in supressing the outlaws and inspiring confidence in the peaceful Mexicans; three years of a military and financial protectorate in which insurrection can be crushed and the country started back on the road to industrial and agricultural reconstruction; protection of Mexican judges and law administrators; education of the people to proper understanding of elections followed, by a real election; plenty of work on the railroads and other wrecked institutions with certain wages—these steps will solve the problem.

And so, I say, there is no hope for Mexico excepting in intervention by American soldiers. Friendly counsel and example won't do it; the Mexicans cannot do it; we won't let any one else do it; and it must be done. It's a question we must answer sooner or later; and the question is when?

STORY STICKS

"Irishman Who Talks Swedish" Clings to Democratic Candidate for U. S. Senator for Thirty-five Years.

PETER A. WALLER
[Beidler Photo.]

Peter A. Waller, Democratic candidate for United States senator from Illinois, will probably be known through the campaign as "the Irishman who talks Swedish." This was the way he was introduced to his fellow workmen in a radiator shop in Kewanee thirty-five years ago and the story has stuck to him. At the time he was getting $1.25 a day. Now he is the vice-president and second largest stockholder in the Boss Manufacturing company of Kewanee, makers of Canton flannel gloves. Up to the present time he has held only one elective office, that of school trustee, but he has taken an active part in local politics and was largely responsible for the election of the present mayor of Kewanee, J. H. Andrews, on a labor ticket.

BOY KILLED BY TRUCK; POLICE HOLD CHAUFFEUR

Mippi Zumia, 4 year old son of Michael Zumia, 1463 South Sangamon street, was killed late yesterday when he was run over by an automobile truck owned by the International Dairy company. According to the driver, Steve Gurca, who is being held by the Maxwell street police, the boy was attempting to climb on the step of the truck, but fell under the rear wheels.

Albert Magnusen, 40 years old, 2634 Indiana avenue, who was run over last Tuesday by an automobile at Twenty-sixth street and Michigan avenue, driven by William Curry, an automobile demonstrator, died yesterday at the Mercy hospital. Curry was not held.

Gustave A. Johnson, 40 years old, a carpenter, sustained a possible skull fracture and serious internal injuries yesterday morning when he was struck by an automobile owned and driven by Mrs. Elsie Samuels, 8046 South Green street, while riding his bicycle at Sixty-fourth street and Normal boulevard. He was taken to St. Bernard's hospital, where it was said that he was not expected to survive.

100 MADE ILL FROM CREAM AT CHURCH SOCIAL

Springfield, Ill., July 31.—Chocolate ice cream eaten at a church social, near Fountain Green, in the eastern part of Hancock county, has caused an extensive epidemic of para-typhoid fever, it was announced at the state department of public health this morning. More than 100 persons are seriously ill.

Two Men Held as Wife Dies of Shot

Pending the coroner's inquest in the death yesterday of Mrs. Mary Lehman, 23 years old, 1822 North Larrabee street, the police are holding Joseph Mensel, a roomer in the Lehman home, and the husband, James Lehman, a butcher. Mrs. Lehman was shot Tuesday night. Both her husband and Mensel asserted the shooting was accidental.

OIL COMPANIES COMPROMISE ON MEXICAN TAXES

Pay Export Levy Under Lowest Tariff. .

BY ROWLAND THOMAS.

Mexico City, July 31.—It now is possible to publish another chapter on the petroleum controversy which seems destined to become the Old Man of the Sea of the De la Huerta administration. This chapter is solely on the question of export tax. Several companies late yesterday deposited with the treasury on account of the May and June bimonthly period taxes to an amount equal to what would have accrued on May and June exports under the so-called January and February tariff. Undersecretary of the Treasury Padres had demanded the amount accruing under the so-called Cabrera tariff. Settlement resulted from the personal intervention of De la Huerta and means a large saving to the companies.

Millions Saved to Oil Men.

The amount deposited is approximately 4,500,000 pesos.

The amount under the Cabrera tariff would have been approximately 11,000,000.

This tax is a 10 per cent export levy on crude oil and fuel oil and is collected six times a year. It is based on tariff values to be published by the secretary of the treasury before expiration of the bimonthly period and is payabio between the 15th and 25th of the succeeding month.

The tariff for the January and February period this year is the same as the one in effect two years previously. For assessment of taxes for the March and April period Luis Cabrera, secretary of the treasury, published on May 1 a new tariff arbitrarily increasing oil valuations approximately 250 per cent.

"We Want Money."

In answer to protests from the oil companies he stated verbally, "I don't care about actual values; what we want is money."

The Oil Producers' Association of New York sent a telegram of protest to Carranza. It reached here the morning Carranza fled. In the interim Mendival, acting as secretary of the treasury, agreed the Cabrera tariff was unjust and accepted the old tariff.

When De la Huerta appointed Salvador Alvarado secretary of the treasury, the latter canceled Mendival's annulment of Cabrera's tariff and ordered payment of the accrued tax which would have been paid under the Cabrera tariff for the previous months.

After conferences with the companies, Alvarado rescinded this order.

Admits Tariff Is Unjust.

He accepted payment made for the March and April period and said he realized the prevailing export tariff was unjustly heavy. He promised a new tariff based on current prices as shown by the companies' sales contracts. He also promised adjustment in payments already made in case the new rates should prove lower than those arbitrarily fixed by the January and February tariff. He finally promised this agreement should also cover the May and June period. Then Alvarado left for New York, Undersecretary Padres remaining in charge.

Agrees to Valuation.

Padres agreed to accept the contracts between the qompanies and the United States shipping board as fixing values.

The companies produced photographs of these contracts showing the price to be $1 a barrel. The same grade oil was valued under the Cabrera tariff at $2.20 a barrel.

On June 25 Padres made an official demand for payment of May and June taxes on the Cabrera tariff basis.

There was much negotiation.

Finally De la Huerta personally decided that the January and February tariff should rule pending and subject to adjustments. The deposits with the treasury on account followed.

There have been two separate sets of conferences and three sets of money payments up during last month. One was over the export taxes, another over royalties accruing on oil production since 1918 under Carranza decrees enforcing article 27 of the constitution nationalizing the subsoil, and the third on ground rents accruing for the same period under the same decrees.

Collect First Tax.

The government now has collected only the first export tax item, the companies refusing payment on the second ond third items, aggregating perhaps 56,000,000 pesos, on the ground that such payment would constitute abrogation of vested rights.

TALKING CLOCK

It Calls Out the Duties as Well as the Hours They Are to Be Done.

[Photo Copyright: Underwood & Underwood.]

Philadelphia's famous "talking clock," with Joseph Pinto, who with his father, Vincente Pinto, invented it. The clock can strike the hours, but turning a handle causes it to speak them. A phonographic attachment makes this possible. At 6 a. m. it calls, "Time to get up; it's 6 o'clock," and at 11 p. m. a stern voice announces, "Time to go home, young man; it's 11 o'clock," and messages can be delivered at any hour of the day.

SPENDS $20,000 TO PROVE THAT HE'S AMERICAN

Henry Musser, wealthy manufacturer of Manila, P. I., has spent $20,000, much time, and much work in looking over genealogical files, to prove he is an American citizen, and the descendant of American sires.

Some one called him a German during the war, and this kindled his determination to prove his ancestry and nationality.

"I have just come from Virginia," he said yesterday. "I have found that my mother was descended from Samuel Duff and Rebecca Dryden, who came from Belfast, Ireland, to Virginia in 1791. My father's ancestors settled in New York in 1612. They were Dutch. I was born in Richmond, Va., in 1847."

Musser is going to Oklahoma, complete his data, and then return to the Philippines "and show 'em."

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM SUNDBERG, 22 years old, 4819 North Hamilton avenue, was found dead in bed yesterday morning by his sister, Miss Ida Sunberg. It is believed that death was caused by gas escaping from a gas plate in the kitchen. The flame had been put out by coffee boiling over.

"My 3½ ton Paige has made several hauls between Cleveland, Chicago, Pittsburg, Detroit and other points, sometimes plowing through mud up to the hubs. It can outpull any truck of like capacity of any other make, barring none. The fact that it has not cost me one cent for repairs shows the quality of the truck.

WELL, HOW ABOUT DEMPSEY BATTLE WITH J. JOHNSON?

Negro's Return to U. S. Starts Fans Gassing.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Boxing fans of this country and perhaps other countries as well have something new to interest them, something that they can chew over for the next year or so. It concerns a heavyweight championship bout, a contest that may or may not bring the titleholder, Jack Dempsey, into action. It is made possible by the sudden return to the United States of the seven year fugitive from justice, Jack Johnson, who formerly held the crown and lost it to Jess Willard at Havana.

There are many angles to any proposition that would result in Jack Dempsey and Jack Johnson squaring off in the ring. There are perhaps quite a number of followers of this game who believe that the Negro, at present incarcerated in an Illinois jail awaiting the time when he must serve out the year's sentence handed him before he hastily departed from America a bit more than seven years ago, has a chance of defeating Dempsey. But there are a lot more who don't think that Johnson would have a "Chinaman's chance" against Salt Lake Jack.

A Few Questions.

Even with it quite possible that this fight may never take place there are many things to be considered when one argues over this proposed contest. Here are a few of them:

Is there a promoter in the United States who thinks well enough of a contest between Dempsey and Johnson to offer terms that would satisfy both fighters?

Will the boxing fans of the country pay their money to watch a contest between a white and a colored man?

Is Jack Johnson, now 42 years old, still able to get himself in condition for a fight against a man of Dempsey's caliber?

Those are just a few questions that will be argued pro and con for the next year. The champion has stated that he will fight a colored man if he finds that public sentiment demands such a battle.

Dempsey Might Fight.

There have been white champions of the past who drew the color line, partly because they were opposed to boxing colored men; but the principal reason behind such refusals was that these titleholders feared the result. With Dempsey it is different, and any one who knows Dempsey will agree that if Dempsey refuses to meet Johnson it will not be because he fears the Negro. No champion ever was so strongly imbued with the belief that he can whip every other man, be he white or black, as this same Dempsey. Undoubtedly Dempsey would fight Johnson in a minute if he found out that it was expected of him and if suitable terms were offered.

But will the promoters find there is a demand from the public that would insure a "fat" gate for a battle between Dempsey and Johnson?

Bout Long Way Off.

Since a contest cannot be definitely scheduled until something like a year has passed, because it is quite possible the government will firmly insist that the Negro serve the sentence of a year which was imposed on him when he jumped his bond and fled from America, Johnson will then be 43 years old, an age far past that at which fighters are supposed to be able to hold their own in the ring. Now, then, we ask, Where is the promoter who would match Dempsey, who then will be 25 years old, against this 43 year old Negro? That's a tough one, so write your own answer, Mr. Fan.

Few of those who are supposed to know pugilism believe that Johnson could get himself into condition to fight for the championship. The Negro says he is better than he ever was, which will be doubted by nearly everybody, for no one believes that Johnson at 43 years could lick Jack Dempsey.

Fans Strange People.

As for the fans attending such a contest—that's another mater again. Boxing fans are surely stringe people. They'd probably be at the ringside in flocks to see Demjsey and Johnson scrap if some promoter managed to get them together. They'd go just because it was labeled a fight, whether or not it was a fight, and they'd shell out their jack to be ringsiders.

GREB WINS OVER TOMMY GIBBONS

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 31.—Harry Greb was given the newspaper decision over Tom Gibbons in a ten-round bout at Forbes field this afternoon. Seven rounds were given to Greb and five to Gibbons, while in the other two it was declared neither had an advantage.

Postpone Langford-McVey in E. Chicago to Aug. 14

The feature bout of the card—Sam Langford vs. Sam McVey—billed for East Chicago next Saturday, has been postponed until Saturday, Aug. 14. Both fistic experts expressed a desire for more training time, which was granted.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

Should Jack Johnson fight Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight championship?

Where Asked.

On Clark street between Madison and Washington streets.

The Answers.

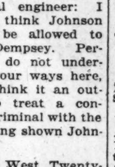
Waldo Camp, Evansville, Ind., student: If prize fighting is to be kept on a decent, respectable basis, I think the fighters should have good character, and for that reason I am opposed to allowing Johnson to fight. He has forfeited his right to be called a good citizen.

Sam W. Sawfield, 219 Wisconsin street, printer: I do not think Johnson should be allowed to fight in this country at all, and especially since he bears so unsavory a reputation. Whether it would be a good match does not enter into consideration with me.

E. D. Brauns, Terre Haute, Ind., chemical engineer: I do not think Johnson should be allowed to fight Dempsey. Perhaps I do not understand your ways here, but I think it an outrage to treat a convicted criminal with the leniency they say is being shown Johnson.



James Sterling, 514 West Twenty-seventh street, chauffeur: I believe a champion of anything should be a champion. Therefore I think Dempsey ought to accept any challenge, whether it be from Johnson or any other fighter. The color line and the alleged criminality of Johnson have nothing to do with the matter, to my mind.

A. Rudin, 8700 South State street, art dealer: There is little choice between a draft dodger and a man of Johnson's stamp, to my way of thinking. Johnson, however, has lost any right he had to be called a decent fighter, and should be deported or jailed for good. Personally I am opposed to bouts between white and colored boxers.

RUTH HITS 37TH OVER WALL, BUT BROWNS COP, 13-8

St. Louis, Mo., July 31.—St. Louis pounded four pitchers and won from New York today, 13 to 8, in the deciding game of a series of five. Ruth hit his thirty-seventh home run of the season in the eighth inning, driving the ball over the right field stands. There was no one on base at the time.

Meusel and Sisler each hit home runs for the third time in three days. Both circuit drives came when two men were on base. Pipp knocked a homer in the ninth, scoring O'Doul ahead of him. Score:

Market Letter.

Bumper crops are predicted. The bumps already have arrived in the markets for grains and stocks. Prices of commodities are falling—except at your grocer's.

Sound stocks are worth what they are selling for, but the sound of falling stocks is irritating. The bankers are more cheerful. (It's the fellows who are paying 8 and 9 per cent for money who are not cheerful.) Brokers are playing golf. It's about the only thing left anywhere near par.

There has been some smoke among the tobaccos, but as a rule the industrials are weak. Motors are knocking, packing shares have been butchered, and the leathers are on their uppers. Oils continue volatile and the rails immovable—too immovable, in fact, to handle their business.

Wall St. Lambs, in general, are bleating in panic at the growls of the bears. When it becomes a stampede, the market will turn.

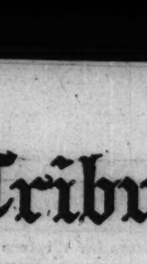
BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.



Philadelphia, Pa., July 31.—With Hippo Vaughn breezing along in stylish form, the Cubs had little difficulty copping the first of the series today from the one time militant but now lowly Phillies. The count was 6 to 3. A couple of the Phils poled home runs, but, regardless of that, Big Vaughn was seldom in danger.

Some splendid hitting and startling fielding by Dode Paskert was largely responsible for the victory. Dode returned to the game after resting a couple of days with a lame wrist, and his solid blows did a lot in the production of four of the six runs. Then he had eight chances in the outfield, and three or four of them were thrillers, one especially when he dashed in in the eighth and palmed with one hand a line drive by John Rawlings that was worth a hit in any league.

Meadows Forced to Quit.

Carl Meadows attempted to hurl against Big Jim, but wasn't equal to the task. He labored diligently until the fifth, when he was knocked flat, or might have been had he remained longer. Bert Gallia, former American leaguer, came forth and suppressed the riot, but the Cubs mauled him for two more tallies in the sixth, after which they were content to hurry things along and get into the cool shower.

Nearly everybody in Philadelphia is roasting the Phils, but they seem to know Gavvy Cravath is doing the best he can with an impossible outfit. Gavvy switched his men around so often that a score card purchased at the park isn't worth shucks. Some day he is liable to strike a winning combination and let it ride for a week. Without some long distance swatters on his team he wouldn't be able to interest many folks, but they go out expecting a home run or two, and the heavy hitters get 'em.

Homer for Cy Williams.

In the fourth today Cy Williams hit a liner to left and Robertson was playing in rather close, then didn't start back in time, and the ball sailed over his noodle and bounded into the bleachers on the first hop.

In the ninth Robertson was playing deep for Meusel, but he should have been in the second row of the bleachers, for Iris lifted one over the low wall for another four baser. The other run was put over on J. Miller's single, followed by Tragesser's double, and was deserving.

Killefer Drives In Two.

Bill Killefer was the timely swatter for the Cubs in the fourth. After Robertson walked and Paskert singled Killefer drove both men home with a single to center.

The other two came in the sixth, when Vaughn led off with a single past second. Flack skied out, but Herzog singled and Terry walked, filling the bases. Vaughn came home when Fletcher jumped up and pulled down Barber's high bounder in time for a play at first, then Herzog scooted home a moment later when Tragessor made bum shot in returning the ball to the pitcher.

NOTES

Babe Ruth today.

The Athletics won two of the five games with the Sox.

The Yankees will arrive today for a four game series during which the results will be overlooked in the rooting for Ruth to make a four bagger every time at bat.

Leibold stole a long drive from C. Walker's bat by a dandy running catch in the sixth. There was a runner on second, who would have scored if it had gone over.

Secretary Grabiner announced that the gates at Comiskey park would be opened at 9 o'clock this morning at which time all general admission seats in grandstand, pavilions, and bleachers will be put on sale.

Dykes played a whale of a game in the fifth. First he yanked down a high liner from Payne's bat, then threw out Leibold and Weaver, making a great running scoop and throw of Buck's slow teaser toward first.

Notes

Philadelphia, Pa., July 31.—[Special.]—The Cubs will rest tomorrow then resume hostilities with the Phils Monday.

President Veeck rejoined the Cubs this morning after having taken Hollocher home from Boston. The boys always seem to win with President Bill around.

Dave Robertson made a wonderful catch off Paulette in the first when he dashed in with his longest strides and copped a short fly off his shoes with one hand.

The crowd wasn't bad considering that the Phils are at the bottom and all the fans here are quite disgusted with the way baseball is being handled by their magnates. There were at least 10,000 present.

John Miller, old time second and first sacker, was moved to third for the Phils today and executed a couple of lively plays. He took a hit away from Paskert in the second when he stabbed a beastly smash.

Gandil Wants Release; Plans to Play with Frisco

Los Angeles, Cal., July 31.—[Special.]—"Chick" Gandil, former White Sox first baseman, who quit the club last spring, is here, sticking around Washington park, taking a more or less languid interest in the Coast league games. The real reason for his presence, it is said, is that he hopes to make some sort of a deal for his release from the Sox so he can play on the San Francisco Pacific Coast league team. Gandil recently threw up managing a club in the Idaho league, saying the weather didn't agree with him. However, it couldn't be more disagreeable than at Bakersfield, in the San Joaquin valley, where Gandil goes every Sunday to play with the town's club in the Valley league. There the thermometer averages a hundred daily.

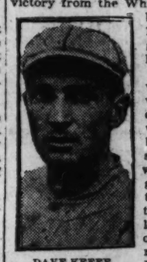
BY I. E. SANBORN.

The lowly Athletics won a soft boiled victory from the White Sox yesterday by a score of 5 to 1 in the closing game of the set here.



DAVE KEEFE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Three of the visitors' tallies were the result of a little pop fly which Eddie Collins lost in the sun and from which he almost got on a bump on the bean in the third inning. Following that stroke of luck the Mackmen batted Roy Wilkinson off the slab and George Payne had to come on to retire the side.

The incident reminded us of one Barney Dreyfuss pulled a few seasons ago when one of his fielders lost a fly and a game in the same way: "Vell," said Barney, philosophically. "I can't move der sun."

Base Running Atrocious.

In spite of that the Gleasons might have pulled the game out of the sun spots if they had been able to improve a few of their many chances to score off Keefe who worked the route against them. Their base running faults were more glaring even than Old Sol.

For instance, in the eighth, Felsch led off with a double, but before any thing more of the kind could happen he was picked off second by a yard on a toss from the pitcher. John Collins rolled out, then Risberg dumped a Texas leaguer safely into short right a rod or two back of first and tried to make two bases on it without one chance in a thousand. Earlier in the exhibition John Collins singled with nobody out and while there was still nobody out he was pinched stealing second. It might have been a phantom hit and run play, at that.

Game Won in Third.

The enemy won the game in the third. Galloway was out when Keefe lofted a fly close to second and it fell safely because Eddie Collins could not outstare the sun. Welch flied and after the side should have been retired two doubles and two singles scored three runs and finished Wilkinson for the day. Payne stopped that mauling but was tagged for two earned runs in the fourth and fifth.

The Sox made on hit in every inning for seven rounds and would not have scored at all if Dykes had not blooted Payne's little roller in the seventh. It was followed by a pass to E. Collins, and a double by Weaver, good for one run. In the eighth the Sox varied their system by making two hits and no runs, as already elucidated.

KERNEL COOTIE—PA GETS TOO INQUISITIVE

OLYMPIA FIELDS TO HOLD CENTER OF GOLF STAGE

Western Open Starts on Wednesday; Stars Enter

BY JOE DAVIS.

Golfing interest will center this week in the western open championship at Olympia Fields Wednesday and Thursday, when the cream of the middle western talent and a number of eastern stars will battle over the 72 hole route for the title held by Jim Barnes of the Sunset Hill club of St. Louis.

JIM BARNES. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

For the first time in its history the event will be held over two courses. On the morning of opening day half of the contestants will play over the Number 1 course and the other half over the Number 2 course. In the afternoon they will reverse. The same method of play will prevail on the second day.

Course in Good Shape.

The club has gone to great expense in getting its greens in shape for the attack of the experts and if the courses remain as fast as they were last week some remarkably low scoring can be looked for.

The prize list totals $1,000, the leading prizes being $350, $225, $125, and $80. There are ten awards in all and a gold medal goes to the champion.

Barnes will defend his title and will have his work cut out, as the field probably will number about ninety players.

On Local Golf Links

PERRY R. BOOLE and Robert G. Kerr waged a close contest over the historic Belmont course in the final for the President's trophy. Both played finely on the first round, but had some trouble in making their niblick pitches stick on the fast greens. After the turn Boole's putting was superior and he forged ahead and won, 3 and 2. Dr. William G. Burkhardt won the blind bogey contest.

In the qualifying round for the Board of Trade trophies the first eligibles are: F. M. Bell, H. P. Strassheim, G. M. Stannard, Julius Schwill, Carl Heinzen, Owen H. Fleming, H. S. Wing, and F. B. Gallagher.

Second flight—E. L. Essley, R. G. Kerr, P. R. Boole, A. J. McGivern, L. H. Schafer, L. A. Bentley, F. S. Tenney, and J. P. Hankey.

EVANSTON.

Frank Swirles, son of a "Tam," the veteran west side golfer, won two prizes at the Evanston club, leading a big field in the ball sweepstakes with a gross of 78 and winning the handicap in aid of the Permanent Blind War Relief fund with a card of 78—11—67. The low net winners in the sweepstakes were A. F. Martin, 90—18—72; E. C. Delmar, 96—22—74, and W. J. Phalen, 93—19—74.

WESTWARD HO.

MIDLOTHIAN.

Finishing even with par, E. Hoover Bankard and L. E. Burr tied in the competition for the Antoyne prize. Hoover, a scratch player, shot an excellent round and equaled perfect figures, while Burr had an allowance of 11. Bankard's card:

Out .....4 3 5 4 4 4 4 4 5—37
In .....4 5 3 4 4 3 4 4 4—35—72

C. E. Robinson [14] finished third, 1 down.

In the ball sweepstakes, W. M. Ryan won first prize with 96—26—70. Burr, 85—14—71, was second, while Robinson and A. W. Newton tied with 72 for third prize. W. Butts, W. B. Edgar, A. R. Shurtleff, and C. Scholle had 73s and divided what was left.

SKOKIE.

W. Girling and R. McDermid of Wilmette played the feature match in the finals of the Six Towns tournament, going to the nineteenth green, where Girling won by sinking a long putt. S. Hopkins and L. McCurdy of Winnetka also indulged in a close contest, which Hopkins won at the home hole. L. C. Mowry of Evanston defeated M. B. Orde, his fellow townsman, 2 and 1, while J. J. Harrington of Kenilworth defeated his cohort, S. Murch, 6 and 4. E. C. Divine won the title for Hubbard Woods, 5 and 3, over G. G. Cunell, Tae deciding contest among the Glencoe players was postponed.

LINCOLN PARK.

George Hackl, who won the third flight final Friday at Bob o'Link in the western junior championship tournament, played in good form at the home club and won the Fair cup by defeating Dave Needler, 5 and 4, in the deciding contest. It took an extra hole for W. M. Crooks to defeat H. F. Shimivu in the finals for the Spies Brothers' trophy. V. U. Fischer won the Bauer trophy, 2 up, over Dave O'Connor.

The Lincoln Park team defeated the Jackson Park contingent, 12 points to 7, in the interclub team competition for public parks players.

FLOSSMOOR.

The Morava cup locked with G. V. Nevius, who defeated J. P. McGowan, 4 and 3, in the finals. In the class handicap, first division, J. N. McDonald, 78—2—76, and C. F. Grimes 78—2—76, tied for the prize and will play off later. S. H. Fields won in class B with 84—10—74. Nevius won in class C with 92—21—71, while E. M. Adams was successful in class D with 92—28—70.

SOUTH SHORE.

The seventy-two hole competition for the Everett C. Brown trophy at match play against bogey was concluded yesterday and won by W. L. Trainor, who finished 4 up. A. C. Jackman was second, 1 up.

CHICAGO.

F. C. Wetmore won the Saturday Silver cup with 84—16—68. John M. Sellers, 77—4—73, had low gross and tied with Gale Thompson, 85—12—73, for second low net.

DOWLING-M'NAMARA BEAT VARDON AND RAY ON SCARSDALE COURSE

New York, July 31.—[Special.]—Harry Vardon and Ted Ray today met more than their equals. Playing on the course of the Scarsdale Golf and Country club Jack Dowling and Tom McNamara, homebred Americans, turned back the Britons, 6 to 5.

It was the first defeat for the invaders in a two round thirty-six hole match, although their initial setback came a week ago at Greenwich, when Tom Kerrigan and J. Douglas Edgar defeated them in eighteen holes, 3 and 2.

However, the worst is yet to come. The Britons tomorow will meet in probably their most important exhibition to be held in the Metropolitan district, Walter Hagen and Jim Barnes, on the links of the Hollywood Golf club at Deal, N. J. There is trouble brewing and those 6,000 or 7,000 golf fans who have planned to see it are fully aware.

Afternoon cards:

BRITAIN WINS AT POLO.

OSTEND, Belgium, July 31.—Great Britain today defeated Spain in the Olympic polo finals by a score of 13 to 11. The British team was composed of Col. Melville, Maj. Barrett, Lord Wodehouse, and Maj. Lockett.

HAGEN IS VICTOR OVER JIM BARNES IN 'MET' PRO GOLF

Retains Title with 70 Score Against 74.

New York, July 31.—[Special.]—One of those match to order finals which occur too seldom in championship golf wound up the thirteenth Metropolitan open today in a blaze of glory and excitement. Walter Hagen, holder of both the American and French national open championships, played perfect golf and gave his never tiring but generally losing rival, Jim Barnes, a thorough, old fashioned trimming.

In winning the Metropolitan open for the third time in succession, Hagen defeated Barnes on today's eighteen hole playoff by 70 strokes to 74. They had tied at 292 at the finish of the fourth round Friday.

It was no new experience for Hagen to win on a playoff. If he were to carry off a title in a tourney of regulation distance it would be like a half holiday. He won last year's national at Brae Burn on a playoff with Mike Brady. He won the French crown three weeks ago on a playoff with La Fitte at Biarritz. The cards follow:

Hagen, out.....4 3 4 5 4 4 4 5 3—36
Barnes, out.....4 4 4 4 5 4 6 5 4—40
Hagen, in.....3 3 2 4 5 4 4 5 4—34—70
Barnes, in.....2 5 3 4 5 3 4 5 3—34—74

CANADA A CHALLENGER FOR AMERICA'S CUP? MAY CONTEST IN 1921

Sydney, N. S., July 31.—[Special.]—A. C. Cross, former member of parliament for North Cape Breton and Victoria, issued a statement today urging the yacht clubs of Nova Scotia to challenge the New York Yacht club to race for the America's cup, the series to take place in July of next year. Mr. Cross suggests that the yacht be built by popular subscription. He is at present in Montreal, and suggests that, if the challenge is accepted, the yacht sail under the colors of the Royal Cape Breton Yacht club.

In this connection Mr. Cross recalls the statement made by Sir Thomas Lipton on the day following the last race of the series between Shamrock IV. and Resolute to the effect that he would not challenge again for the America's cup until next summer for a series of races to be sailed in 1922, wishing to allow an opportunity for challenging on the part of any other club desiring so to do for the summer of 1921. Thus, according to Mr. Cross, the time is at hand for Canada to make another attempt to lift the cup.

Chinaman of 54 Years Is Star Player in Hawaii

New York, Jan. 31.—[Special.]—Honolulu claims a baseball player who heads a record that may never again be equaled. And Honolulu is proud of him. In spite of the fact that he is 54 years old and is the daddy of twelve children, En Sue is the star centerfielder of the All-Chinese team of that place. En Sue has been playing baseball for several years and is conceded to be an outfielder of ability.

LOCAL OARSMEN TAKE THIRD PRIZE IN CANUCK RACE

Even with Winning Crew at Halfway Mark.

St. Catherines, Ont., July 31.—Toronto University's varsity eight today won the Hanlon Memorial trophy in the senior eight oared class, premier event of the Royal Canadian Henley regatta. An accident forced the Detroit crew, last year's winners of the trophy, to retire from the race after covering half of the course.

The Argonaut Rowing club's No. 1 crew was second and the Lincoln Park Rowing club of Chicago, third.

Chicagoans Make Fight.

The winning crew raced under the colors of Argonautic Rowing club. Through the first half of the course the Chicago oarsmen put up a game fight. Getting away to a poor start, they spurted until they were even with the Toronto varsity, but fell back through the last half and the Argonauts beat them out.

American oarsmen won their first final this afternoon in the senior fast weight eight oar event, when the Detroit crew beat out their Canadian opponents.

Best Crew Goes to Belgium.

P. J. Mulquien, president of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen, announced before the start of the senior four race that the committee would pick the best crew as the Canadian Olympic representatives.

RED SOX HELD TO SCRATCH HIT AS INDIANS WIN, 2-1

Fans Ask Scorer to Give Morton Clean Card.

Cleveland, O., July 31.—Cleveland made it four straight from Boston today, winning 2 to 1. Guy Morton of Cleveland all but pitched a no-hit game, the only hit off his delivery being a hard grounder that McInnis bounced off Third Baseman Gardner in the second inning. Thousands of fans stood below the press box after the game and begged the scorers to change their decision and give Gardner an error and Morton a no-hit game.

BABE RUTH—IN THREE PARTS

The above is the way the camera caught Ruth's smile of anticipation as he was awaiting his turn at bat with its opportunity for another home run. It is not at all the way he looks to the pitcher who has to face him.

In spite of his terrific swing Ruth finishes it with his bat well under control, even when he misses the ball, as shown by this snapshot of the position of his hands and bludgeon at the end of a "strike."

Some idea of the power this Tarzan of the diamond puts into a drive can be seen from the position of his feet after delivering the blow. They show that his whole body went into the punch, and still they are ready to start instantly without the time wasted in recovery by many heavy hitters.

MANAGERS LOSE MANY GAMES BY AN OLD FALLACY

'Babe' Ruth Refutes Theory Hurlers Can't Hit.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

No statistician living can estimate how many games of baseball have been lost by the superstition of team managers that pitchers can't hit, never did hit, and never will hit. The number will run into the hundreds every season, and yet managers continue to handicap themselves by forcing their theory down the throats of their own pitchers.

Babe Ruth is a living, magnificent refutation of the unwarranted belief in the impotence of the slabman at bat, and he once was a victim of that same mistake. Probably he never would have become the world beater he is if he had not been good enough as an all around player to be transformed into an outfielder.

Ruth Always Good Hitter.

It is true, Ruth was known to be a good hitting pitcher while he was still used only on the slab. He was recognized then as a dangerous man at the plate—for a pitcher—but he never was figured as a world beater in those days. He never was actually taken out to let a bench warmer bat for him, so far as can be recalled, and occasionally he was passed in a pinch where a long fly would score a run which would affect the result of a game. But no tremendous crowds went home disappointed every time Ruth failed to make a four bagger while he was a pitcher, and his batting average never attracted particular attention in itself.

That was because he was an unconscious and unwilling victim of the popular impression that for some mysterious reason a pitcher is not a dependable batsman and cannot be made one. This theory has existed for so many years it has had the psychological effect of creating its own verity in a large measure.

Confidence Factor in Batting.

Batting is about seven-eighths confidence anyway, and more good prospects have been wrecked by the folly of managers than by their own weakness. For the batsman who is made to know that his manager has no confidence in him will lose a lot of his own courage, thereby making him so much the easier victim for the opposing pitcher.

That is the chief reason for the inability of so many left handed hitters to cope with left handed pitching. They are made to believe they cannot hit southpaws successfully and they lack the necessary confidence to learn how to gauge that kind of delivery.

Scorned in Batting Practice.

Pitchers are constantly being impressed with the belief they cannot hit successfully. It is not expected of them, and even their teammates resent it if pitchers who are not expected to work on a given day, try to horn in on the morning batting practice, depriving the "regulars" of a possible swing or two at some rookie pitching.

Of course, it is true to a great extent that a pitcher, who works no oftener than once in four days or a week cannot hit as well as the player who is in the game every day facing the real stuff at least four or five times each game, but the pitcher certainly ought to hit as well as the substitute bench warmer, who is called on to go to bat once in a game occasionally.

That is, the pitcher could develop into as reliable a batsman as the average bench lizard if he were allowed to and if he were not so constantly impressed with the thought he couldn't make a safe hit without a direct interposition by providence.

The pitchers who have been good batsmen got their chance to become so by impressing their managers at the outset with the fact they could hit, and on that account were allowed to develop their confidence in themselves by being allowed to bat for themselves, even in pinches, and sometimes being used as pinch hitters themselves.

The strong are made stronger and the weak weaker by the present system used by managers. And it is often the cause of the loss of games through the folly of yanking a slabman, who has the other team at his mercy, so as to stick in a bench warmer on the chance of starting a rally, then putting a second string pitcher in to finish the game.

How often have you seen this happen, to be followed by a rally later on which carried the team into the lead, but the second rate slabman could not hold it, whereas the original pitcher if left on the slab would have done so?

AMERICAN TEAM SHOOTS RECORDS; DONNELLEY STAR

Win Team and Individual Prizes in England.

New York, July 31.—Before going to Antwerp, where they won the Olympic team and individual trap shooting championships last week, the United States team of amateur shots visited England and took part in the international contests at Hendon.

BEN DONNELLY.

There the Americans won the team match and in addition captured five first prizes in individual competitions. During their shooting at clay targets over the English traps, excellent scores and new records were made by the Americans.

Summary of Feats.

Following is a summary of what the Americans accomplished in England:

Frank M. Troeh, Vancouver, Wash., broke 109 straight on July 15 and on July 16 broke 138 straight. The best previous long run in England, with one one-eighth ounce of shot, was forty-nine straight.

The English clay bird championship was won by Troeh with 39 out of 40. In this titular race, Jay Clark Jr., Worcester, Mass., was second; Forest W. McNeir, Houston, Tex., third, and Mark Arie, Champaign, Ill., fourth.

Star and Cup to McNeir.

The grand aggregate of the meeting, the gold star and silver cup, was won by Forest McNeir with 100 straight.

The international whield, at 120 clay birds, was won by the United States team, which defeated the British by ten birds. On the first day of the meeting the United States team broke 59 out of 60, a new and remarkable record.

Record to Donnelley.

Ben S. Donnelley, Chicago, won the double rise championship (targets thrown from a tower), breaking the ten birds straight, also a record.

Frank M. Troeh won the championship live bird meeting at Churchill, with fifteen straight in the match and eighteen straight in the miss-and-out shootoff. Martin McVey Jr., New York, finished second, missing his eighteenth bird in the shootoff.

AMERICAN SHOTS HOLD BIG LEAD IN THE OLYMPIC

BEVERLOO, Belgium, July 31.—The United States leads by a large margin in the total points scored so far in the Olympic army rifle matches now in progress here. With the triple tie in which the United States, South Africa, and Sweden are locked in the 600 metre team shoots still to be decided, the following are the points gained, according to the revised official figures after re-checking the targets and the shoot-off of all the other ties:

America, 13; Sweden, 6; Normay, 5; Denmark, 5; France, 4; Switzerland, 2; Finland, 1.

The American marksmen, using the American army rifle against a field of thirteen other teams, have, by the unofficial score won both the team and individual matches in the classic free-for-all rifle competition. The other teams used for the most part high power hunting and target guns.

KIRKWOOD COPS GUN CLUB PRIZE WITH 74 SCORE

Misses Only One Target at Lincoln Park.

Shooting from eighteen yards, H. C. Kirkwood yesterday won the seventy-five target event, feature contest of the weekly shoot of the Lincoln Park Gun club, with a score of 74. A strong wind blew over the traps, which made the targets hard to hit. Under these conditions Kirkwood's score was exceptional.

L. C. Larson, who shot from eighteen yards, was second high with 71, while four contestants tied for third with totals of 70. In the twelve pairs race Dr. T. H. Lewis, state champion, and J. H. May tied for high with scores of 16. F. E. Mueller was high in the twenty-five target event for twenty gauge guns with a score of 18. Following are the leading scores in the distance handicap event:

75 targets, distance handicap—H. C. Kirkwood, 18 yards, 74; L. C. Larsen, 18 yards, 71; C. P. Sheldon, 18 yards, 70; W. K. Phillips Jr., 20 yards, 70; Dr. Upp, 16 yards, 70; P. W. Britain, 18 yards, 70; F. E. Mueller, 19 yards, 68; Dr. J. D. Pollard, 18 yards, 67; George W. Peck, 18 yards, 67; Dr. T. H. Lewis, 18 yards, 67; C. E. Jacques, 16 yards, 66; Mrs. J. H. # COLLEGES SHIFT COACHES IN HOPE OF SPORT WINS

Western Directors Look for Big Season.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

That a successful college athletic year is anticipated at all universities and colleges is shown by the manner in which the coaching staffs at the various institutions are being strengthened. Activity will not start until the middle of next month, but the mentors already are planning for what promises to be a busy year.

One of the most important changes in the Western conference has taken place at Northwestern university. Charley Bachman, who was in charge of the gridiron situation last year, has been succeeded by Elmer McDeavitt, a former Yale player who was assistant to Fred Murphy when the latter guided Purple football fortunes.

Hark Back to McCornack.

A football coach at Northwestern has been more or less of an experiment for years. In fact, many believe Wallie McCornack, the old Dartmouth coach, was the best mentor who ever attempted to develop an eleven at the Methodist institution. McCornack was of the driving type of coach who had the faculty of putting his ideas into execution by forceful language. During the two years he was in charge Northwestern was represented by powerful elevens.

Just what success McDeavitt will have remains to be seen. He has one of the hardest schedules of any team in the conference. On Oct. 9 Northwestern will meet Minnesota at Evanston. McDeavitt has not much of a line on his players, while Coach Williams will have one of the strongest teams which has represented Minnesota in recent years. In addition to opening with a formidable opponent, the Purple is slated to meet Notre Dame in the closing combat.

Known as Line Coach.

When he was assistant to Murphy, McDeavitt coached the line. In those years the Purple forwards, outweighed on several occasions, held their own with opponents of ability. Whether McDeavitt combines the happy faculty of coaching the backfield and line remains to be seen, and in his ability to do both rests Northwestern's chance of success.

Bachman, however, did well at Northwestern. The breaks of the game went against him in important struggles, but his ability was recognized by the Kansas Aggies. Charley has signed a contract to coach football at Manhattan this year and if he makes good will have a permanent berth.

Chick Harley, who led the Ohio State eleven last year in a successful season, will be assistant to Jack Wilce at Columbus. Although he received several offers to handle football squads at other institutions, Harley elected to spend a few years with his alma mater in order to absorb a few ideas of imparting his football knowledge to others.

Jones at Lake Forest.

Ralph Jones, who has coached basketball at Illinois since 1912, has severed his connection with the downstate institution to take over the athletic directorship of Lake Forest academy. In addition to his knowledge of the floor game, Jones knows football and baseball. He handled the freshman gridiron and diamond teams at Illinois and was Zuppke's leading scout in football.

Another important coaching change will take place at Wisconsin. Dr. W. E. Meanwell, a former Badger mentor, who had been athletic director at Missouri, will return to the Madison institution to coach basketball.

Woods and Waters

By LARRY ST. JOHN

FLY FISHING GOSSIP.

TWO of our readers have been arguing as to whether the material commonly used for leaders is made of catgut or of the intestine of the silk worm. Like the blind men who went to "see" the elephant, they are both wrong. Silk worm gut, so-called, is the contents of the cocoon spinning sacs of the silk worm moth. As soon as it shows at the opening of the moth's spinneret the moth is killed by immersion in vinegar and the "gut" is drawn out; it hardens when it comes in contact with the air.

LARRY ST. JOHN.

Most leader material comes from Murcia, Spain, where the peasants make a business of raising the moths and drawing the gut. The material is then sorted as to size and put up in hanks for the market.

We are told by people in the business that even the "catgut" of commerce, used in surgery, for stringing musical instruments and tennis rackets, comes from the sheep and not from Tabby who purrs by the fireside of winter nights.

Some time ago an Englishman, writing from Canada, in the London Fishing Gazette, gravely told his readers that the black bass will never rise to a fly and that when you do catch them they are worthless, as they are so wormy that the parasites run out of the fishes' mouths! We trust that the readers of such nonsense will not take it seriously, and that American readers will not accept this as the views of all Englishmen who have fished in America.

I have met several Britishers who greatly admire our black bass and who have expressed regret that they are not more plentiful in their own countries, and it was an Englishman who discovered the possibilities of fly fishing on the upper Mississippi. His name was Reade and in the old lumbering days on the lower Chippewa he owned one of the numerous barrooms at Reade's Landing, which is on the Minnesota shore of the Mississippi, opposite the mouth of the Chippewa at the foot of Lake Pepin and across the river from Pickerel point, to be exact.

Reade, it is said, dealt a nifty hand of stud and was an expert fly fisherman, having learned the art (fly fishing, not stud) in the old country. He originated the fly still known as the Reade, and it is a good one to this day for small mouthed bass, although nearly all the wet flies are overshadowed nowadays on the big river by the cork bodied bass bugs.

The charm of fishing with those floating bass bugs lies in the visible or audible strike. We say "audible" because in the rolly water you hear, rather than see, the rise of your fish, and if you do not strike with lightning speed the old speed boy will be back in his lair chuckling—if bass know how to chuckle—while you are wondering what son-of-a-hellbender threw that depth bomb! Bass often hook themselves on "sunk "flies, but' they seldom do on the floaters. Fishing with them is a game that puts a premium on skill.

There are seven varieties of fishes in the upper Mississippi that commonly rise to flies. Besides the small mouthed bass, the king of them all, you may take large mouthed bass, pickerel, wall eyes, white bass, skipjack, and moon-eye.

You get the big mouths and pickerel in the quieter water, but when you get them out in the swift places, while playing them, they put up a pretty fight. Often they have great weight to help them in the battle. Hawley Newkirk took a pickerel on the big river that weighed nineteen pounds. I doffs me lid to any man who can land a nineteen pound 'pick" on a fly rod in that swift water.

Striking a school of white bass in a feeding mood, the fly fisherman is assured a busy time while it lasts. Ordinarily they do not run big, but they are lively, and once in a while you hook a big one of two pounds or so, when you will have a pleasant surprise, as they are gamier than is generally supposed. Fred Peet took one last September at Minneiska that weighed four and a half pounds, which is the largest one I have heard of, and he took it on a floating fly.

Skipjacks and mooneyes are closely allied to the herrings; in fact, they are sometimes classified as toothed herrings. They rise willingly to flies and strike with remarkable quickness. To catch them consistently requires what the Scotch call "a canny wrist," as they let go the instant they discover that the fly is not edible. I have caught them weighing over a pound and doubt if they ever exceed two pounds. Their liveliness makes up for their small size.

ILLINOIS HONORS TO IRVING PARK IN RIFLE EVENT

Takes Third in Tourney for U. S. Title.

Irving Park Rifle club won another state championship and finished third in the U. S. National Rifle association outdoor team shoot. A. C. Hanke, of Irving Park, was high individual in the state with an average of 94.9, and tenth in the United States. T. G. Lively was second with 94.3, and A. F. Brownwell of Commonwealth Edison third with 93.5.

In the rapid fire individual match, T. G. Lively shot second throughout the United States with a score of 97.5, and A. F. Brownwell took third place in the long range with 95.

This is by far the best showing Chicago riflemen have ever made in a national tournament. Local club scores:

|---|---|
| Irving Park Rifle club | 5,673 |
| Chicago Rifle club | 5,613 |
| Com. Edison Rifle club | 5,571 |
| Evanston Township H. S. | 5,439 |
| First Regiment I. R. M. | 3,495 |

Chicago Rifle club was fifth in the national standing, Commonwealth-Edison, seventh, and Evanston Township, eighteenth.

Committeeman Reports Olympic Transport O. K.

New York, July 31.—[Special.]—A statement by Robert S. Waver of the American Olympic committee and president of the Southern Pacific A. A. U. was received by radio from the transport Princess Matoiga, which is carrying the American Olympic team to Antwerp. The radio follows:

"The men are being well cared for, and I believe the officers of the ship are doing everything in their power to make the men comfortable and keep them fit. I consider the meals and service satisfactory."

HERMAN IS REVEALED AS CHAMPION; BLIND IN ONE EYE 2 YEARS

Philadelphia, Pa., July 31.—[Special.]—The story of the past two and one-half years of Pete Herman's reign as champion of all the bantams is as dramatic as any ever conceived in the mind of a master of fiction. During that time Pete successfully defended his crown, though stone blind in his right eye. Some of his opponents resorted to the old trick of sticking their thumbs in his good eye. With his left optic closed, Pete was virtually helpless and was often outpointed by inferior opponents.

A recent operation has restored Pete's vision and he is now ready to give battle to any of them, and, as he says, "show the public just why he is champion of the world."

On Dec. 19, 1917, Pete boxed Gussie Lewis in one of the bouts at the Soldiers and Sailors' Smoke Fund benefit held here. During the mixup a tin tip on the string of one of Lewis' gloves, which should have been cut off, scratched the ball of Herman's right eye. Pete didn't pay much attention to the optic at first, although it bothered him. When he went home to New Orleans a short time after that he discovered he was losing the sight of the eye.

The little champion consulted Dr. Reiss, a Crescent city specialist. Pete was advised to give up boxing because, according to Reiss a cataract was growing on the eye and he would eventually go blind. Later Dr. Reiss told him that he believed an operation would restore his sight. Pete "went under the knife" and now his vision is as good as ever.

CHICAGO NET MEN AGAIN WIN OVER CINCINNATIANS

Take 2 Out of 3 Matches in Intercity Series.

Chicago scored its second victory over Cincinnati in the Intercity Tennis series yesterday, winning two of the three matches at the Edgewater Beach hotel courts. In a previous encounter at Cincinnati the Chicagoans won two out of three. R. A. Holden of Cincinnati defeated Alex Squair of Chicago yesterday in easy fashion, the Chicagoan being off on his game, many of his shots going wide of the tapes.

In the second singles match Clifton Herd bumped Louis Kuhler of Cincinnati, 6—2, 4—6, 7—5, in a dazzling display of volleys and chop shots. Herd had his opponent on the run in the first set and won in handy fashion. Kuhler took the second on his service, putting several aces across.

Ralph H. Burdick and Walter T. Hayes, Chicago runners-up in the national clay court championships a few weeks ago, defeated Holden and Kuhler after a hot fight. The scores were 9—7, 4—6, 10—8.

Roque Medal to Naber; King Wins All Games

Warsaw, Ind., July 31.—[Special.]—The Interstate Roque league tournament, which has been in progress throughout the week, ended today. The first division medal was awarded to Louis Naber of North Manchester, whose average was 24⅞. R. C. Peck of Decatur, Ill., was runner-up with an average of 23 8-9.

HOLMES

Improved Air Cooled

Air-Cooling is Either Right or Wrong

61.4 Miles ON One Gallon of Gasoline

Officially Observed

Observer—Joseph Dasso, Illinois Automobile Club. Driver—W. J. Adair

W. J. Adair and Car Driven on High Gasoline Mileage Test

A Test to Demonstrate Gasoline Economy

If the Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Car can, by the elimination of nearly two hundred parts necessary to a water-cooling system and the saving of hundreds of pounds in weight, show greater efficiency and greater economy than any standard water-cooled car, then the Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Car should be your choice.

On July 30th a standard stock model Holmes car, which has already been driven over 18,000 miles, started on a run through the streets of Chicago to demonstrate how much mileage could be obtained from one gallon of gasoline.

The certified gallon tank was the sole source of gasoline supply—no special equipment was used.

The total distance traveled on one gallon of gasoline was 61.4 miles in a car of 126-inch wheel base.

What This Means to You

61.4 miles on one gallon of gasoline is the highest mileage ever achieved by any standard stock car, regardless of its size.

It settles forever any questions regarding the superior fuel efficiency of Holmes Air-Cooling.

It proves beyond the question of a doubt that the ability of the Holmes Improved Air-Cooled motor to get more mileage power out of the fuel is one of the biggest single factors in economy in motor-car operating costs that the automobile industry has ever seen.

It proves that all the power in the Holmes motor is utilized in moving the car at a satisfactory rate of speed and at a satisfactory operating cost, rather than wasted by carrying around excess weight and by the inefficiency of a cooling system which, when it is working properly, over-cools the motor, and which is also restricted by the boiling point and freezing point of water.

The figures on gasoline mileage that others claim as records are the average with Holmes owners.

18-20 miles to the gallon is the average under all conditions of driving—25 miles to the gallon is easily achieved—and this record of 61.4 miles shows what can be done.

Holmes gasoline economy is more notable when you take into consideration that the Holmes is a full-sized car carrying seven passengers in the touring model, six passengers in the sedan, four passengers in the coupe and four passengers in the roadster—that it is a car of 126-inch wheel base equipped with 34 by 4½-inch cord tires—a car that you can drive over the road at a continued speed of 35 to 40 miles an hour where other cars must slow down to 18 to 20 miles an hour or bounce off the road.

Consider These Records of Performance

On July 1st a standard stock Holmes touring car was driven from Chicago to Cincinnati in nine hours and one minute at an average road speed of 39.5 miles per hour.

On July 15th a standard stock Holmes Touring Car was driven 195.3 miles on low gear at an average speed of 9.1 miles per hour, on an oil consumption of two quarts.

In road speed, cooling efficiency, and fuel economy the Holmes has set standards which no water-cooled car can hope to duplicate.

Buy your car for practical reasons, demonstrated superiority in the kind of work which assures you continued satisfaction.

L. V. L. PRAISES GREAT MAJORITY OF LEGISLATORS

Lowden and Shanahan Get Special Tributes.

Work done by the Fifty-first general assembly wins praise in the report of the Legislative Voters' league given to the public yesterday. Not only does the league commend the work of the legislature, but the great majority of the members are given credit for having made good records.

Particular praise is given Gov. Lowden for the legislative record made.

"The assembly produced more important constructive legislation than was enacted at any other recent session except, perhaps, that of 1917," the report declares. "For much of this constructive legislation the people of this state are indebted in no small measure to Gov. Lowden, who presented an administration legislative program and gave it important backing."

The league lists among the important pieces of legislation those dealing with:

State tax commission; waterways; revision of corporation laws; ratification of federal prohibition amendment ratification of federal woman's suffrage amendment; increased bonding powers for cities; state deposits; good roads bonds; nonpartisan elections in Chicago; prohition and enforcement act; and provision for a constitutional convention.

Praises Tax Commission Law.

Of the legislation creating the state tax commission the report says:

"Perhaps the most important of these new laws created a state tax commission to take the place of the out-of-date and ineffective state board of equalization. The new tax commission, which consists of three members, is endowed with all the old powers of the old equalization board and is especially empowered by law to order the reassessment of property when there is reason to believe that local assessors have failed to do their work properly. It is believed that this power of reassessment will rarely have to be used and that the fact that the tax commission possesses it will result in largely increasing the amount of property listed for taxation."

The waterways legislation and revision of the corporation laws are also commended.

In its comment upon the individual legislators the league pays a special compliment to Speaker David E. Shanahan. Edward D. Shurtleff, candidate for United States senator, is also praised.

Report on Cook Members.

Following is a synopsis of the report on Cook county senators and representatives:

FIRST DISTRICT.

WILLIAM M. BRINKMAN, representative [Rep.]—Ending third term with a fair record.

SHEADRICK B. TURNER, representative [Rep.]—Ending second term; record poor.

JOHN GRIFFIN, representative [Dem.]—Ending sixth term; record uniformly poor.

SECOND DISTRICT.

JOHN M. POWELL, senator [Dem.]—Ending first term; has shown no legislative capacity.

ROGER J. MARCY, representative [Rep.]—Ending fourth term; record unsatisfactory.

FRANK RYAN, representative [Dem.]—Ending third term with an unsatisfactory record.

SAMUEL E. WEINSHENKER, representative [Dem.]—Ending first term with a fairly creditable record.

THIRD DISTRICT.

WARREN B. DOUGLAS, representative [Rep.]—Ending first term with a poor record.

ADELBERT H. ROBERTS, representative [Rep.]—Ending first term with a highly creditable record.

GEORGE G. NOONAN, representative [Dem.]—Ending first term with a colorless record.

FOURTH DISTRICT.

AL F. GORMAN, senator [Dem.]—Ending third term with a very creditable record.

EMIL O. KOWALSKI, representative [Rep.]—Ending fourth term with a poor record.

JAMES P. BOYLE, representative [Dem.]—Ending first term; general voting record creditable.

FRANK McDERMOTT, representative [Dem.]—Ending first term with a poor record.

FIFTH DISTRICT.

THEODORE K. LONG, representative [Rep.]—Ending first term; a man of unusual ability and high character; eminently fitted for usefulness in the general assembly.

SIDNEY LYON, representative [Rep.]—Ending second term with a good record.

MICHAEL L. IGOE, representative [Dem.]—Ending third term with a highly creditable record; was Democratic floor leader; able and efficient legislator.

SIXTH DISTRICT.

JAMES J. BARBOUR, senator [Rep.]—Ending first term with excellent record.

RALPH E. CHURCH, representative [Rep.]—Evanston—Ending second term with thoroughly good record.

EMIL A. W. JOHNSON, representative [Rep.]—Ending first term with creditable record.

ROBERT E. WILSON, representative [Dem.]—Ending fifth term with poor record; lacks legislative qualifications and does not properly represent people of district.

SEVENTH DISTRICT.

ALBERT F. VOLZ, representative [Rep.], Arlington Heights—Ending second term with unsatisfactory record.

HOWARD P. CASTLE, representative [Rep.], Barrington—Ending first term with exceptionally fine record; took more effective part in legislation than any other new member of house, and won prompt recognition as a man of character and ability.

JOHN W. McCARTHY, representative [Dem.], Lemont—Ending second term; intelligent and faithful member; made good record.

NINTH DISTRICT.

DAVID E. SHANAHAN, representative [Rep.]—Ending thirteenth term as a member of the house and third consecutive term as speaker. In that difficult and important office he has shown remarkable fairness, industry, and ability. As during the preceding session, he had much to do with holding down legislative expenditures. Mr. Shanahan deserves the highest credit for the fact that during the Fifty-first general assembly legislation was dealt with more on its merits than at any other session in the recent history of the state. He had a very large part in securing the constructive legislation that was enacted.

THOMAS A. DOYLE, representative [Dem.]—Ending first term with creditable record.

JOSEPH PLACEK, representative [Dem.]—Ending third term with fair voting record.

ELEVENTH DISTRICT.

WILLIAM H. CRUDEN, representative [Rep.]—Ending first term with excellent record.

EDWARD B. LUCIUS, representative [Rep.]—Ending first term with excellent record.

FRANK J. RYAN, representative [Dem.]—Ending fourth term with unsatisfactory record.

THIRTEENTH DISTRICT.

GOTTHARD A. DAHLBERG, representative [Rep.]—Ending third term with excellent record of faithful public service.

C. A. YOUNG, representative [Rep.]—Ending third term; general record creditable.

JAMES W. RYAN, representative [Dem.]—Ending third term; record colorless.

FIFTEENTH DISTRICT.

THOMAS CURRAN, representative [Rep.]—Ending seventh term; a man of some ability but record not praiseworthy.

JOSEPH PERINA, representative [Dem.]—Ending first term; showed no evidence of fitness for work as legislator.

PETER F. SMITH, representative [Dem.]—Ending fifth term with poor record; seems to lack legislative qualifications.

SEVENTEENTH DISTRICT.

EDWARD J. SMEJKAL, representative [Rep.]—Ending ninth term; served creditably as chairman of the appropriations committee for third successive session.

CHARLES COIA, representative [Dem.]—Ending first term with a fair record.

JACOB W. EPSTEIN, representative [Dem.]—Ending third term; missed many important roll calls and did not seem to take legislative duties very seriously; record rather poor.

NINETEENTH DISTRICT.

SOLOMON P. RODERICK, representative [Rep.]—Ending third term with a highly creditable record; intelligent and industrious member who seldom missed a roll call.

JAMES P. O'BRIEN, representative [Dem.]—Intelligent and capable man, who died soon after beginning of session.

JAMES T. PRENDERGAST, representative [Dem.]—Ending third term; not particularly active, but showed independence in voting and made a fairly creditable record.

TWENTY-FIRST DISTRICT.

FREDERICK J. BIPPUS, representative [Rep.]—Ending third term; record as a whole creditable.

MICHAEL F. MAHER, representative [Dem.]—Ending second term with a poor record; not properly qualified.

BENJAMIN M. MITCHELL, representative [Dem.]—Ending ninth term; record which formerly was poor; has shown improvement during last two terms.

TWENTY-THIRD DISTRICT.

EDWARD M. OVERLAND, representative [Rep.]—Ending second term with a colorless record.

WILLIAM G. THON, representative [Rep.]—Ending third term with excellent record; one of the most hard working, efficient, and faithful members.

THOMAS P. KEANE, representative [Dem.]—Ending first term with a good record.

TWENTY-FIFTH DISTRICT.

CHARLES L. FIELDSTACK, representative [Rep.]—Ending fifth term; while record showed improvement in some respects over former sessions, it continued to be poor.

THEODORE R. STEINERT, representative [Rep.]—Ending first term with a fair record.

JOHN G. JACOBSON, representative [Dem.]—Ending third term with a poor record; is not well qualified.

TWENTY-SEVENTH DISTRICT.

EDWARD WALZ, representative [Rep.]—Ending second term; fair voting record.

JAMES M. DONLAN, representative [Dem.]—Ending third term with fairly good record.

JOSEPH PETLAK, representative [Dem.]—Ending second term; fair voting record.

TWENTY-NINTH DISTRICT.

BERNARD F. CLETTENBERG, representative [Rep.]—An able, independent, and reliable legislator who served the people of his district and of the state faithfully and who died early in his fourth term.

BERNARD J. CONLON, representative [Dem.]—Ending fourth term with poor record; not well qualified.

LAWRENCE C. O'BRIEN, representative [Dem.]—Ending second term with poor record; not well fitted for legislative work.

THIRTY-FIRST DISTRICT.

FRANK J. SEIF JR., representative [Dem.]—Ending third term; attentive to business; made fair voting record.

Tests Show Films Beat Oral Teaching in School

Prof. Rollin D. Salisbury of the University of Chicago and president of the Society for Visual Education, yesterday announced results of tests recently conducted at Detroit to determine the value of instructing public school children by "movie" films. According to Prof. J. H. Wilson of Columbia university, who conducted the tests, pupils receiving film instruction accomplished 10 per cent better results in one-quarter the time necessary for oral instruction.

Iowa Railway and Light.

F. S., Buffalo Center, Ia.—The Iowa Railway and Light company reported gross earnings of $2,375,253 last year, and net of $631,591, compared with $577,821 in 1918. Interest charges, which were $309,609, were covered more than twice. The first and refunding bonds and the notes secured by deposit of bonds are well secured investments.

Railway Financing Is First Need.

With long time loans unobtainable at less than 7 per cent, short time loans still higher, and with earning power fixed by law at 5½ per cent of the value of their property, how are the railroads to pay for the many millions of dollars' worth of improvements now urgently needed? The government has some money to lend them at 6 per cent, but only a small part of the amount necessary.

To enable them to obtain the needed capital the coöperation of the interstate commerce commission will be necessary. The limit of 5½ per cent on earning power lasts only a year and six months from Sept. 1 next. After March 1, 1922, the commission has the power to fix the rate of return. If it now adopts a policy of reasonable liberality toward the carriers the stronger companies can borrow money as it may be needed on the hope that earnings will be sufficient in 1922 if not before.

Inasmuch as extensive betterments are a vital necessity to the whole country, this matter ought to have first consideration in fixing rates. In any event there will be a great amount of new securities offerd to the public for the purposes of this financing. If a policy of liberality toward the carriers is established, the bonds will find a ready market, while if the commission seems inclined to scrimp investors will scrutinize new offerings very closely.

Brief Answers.

W. H., Annawan, Ill.—The Rock Island Southern railway sold last April for $151,000 for the benefit of the bondholders.

S. L. P.—Few details of the Cushing Petroleum corporation are available. Its stock is not in the investment class.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

The weekly review of Chicago unlisted securities by F. M. Zeiler & Co. follows:

Continued dullness characterized transactions in the local unlisted securities market. Price changes have been narrow, most issues displaying a steady tone, slight advances and declines being noted in a few. Butler Brothers was rather actively traded in around 42, but sold down at the close to 41⅝ to 41⅞. Burroughs Adding Machine continued strong, adding another ten points again to reported sales at 195, closing at 188 bid, 196 asked. Consumers common was quiet at 63 to 66; preferred was neglected, stock being offered at 83 with bids of 79. Gossard Corset was in demand at 48½, with offerings at 51. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock declined to sales at 64. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply old was offered at 222. Wahl preferred gained a point from the previous bid price, sales taking place at 87, closing at 86 to 88. McCord Manufacturing common changed hands at 33; and Inland Steel new at 58¼ to 59¼.

Implement issues have been without special feature. Avery common was steady at 113 bid, 117 asked; small offerings of preferred were in evidence at 97. Moline Plow preferred was easier at 83 to 85. Emerson Brantingham preferred was quoted at 72 to 76. Rubber stocks without exception continued to sell off, Goodyear common declining to 115. Preferred was steady at 84 to 86. Firestone Tire and Rubber common was offered for sale at 129; first preferred was quiet at 91 to 92½. Victor was traded in at 28, closing at this price bid with stock offered at 29½.

The sugar group was quiet, Columbia being unchanged at 17½ to 18¼; Holland-St. Louis was slightly easier at 15¾ to 16¼; Michigan was neglected at 12 to 12½. Increased activity was noted in the motor securities, Stearns advancing to sales as high as 36, closing at 36 bid, 38 asked. Considerable trading took place in Reo around 22. Continental, after selling at 9½, reacted to 9. Paige-Detroit was quiet at 27 to 29. Sales in bank shares were as follows: Continental and Commercial National, 300; State Bank of Chicago, 322; First National, 398-400. Public utility sales were as follows: Cities Service common, 321-315; preferred, 65⅝-66; United Light and Railways common, 17-18; preferred, 56-57; American Light and Traction common, 122-123; Standard Gas and Electric common, 12½-13; preferred, 35½-36½.

City Uses 27,000 Cars of Vegetables in Year

During the last twelve months Chicago consumed 27,000 carloads of vegetables and fruits, a 10 per cent increase over the average amount consumed in the three previous years, according to figures just made public by the United States bureau of markets.

In the four year period 96,000 carloads of fruits and vegetables were unloaded here. Of these more than half were potatoes. Apples lead all other fruits with 20,200 carloads, and cabbage was another favorite, 1,400 carloads being used.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Wilson & Co., the Chicago packing concern, has purchased D. B. Martin & Co., Baltimore, Md., one of the largest eastern packing houses, and will operate it as the Wilson-Martin company. The acquired company has a chain of branch houses and subsidiaries in the east and southeast. Under the merger it is estimated this business will exceed $25,000 annually.

Stockholders of the Jordan Motor Car company will vote on Sept. 9 on a proposal to merge with the Edward S. Jordan company, a Delaware corporation owning over half of the common stock of the Jordan Motor company, into a new corporation, the Jordan Motor Car Co., Inc. This will involve some financing, including the splitting of the common shares on a five for one basis. The new company will authorize an additional 240,000 shares of nonpar common stock.

Stockholders of the Fensland Oil company ratified increasing the authorized capitalization from 200,000 to 225,000 shares. The directors ratified a contract for acquiring some 30,000 additional acres of oil and gas land leases.

An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in the United States district court in New York against the Biddle Motor Car company, a Delaware corporation.

The New York stock exchange has ruled that due bills for certificates of American shares of the Shell Transport and Trading Co., Ltd., ordinary stock, be redeemed on Aug. 3, and that thereafter certificates must be accompanied by warrants for the rights; also that the first mortgage 4 per cent 100 year bonds, due 1990, of the Kansas City and Pacific Railway company, be quoted "ex" the February coupon on July 31.

The Standard Parts company, Cleveland, O., will issue $8,000,000 five year 8 per cent first mortgage and collateral trust notes and 80,000 shares of common stock, no par value, which will be exchanged share for share for the present $100 par value stock. The total common outstanding will be 227,000 of an authorization of 250,000 shares. An issue of $6,000,000 7 per cent notes, maturing Sept. 5, will be retired.

A Philadelphia dispatch stated that a committee of seven creditors has been named to investigate the affairs of the Concord Textile company with a view to creating a plan of adjustment. The company's liabilities are put at about $800,000 and its assets are regarded ample to pay in full if it is relieved of certain contracts.

Invest Your Funds in Successful Going Enterprises

PARTICULARLY do we recommend the capital issues of old established industrial concerns—leaders in their respective fields—enterprises whose products are nationally known, whose management comprises the best brains in their line, and whose outlook for future growth and expansion insures a continuation of profitable operation.

Take advantage of Today's Unusual Opportunities for Safe and Profitable Investment by placing your funds in the capital issues of one or more of the leading industrial enterprises of the country. Money now so placed yields unusually large returns owing to the present unusual conditions, while the stability of these enterprises assures a continuance of these unusually large returns.

Our Statistical Department has just prepared a booklet giving all of the essential details concerning the capital issues of the following well-known companies; these details comprise a brief history of the business, statement as to capitalization, dividends, assets and earnings, etc. Write for your copy today—it will be sent postpaid, without obligation.

BREAK IN WHEAT TAKES ALL GRAIN TO LOWER LEVELS

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Demoralization prevails in the grain market with the most sensational break in wheat that the grain trade has ever known under legitimate conditions. Cash wheat dropped 16@28c in the various markets, Chicago being off 18@49c and southwestern markets 16@28c, Kansas City leading. Minneapolis dropped 20c. Futures here were off 11½@12c with December down to $2.11, while cash wheat was $2.31 for No. 1 red and hard winter. Corn broke to new levels for the deferred futures and closed 3¼@6½c lower with July leading. Oats were off 9¼c for July, while deferred futures lost only ⅞@1¼c. Rye finished with losses of 2@4¼c and barley ¾@2¾c.

It was a day of liquidation from start to finish, with several small rallies at times, but they were followed by a rapid shading of values. Unless the country stops selling wheat lower prices seem inevitable, as the grain trade views it, and with lower prices for wheat, it is expected corn, oats, and rye will follow.

It has been a week of liquidation despite efforts on the part of the bull interests to prevent declines. Wheat is off 42¾@46¼c, as compared with a week ago. Corn 17@21¼c, oats 6⅝@19½c, rye 18½@28c, barley 12c, pork $1.52½@2.02½, and short ribs 75@82½c, as compared with a week ago. These drastic declines have created a feeling of uneasiness and buyers have backed away.

Flour Prices Drop.

Flour prices dropped 50c yesterday and are off $1.50 per brl on spring wheat flours in practically two weeks. Car lots of spring patents are $11.75@13.25 and the retail price on standard brands is $14.00. Soft winters are selling at $10.00@11.50 and hard winters at $11.00@12.00 per brl in car lots.

Foreigners were practically out of the wheat market and it was a buyers' market nearly all day, as they dictated prices. Country elevators were sellers of 5,000 and 10,000 bu lots all day. The best buying around $2.13 for December was by houses with Omaha connections, who took around 200,000 bu. The Armour Grain Co. was a buyer on the break around $2.11. The close was practically the bottom. The movement is increasing, the six markets have 1,125 against 878 cars a week ago and 2,341 cars last year. Kansas City, Omaha and St. Louis had 733 cars for the day, or 191 cars more than a week ago compared with 1,465 cars last year.

Corn Gets Needed Rains.

Heavy rains in parts of Missouri, Nebraska, Illinois and Indiana which will be of decided benefit to the corn crop, combined with the weakness in wheat, led to heavy selling and general liquidation in corn. Prices were highest at the start and lowest toward the close, the undertone being heavy throughout the day. Buying against daily and weekly bids helped to check the decline. The Armour Grain Co. was a good buyer on the way down.

Sentiment was more bearish than recently, the rains removing apprehension of damage to the crop, although they were mainly in the shape of scattered thundershowers, and there were many sections that failed to receive moisture.

July Oats Lead Decline.

Scattered longs in July oats started to liquidate in a market almost bare of support and prices dropped rapidly, at the close being only ⅞c over the September against 5½c the previous day. Deferred delliveries were sold by the local element in sympathy with corn, and bought by strong commission houses and showed stubborn resistance to pressure. After the close the Quaker Oats Co. paid 4c over July for No. 3 whites and 2c over for heavy No. 3 white in the sample market.

Hedging sales in volume developed in rye, and September declined sharply, support being lacking. There was less presure than expected in the July, however, and it held relatively firm. Export demand was slow, with no sales reported.

Barley offerings were not large and sales showed no change in price. No choice grain offered. Receipts, -0 cars.

Packers Buy Lard.

Liquidation was on in provisions, with the close at losses of 32½@45c on lard, 15@50c on ribs, the latter on July, and 67½c on pork. The buying support came from the packing interests, who took July and September lard freely, while Hately bought around 1,000,000 lbs of September ribs. Cash trade was a little better in lard and meats. Shipments of both increased nearly 3,000,000 lbs for the week, being 16,285,000 lbs. against 51,254,000 lbs last year. Prices follow:

GRAIN MOVEMENT LARGER

Grain receipts at Chicago for the week were 5,073,000 bu, or 1,029,000 bu more than the previous week, 5,028,000 bu below last year's, and 1,530,000 bu under the five year average. Corn receipts were 1,801,000 bu, a decrease of 158,000 bu for the week and an increase of 830,000 bu over last year. Oats increased 834,000 bu, being 2,404,000 bu, or 958,000 bu short of last year, while wheat increased 558,000 bu and was 1,216,000 bu or 4,127,000 bu short of last year. Primary receipts of all grain the last week were 18,007,000 bu, against 17,439,000 bu the previous week, and 33,413,000 bu last year.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

The grain trade seems to have reached the decision that it is not a question of what grains are worth but of what you can get for them. There has been liquidation and short selling on an enormous scale and the action of the markets has caused a reversal of sentiment. The trade is bearish now after a break of 65c in wheat, 47c in corn, and 38c in oats from the high point within thirty days, as they were bullish around the top. The trade is looking for wheat to sell below $2.00 and December corn to eventually $1.00, or 19¾c lower than yesterday's inside figure.

A drop of 55c has been made in No. 2 white oats from the record level within a short time. It is the most severe break that the grain trade has known under similar conditions.

A local trader has figured that taking the reports of export sales of oats the last twelve months, the aggregate was over 200,000,000 bu, while actual clearances for the twelve months ended June 30 were 33,945,000 bu, compared with 98,361,000 bu the previous year.

A year ago yesterday corn prices started on their sensational decline, which carried the December down from $1.73 on July 29 to $1.16⅝ early in September. At the inside figure yesterday December was 3¼c above the low price on the crop made last year, having declined from $1.59 on June 27.

R. O. Cromwell, in a report to E. W. Wagner & Co. from Grand Forks, N. D., estimated the spring wheat condition of the country at around 74, with an indicated crop of 258,000,000 bu, or 33,000,000 bu less than suggested by the government July 1 returns and compared with 209,000,000 bu harvested last year.

Howard B. Jackson, vice president of the United States Grain corporation at Chicago, has about finished his work and will resume his position as senior member of Jackson Bros. & Co. Frank G. Jackson and Edward Hymess have been admitted to partnership in Jackson Bros. W. J. Farrell, chief grain inspector, and Charles P. Squire, manager of the United States Grain corporation, are now associated with the Jackson house.

In reviewing the wheat situation W. C. Weigand, with Simons, Day & Co., says there are great possibilities of eventually lower prices. The economy on the part of the European consumer may tend to furnish the consumer in the United States with cheaper bread, as the world's demand will make the price.

Better grades of hogs closed strong to 15c higher than Friday, while packing kinds closed weak to 15c lower. Comparatively few good light numbered among the arrivals, while the large number of heavy packing lots held over from Friday cut the general average 35c to $14.45. Day's top was $16.15.

The week's average price of hogs at $14.65 was lowest since the first week of June. The 128,200 received during the week averaged 245 lbs, being as heavy as any week since last October, against 244 lbs previous week and 245 lbs a year ago.

Choice to fancy beef steers closed fully as high as a week ago, while other cattle, including butcher stock, closed mostly 50c@$1. lower, with some grassy kinds as much as $1.50 lower for the week. Lambs closed 75c@$1 lower for the week, while sheep closed 25@50c above previous Saturday.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 14,000 cattle, 34,000 hogs and 20,000 sheep, against 12,062 cattle, 21,341 hogs and 13,868 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago.

Next week's estimated receipts: 49,000 cattle, 120,000 hogs and 85,000 sheep, against 42,171 cattle, 75,118 hogs and 98,055 sheep the corresponding week a year ago.

Probable hog receipts for tomorrow are estimated at 30,000 to 40,000. Felix Gehrmann and R. W. Oake marked 30,000; F. R. Burrows, 32,000; John T. Brown, 35,000; W. H. Overman, 38,000; J. M. Waters, 39,000, and F. W. Waddell, 40,000.

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Deliveries on July contracts Saturday were 270,000 bu corn, 250,000 bu oats, and 160,000 bu rye. The Armour Grain company paid for the grain. Shipping sales Saturday were 25,000 bu corn and 110,000 bu oats.

There was an absence of export demand for wheat at the seaboard and gulf. Early there were no bids reported from either section, but later in the day a small lot was reported sold from the eastern interior on the basis of $2.45, track, New York. Export sales in all positions Friday were estimated at 1,500,000 bu. Owing to the holiday in Liverpool it is expected that the British commission will be out of the market until Wednesday. The continent has been taking the greater part of the wheat of late.

The cash grain markets of the west were demoralized, with Chicago 15@17c lower, closing at the bottom, with No. 1 hard or red winter $2.31. Bids to arrive dropped 15c, with $2.19 bid for No. 2 red or hard, August shipment, track, Chicago. St. Louis declined 16@19c; Omaha, 17@18c; Kansas City, 18@28c; and Minneapolis, 20c. Local receipts, 213 cars.

Cash corn at Chicago dropped 4@5c and closed with No. 1 and No. 2 mixed and white at $1.40 and yellow at $1.41. Cash oats were 4@6c lower, with bulk of sales up to the close at 1½@2c over July for No. 2 white and ⅛@2c under for No. 3 white.

RESERVE BANKS SAVE RESOURCES FOR CROP MOVING

Conservation of credit resources by the federal reserve banking system in preparation for the autumn demands for crop moving purposes was again indicated in the weekly statement of the banks, issued yesterday. The New York and Chicago federal reserve institutions showed slight increases in loans to member banks, but this expansion was counteracted by a contraction in commercial bills bought in the market.

New banks showed declines in loans on government obligations but increases in loans secured by commercial paper. Both also showed declines in deposits and net circulation. These changes resulted in the reserve position of both institutions remaining about the same as in the preceding week. The Chicago bank continued to maintain its freedom of debt to sister institutions and loans of the New York bank to other federal reserve institutions receded slightly.

Gold Reserve Increases.

The New York bank showed an increase in gold reserves of $4,949,268 and a gain in total reserves of $5,455,245. Total loans increased $944,603, those on commercial paper expanding $10,574,225, but those on government obligations receding $9,629,622. Bills bought declined $5,807,000, so that total bills on hand receded $4,863,322. Other federal reserve banks reduced their borrowings to $359,977. Total earnings assets increased $1,326,000. Net circulation receded $87,000. The ratio of total reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined was 40.4 compared with 40.2 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserves to net deposits, after deducting 40 per cent gold reserve against note circulation, was 40.9 compared with 40.5 per cent in the preceding week.

Chicago's Reserves Decline.

The Chicago banks statement showed a decline in gold reserves of $1,499,080 and a decrease in total reserves of $1,371,000. Total loans expanded $1,780,307, those on commercial paper increasing $1,157,812 but those on government obligations declining $3,471,605. Bills bought receded $1,299,869, so that bills on hand increased only $480,438. With the loan expansion the member banks' reserve account expanded $1,964,757.

Total gross deposits declined $4,934,666, government deposits receding $1,033,199. Note circulation decreased $4,130,740. Total earnings assets increased $432,423. The ratio of reserves to deposit and note liabilities combined was 40.69 compared with 40.74 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserves to note deviation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, was 43.19 compared with 43.42 per cent in the preceding week.

Legal Reserves Low.

In contrast with the rather favorable exhibits of the federal reserve institutions, the New York clearing house banks again made a surprisingly unfavorable showing. The deficit in legal reserves shown in the preceding week not only was in no wise corrected, but was even increased by $3,810,000, so that now the banks' reserve are $6,896,520 below legal requirements.

The poor showing was attributed almost wholly to an increase in demand deposits of $9,586,000, as the aggregate reserve declined only $584,000 and the member banks' reserve account at the federal reserve bank receded only $779,000. Cash declined $1,482,000. Loans receded $20,000,000, which apparently resulted from a reduction in government deposits of $13,290,000, although such deposits do not count in reckoning the required reserve. Note circulation increased $248,000. The impression given by the statement is still more unfavorable in view of the fact that the treasury has notified banks that it will further reduce its balance by $14,000,000 this week.

Reserve Banks' Loans Increase.

Some increase in loans and a decrease in deposits were the chief features of the consolidated statement of the twelve federal reserve banks. Total loans expanded $31,723,000, those on commercial paper increasing $28,077,000, but those on government obligations receding $6,354,000. Bills bought declined $8,228,000, so that total bills on hand increased $13,485,000. Despite the loan expansion, the member banks' reserve account declined $17,408,000. Total gross deposits declined $49,000,000.

Total reserves declined $5,567,000 and total reserves receded $5,372,000. Holdings of treasury certificates of indebtedness increased $10,611,000. Circulation expanded $1,933,000. Total earnings assets increased $24,097,000. The ratio of total reserves to net deposit and federal reserve note liabilities combined was 44.6, compared with 44.4 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities, fell to 42.9 from 49.5 per cent in the preceding week.

TEA

—the world's social drink— reaches its highest refinement in Savoy Orange Pekoe

TEA is a universal symbol of hospitality. Every hostess can afford to offer a "sup" of tea for the refreshment of the honored guest. And yet, Tea is distinctly the beverage of fashion.

But, unless tea is properly blended it can be nothing more than a symbol of hospitality. Savoy Orange Pekoe tea is blended from the finest teas of Ceylon and India, with infinite care, by an expert who knows the qualities which make tea a satisfying drink.

This is the reason Savoy tea is sold by so many good grocers and served in so many places which typify our best social life. Sincere grocers and substantial people are naturally attracted by the fragrance, the flavor and the body of Savoy tea.

And your enjoyment cannot be lessened to know that Savoy Orange Pekoe tea is economical—that you get 300 to 400 cups from the pound.

So, if you, too, would end all experimenting and enjoy tea of an unusually fine character, let the mark of Savoy be your guide. You will find your favorite variety in full, half, and quarter-pound containers at all high-class grocers.

The Chump and the Champ by Jack Lait

"I says to myself the racket is for me to hitch my wagon to a star; by that I mean team up with somebody what knows what I don't know, see?

SOME ONE grew famous once—so famous that I cannot at this moment call his name—by writing a song entitled "The Victim Was the Wise Guy After All." Likewise one of the surest prescriptions for writing popular stuff has always been to pattern the plot after the fable in which the tortoise beat the hare and the tale in which David slew Goliath.

There are two reasons why the type of yarns in which the weak lick the strong get favored attention. First, because such instances are rare; second, because most of us are victims, hares, and Davids, and we dream of outwitting wise guys, outrunning hares, and slaughtering Goliaths. The first reason gives such stories their selling value and the second their buying value.

In everyday life an occasional Dempsey does reach up and knock down a decadent Willard; a dark horse does now and then nose out a favorite that bore a drunken jockey; a Prohibition party of a few hundred thousand does upset a nation of millions of drinking voters—once; a man may, between blue moons, be sued by a pretty woman and not be swamped by the verdict; a husband may slip over a teeny alibi on his fair spouse who has been sitting up for him until after midnight. But in this same everyday life the scales generally balance with the heavier side down. Miracles are all very well, and one who profits by a miracle should be unduly grateful—but it isn't safe to bet on one.

And that is as it should be, or why did Providence give strength to the strong and brains to cheaters? Gold is finer than doughnuts, but not heavier, so gold should meet doughnuts in a contest other than weight. If gold, which already has so much to its advantage, swells all up and thinks it is heavy, too, let gold pay the wager and learn a lesson in the standard of values. But human folk are a perverse breed. The excellent clown yearns to play Hamlet, the superior financier craves to shake the shimmy, the best waitress in Cedar Rapids itches to write moving pictures, and the foremost kindergarten instructor pants to be a vamp.

"A Boob What Plays Another Guy's Game Is a Fish," Observes the Canada Kid, and Proves It

This being thus, perhaps the following is therefore:

The Canada Kid, champion pickpocket, walked out of a railway ticket office in a northern city with a long strip of transportation, destination Wichita Falls, Tex. He arrived there via Fort Worth, at something before breakfast time, a. m. He had heard somewhat of Wichita Falls—he had heard that it was crowded; this "tip" had not a little to do with his going there, for crowded places were to the Canada Kid the snappy hunting grounds. He found that the information was correct. Men, all sorts of men, were lined three deep about the quadrilateral lunch counter in the depot. The Kid horned in, and in time laid away a couple of soggy buns and a crock of coffee. He looked twice at the coffee, once before he tasted it and once after, and mused: "An' they call me a crook!"

Even at the early hour which found the alien crusader abroad upon the walks of Wichita Falls those walks were alive with men. Women were rare. But men jostled and pushed, stewed and rushed. The Kid, used to congestion and not hostile to it, viewed with wonder the going and coming and ever increasing throngs, nipping a watch now and again as he wondered and nicking a purse or two as he viewed. The main current in the mob seemed to lead to an objective on the main thoroughfare, a dusty, paveless street. Ah—it was a hotel! In truth, it was the hotel.

In the oil boom days of Wichita Falls, which saw a rush such as the Klondike never knew, when oil and insanity and millions and hot air flowed like beer used to at a German picnic (both now obsolete), this town, built for some five or six thousand inhabitants, was the beehive of ten times the limit of its capacity. Standing room in that hotel lobby was something to wait hours for. What had been a grocery store at $20 a month was now thirty offices, each at $100, with imaginary lines to mark off the headquarters of flotation corporations, refinery syndicates, leasehold speculation combinations, engineering firms, gusher melon cutting eleemosynary institutions, imaginary oil well promotion pools, brokerage bourses, and stock exchanges. New York is a pretty sizable town and has three stock exchanges; Wichita Falls had 300.

The Kid saw stocks hawked up and down the walks like bananas. Blackboards stood upright beside the curbs and men in shirtsleeves ballyhooed. "I offer 3,000 shares Little Lone Star well, 180 yards from the famous 6,000 barrel gushers of Burk-Burnett. What am I bid? Make a bid, gents—chance of a lifetime. Ah—10¼—10¼—10½—10½—10¼—10 and what? Gentlemen! Less than half a mile from this location Tom Grant brought in three wells. What am I—11—11—I have 3,000 shares—11½—make it 12½, brother, and take the block. It'll make you independent for life. Sold to the gentleman for 12¼. I have here 4,000 shares of——"

It came from all sides and in all voices. Wild eyed men were comparing notes and opinions and hopes and dreams and flashy looking stocks, clutching them like youngsters with polychrome marbles.

Buildings were going up on every corner. Down the streets huge trucks were shaking the earth and behind them and on all sides of them mule drivers were profanely urging their animals to pull huge loads. The drivers had oil stocks protruding from their overalls pockets. Wherever a vacant space was left it was stacked with cots, uncovered, unsheltered, frequently even uninclosed. The cots were to let at Ritz-Carlton rates per night; no, per relay, for some slept by day and some slept by night.

Those who were not selling or buying at any moment were gossiping. They were retelling tales of overnight fortunes. There was the hotel stenographer who had been given ten shares of stock in Hyena No. 22 for her services in drawing up the papers for an option on the lease and within a month she had sold the ten shares for $10,000. There was the broker's clerk who had forgotten to make an entry of a sale of 1,000 shares just a moment before closing time, and by the time he recorded it, just a moment after opening time next morning, the shares had doubled and he pocketed the difference—a small fortune. A churchyard had been drilled between the graves of its departed, and the church had struck a spouter that would build it a stone cathedral and endow four orphan asylums and a Senegambian mission. A waiter in a quick lunch had laughingly taken a certificate of stock for a tip from a disappointed plunger who was leaving the region—a week later he bought the restaurant with it and had enough left for a diamond stud in his hickory shirt.

The Kid, a prime "mixer," had all the local small talk before noon. He didn't believe most of it, being by nature constitutionally skeptical. But he realized that not all of this could be wind. There must be oil, though he had never seen any except in a can, and there certainly was plenty of loose money.

The name of Tom Grant was spoken more

"Hello Information
Why the hesitation,
I want to know
And I want to know quick,
What is cool and soothing,
Freshening and nice
When you're hot and thirsty—
Taken off the ice—
"What's that Information . . . ?"
"DRINK SOME EDELWEISS!"

"But how are we going to know it
And how is it to be found?"
The Telephone Boy said:
"All look around!
There is its picture
Hanging on the wall,
Gaze upon it closely
Read it one and all—
Look upon the label
What is that device?
Read it all together:
'E-DEL-WEISS!'
And when you want a case at home,
It's mighty nice to know, sir,

You need but call your dealer up
Or telephone your grocer
Or say to central on the line
"Canal Nine, Canal Nine."
So into the receiver, now,
Let us give our yell,
Showing Information
That we know it well—
'All together Edel-once!
All together Edel-twice
Oh, it's soothing and it's nice
When you take it from the ice—
What is soothing? What is nice?
All together—EDELWEISS!' "

FIFTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

Vivs—The Ranch!

"But she was saved, as it were, by her death. The train that was taking her to meet him—crashed. She was killed."

She had won the love of her mother's people for herself and for Dick, and—surely—for her father, with the possible exception when you make a fellow laugh too long. You're awfully fond of Tripp, aren't you?"

"Yes, honey boy."

often than any other. The Kid was interested. Ranches, banks, companies, villages, a street, were named for Tom Grant. He must be "the berries" about Wichita Falls. The Kid began to feel that he was small fry, darting here and there and stealing a miserly few hundred when all about him men were chatting in millions. He calculated that if he could meet up with this Grant he, with his oft-tried engaging personality, his metropolitan approach, his wise wit, and his deft delivery, could strike a responsive and profitable note in this Grant and mayhap "turn a trick" on an "inside steer."

It possessed the Kid so thoroughly that he began to have a contempt for his own art. How much could he steal from other men's pockets? A few dollars—a few hundreds, a few thousands. What a penny snatching vocation it was, though, down here where men without any special talents, men without any, of the great gifts of drawing the diffident dollar from its sanctuary, were slopping about in wealth up to their dirty elbows! They weren't oil men—no, the men who pierced the earth and made the magic fluid to flow were day laborers—these were parasites, harpies, wise Alecks, who contributed nothing and extracted the cream. They were crooks like himself, only their graft was within the law. They took no chances most of them having arrived with nothing much to lose in the first place. They lived, somehow, off each other, but many grabbed big bank balances out of it.

The Kid looked about him and swept Wichita Falls with his eyes.

"Them what hook the kale here earn it for bein' here," he mused. "But the blessing is, a guy don't have to stick here after he cops. This mazuma is currency in the United States, too. The gag is to corral a oil mine down here an' have a winter hut in Palm Beach, a summer ranch in Maine, a autumn bungalow on Riverside drive, an' a spring shanty in Pasadena. But—how does a party freeze onto one o' them prairie syringes what squirts the oil?"

Again he thought of Grant.

"If I'm gonna dip in the good citizens' jeans, that's the bird I wanna touch," he concluded, and he walked toward the hotel, waited his time until he could sandwich in, and addressed a few of the acclimated, deflecting the talk to Grant. He found a shabby looking man from Montana, who explained that he had been so busy buying and selling the zigzagging and whipsawing stocks that he hadn't found time to buy any new clothes—"and these are all wore out and shiny from rubbing against the crowds"—who seemed to know Grant well. Any one who had been in the region more than a week could claim that honor, the Kid later learned. The Montana millionaire was not averse to being taken to luncheon, and in time the Kid seated him at a glazed tin table and let him order without stint. During the meal he got an epitome of Grant.

He ascertained that Grant had three powerful weaknesses: Southerners, cattle, and his son Carson.

Several had told him of Grant, and the substance of what they all said, concentrated, jibed with what the shiny four-flush from Montana related in detail. The Kid was satisfied.

He paid for the meal and went out to get his prospecting tools. He felt a trifle silly for a moment, making elaborate preparations against a man he had never seen and who did not know he existed, but he stood, picking his solid gold filled teeth on a corner, soliloquizing:

"How did them '49ers get their pile? They read or heard there was gold in the ground an' they went an' bought picks an' shovels and went after it. Well, there's gold in this here Grant, so it's up to me, as a prospector, to get my workin' clothes an' the appropriate machinery an' go dig into him."

He bought a sombrero as big as a pup tent, a pair of high heeled boots, a bandanna handkerchief to replace his soft silk collar and dandy cravat, and some "makin's." He practiced in an undertone a southern dialect that was a hash of vaudeville blackface lingo, east side gutter patois, and the Dixie drawl as he heard it about him from the southwestern natives. Dressed like a ranchman in good circumstances and equipped with his hybrid enunciation, he moved on Grant.

He had been informed that the eccentric millionaire always made his bank deposits in person, arriving at the bank of which he was president at about ten minutes before closing time. The Kid "laid for" him and presently saw his prey.

Grant was not picturesque. He looked like a Texan, but not like the transplanted Lone Stater of Hoyt or Hoyle. He was very tall and rawboned, past 70, with a stubble on his cheeks and chin, and his iron gray hair not short enough to be orderly nor long enough to be romantic. Instead of breeches and boots or puttees he wore sagging trousers, warped and worn at the knees, supported by two-bit suspenders over a blue flannel shirt unbuttoned at his skinny throat and unadorned by anything save three glaring white fresh water pearl buttons. His shoes were dusty and trodden far out of shape. On his head he wore a Pawnee Bill hat, black, not dented or shaped. A Pawnee Bill hat, be it known, differs from a Buffalo Bill hat in that it is much smaller and the brim is circular rather than elliptical; the crown is like an inverted stew pot and is not creased or otherwise influenced from its original contour.

The Kid coughed a trifle. Here he was, caparisoned like a Commanche, to impress this superannuated chromo who looked like an impecunious truck farmer bent under a 7 per cent mortgage. However, the Kid knew his clothes were bona fide Texas, for he had bought them there; but they were Fifth avenue, so to think, whereas Grant's were Second avenue, and in town millionaires might chose to wear rags but would still "fall for" the smartly dressed.

The Kid waited until Grant emerged, then addressed him in that easy manner he had, that nickel plated address with which he had convinced strangers who caught his hand in their pockets that he had put it there to give them something. Grant stopped and looked him over.

It were too trying to attempt the phonetics of the Kid's counterfeit southern jargon with an alphabet of only twenty-six letters, so his talk will be here transcribed in his natural slang and the reader may imagine the localized version as the Canada Kid "put it on" for his picked "chump":

"You're Mr. Grant, ain't you" he breathed.

Grant nodded.

"I come a long way to see you. My name is Sherrill—'Short Horn' Sherrill, they call me down in Arizona where I live, becus I specialize in short horns."

Tom Grant's eyes livened. A cattleman—and a southerner!

"What all can I do for you?" he asked. "You say you come a long ways for to see me?"

"Yes, sir. It's about your son."

"My boy—Carson—what mischief has he gone an' messed hisself up in now?"

"O, nothin' unpleasant, Mr. Grant—nothin'. I never met him—wouldn't know him if he walked up to us now. But—where can we have a little gas—I mean sit down an' chin a few?"

"Well, sah, will you come with me to the club?"

"Honored, sir."

Tom Grant took his guest into the Alamo club, seated him at a table in a corner of the cool grill, lumberingly lifted his feet on the table without a move toward taking off his hat, barked at a colored attendant to bring a bottle from his locker and be dog-whistlin' quick about it, and a gallon of cracked ice, then lolled back to hear what this ingratiating stranger who personified two of his possessing predilections should say about the third.

"It's like this," said the Kid. "I may be loco or cuckoo, but in my country, Cisco county, Ariz., there's a lot of oil talk, like there is everywheres. All the gossip o' Wichita Falls an' all 'round' here is mulled over an' turned inside out. Well, I admit I kind o' got the oil fever out o' all o' this here pro an' this here con what I been listenin' at."

"I see. But you said my son——"

"Beg pardon, Mr. Grant. I was jus' comin' to that. Well, I says to myself, I got a few hundred acres an' a few thousan' short horns rompin' aroun' with my brand on 'em. But how much does it get me? A little, yes; but here's a lot o' tramps from the north—now, I don' know how you feel about it, but I stand stiff against them Yanks comin' down here an' takin' southern money out o' the south by their slick methods—ah, I'm glad you agree with me, sir. I was afraid maybe a man o' your importance, havin' so many c'nections everywhere, might not stand for that sentiment, but it goes—I'm a southerner an' for southerners.

"Well, as I was sayin', I says to myself if these here foreigners can come into the oil country an' take out big killin's, why can't I? But my ol' daddy used to say to me, 'Son, a man playin' another man's game on the other man's home grounds is a fool.' So, me knowin' mighty little about oil an' its many intrickitt twists, I says to myself the racket is for me to hitch my wagon to a star; by that I mean team up with somebody what knows what I don't know, see?

"O' course, in all them oil talks, the name o' Tom Grant is mentioned in about every secon' breath, like you'd mention Charlie Chaplin when you're chewin' movies, or Pershing when you're conversin' milit'ry. An' I come to learn that you're the big man in this section—so big, says I to myself, that he prob'ly wouldn' even talk to me. But somebody drops a hint about you havin' a boy, a boy Carson, about my age."

"Carson is—let me see, sah—Carson is 29."

"Well, I'm 30," said the Kid, who was 41. "From what they tell me, your boy ain't c'nected in no reg'lar business."

"That's right," said Grant. "Carson is a puzzle and a worry to me. He's always had too much money, I reckon. I tried to make a cattleman out of him, but he's too lazy. I tried to make a banker out of him, but he wouldn't get up no interest in it. I tried to send him to college, but they thought him a bit wild and he come home again. He runs around after girls in shows that come down here, and he drinks more than a young fellow should—or, rather, he don't stand the proper amount of drink as well as a young fellow should. Sometimes I get pretty blue about it, stranger. And so you heard, 'way up in 'Zony, that my boy ain't in no reg'lar business. H'm—I didn't know it had got around like that."

"Well, don' let it break you up. This here may be the solution. You know—a child shall lead 'em, see? I says to myself that as long as my daddy was alive to give me what I need I was pretty harum scarum myself. But when responsibilities fell on my shoulders I become a man. Now, what I had the nerve to figger out—an' mebbe it might appeal to you—is that if you put the kid—29 is only a kid, after all—on his own mebbe he might come through great. He sure must have good blood in him. It's like a bull calf; it ain't much account before its weaned, but when it gets to bullhood it'll start a stampede. Do I make myself clear?"

"I think so. You see——"

"Exac'ly. Now, if Carson, instead o' his indulgiouent dad with millions at the end o' his fountain pen, was linked up with a feller about his own age, about his own style, wouldn't he mebbe take a diff'rent view o' things? Couldn't his partner, if he had one an' felt he was fifty-fifty, say things to him that his own father couldn't? This may all be 'way off the track, but again it might jus' hit you right. I'm prospectin'—I admit it. But that was my idee? Now, what's the answer, sir?"

The old millionaire looked at the disguised pickpocket for several seconds in silence. Then he sipped his toddy and said:

"There's undoubtedly a great deal in what you say, sah.

"Myself, I dislike the oil business. It's made this section rich, but it's ruined it—ruined it, sah. I, of course, was pretty well off before ever they thought of oil here. I own upwards of a million acres—cattle land, sah, cattle land. I didn't know within a few million o' what I was worth when Wichita Falls was a country crossroads. Those were fine days, those were. We rode the plains, and the nearest railroad was three days away on horseback. Men were men, and all the men were Texans—at least southerners.

"Now look at it—the state overrun with shysters and thieves and schemers and steerers and touts and swindlers and bootleggers and blacklegs and promoters. I got one tract o' land down here a piece where I let 'em sink some wells. I get $25,000 a week royalty out of it, yes. But they've spoiled the land, sah. It ain't fit for decent cattle to graze on any more. They trample it all up, these hoodlums from the no'th, who have no respect for alfalfa or buffalo grass, they haven't; they leave my gates open, an' last week I lost three heifers that I wouldn't have took $15 apiece for, sah. And look at what they've made out o' this yare town. Where that bank stands—my bank—I used to have a ranch house. There wasn't none aroun' here but my men. Today you can't walk two feet without you're jostled by a lot o' Polacks an' other New Yorkers an' the riffraff from the slums o' the world. Do you wonder I dislike the business an' the men what killed Texas socially?

"But, leavin' out my pers'nal prejudices, the oil is here, an' it's here to stay. So us few natives still left might as well make the best of it an' reco'nize that what is is. There's oil in the ground; there's oil in the air; there's oil in the blood now'days in Texas. I do s'pose if my Carson wanted to go into business he'd go into oil. An' there may be much in what you say, sah; he might take int'rest if he doubled up with a partner, a stranger. I'd be glad to finance the deal, of course. I'd do anything to get Carson out o' his downright ornery ways."

"Well, that's mighty fine o' you, Mr. Grant," said the Kid.

"Call me Tom, sah—a southerner and a cattleman—call me Tom."

"Thanks. Tom, then; call me Pete. Now, Tom, I was gonna say it'd be ridicalous for me to tell you I'd be willin' to put up some o' my own money, too—you havin' so much that it wouldn't hardly make no diff'rence to you. But as an evidence o' good faith——"

"Whup! Your good faith is took on faith, Pete, in Texas by a Texan. We pride ourselves on acceptin' a gentleman on his face until he shows us we mustn't. Now, I'll tell you what we'll do, Pete. You meet me down at my home, about five mile down past where thisyare street ends—anybody'll show you Tom Grant's home for dinner tomorrow. Dinner is served at 11:30."

The Kid looked up with a question in his eye.

"Yes, Pete, we roust out early on Tom Grant's home ranch. We have dinner before noon and supper at half past 4. After dinner I usually drive or ride into town. I still ride mostly, but once in a while I use one o' my cyars; for speed, only, when I need speed—otherwise I'd rayther loaf in on my good cayuse than loll back like a blame dude in them stuffed cushions in one o' them machines. You be at my house for dinner and we'll talk thisyare over. If we come to terms—and I don't reckon we'll have any words over such as that—us two can come up to town and we'll start off right away. Carson won't be home till tomorrow night, bein' down in Dallas, visitin' with a musical show what played here night before last.

"So I want to have everything in shape and ready when he gets back, and I know he'll like you. It won't be like asking him to start something—Carson ain't much of a starter—it'll be here, all waitin'. We'll call it the Carson Grant Oil company, and I'll give you rights to drill on a piece o' land o' mine down here a bit that a lot o' sharpshooters has been after me to let 'em lease. I'm pretty sure you-all will hit a gusher. Now, it costs about $20,000 to sink one o' them holes. So I'll deposit $25,000 for you when we get into town, which I'll happen to have on me in currency, as the weekly royalties is due in the mornin', and they're always payable in cash, f. o. b. my house. That'll allow you-all a little loose change for incidentals. Of course, we'll draw up papers—I hire a couple o' lawyers by the year in town here—and have everything reg'lar. By the time Carson gets back he'll be half owner in a great prospect, and if you touch off oil, as I know you will, maybe he'll work up a spark of enthusiasm and stick around here some. Agreed?"

The Kid tried to effuse, but Tom Grant dismissed it by shaking hands and again reminding of his appointment. Then the gaunt Texan departed, having first put his guest up at the club for the night.

Promptly at 11:28 Peter Sherrill of Arizona, alias the Canada Kid of New York, Dannemora, and Chicago, drew up before Tom Grant's house in a hired touring car.

"I guess everything'll be aces here," thought the Kid, but, as a precaution, he told the driver to wait a few yards past the gate; it is a poor crook that forgets to leave his retreat open, even though retreat looms unlikely. It is the long shot retreat that is the most important if it has to be made.

Grant received his guest heartily and stuck half a tumbler of red liquor in the hand that he had just shaken. The Kid was not a guzzler, but, lest he suffer in the native's good opinion, he choked down the dose. Grant was a widower. He and the Kid "dined" alone. During the meal the old man talked in spirited vein of the proposed venture; he had slept on it and he liked it better as he went along. He had had many proposals with more foundation and more reason. But this one had won his fancy, mainly because he liked the Kid, a factor that influences more trades in this life than does any other known to humans.

Dinner over, Grant lit a stogie and said:

"And now, Pete, we'll go to town. I've got that $25,000 in here," and he pointed to his breast, where there was evidently an inside pocket in the flannel shirt, "and we'll consummate the Carson Grant Oil company."

The Kid beamed. It was all legitimate. He knew that Grant owned untold fortunes in untouched oil properties; he knew that Grant's abiding passion was his son, and he knew that if Grant parceled a piece to his son he knew it was no 'dead one'—could scarcely even be speculative. The Kid was tired of picking pockets, and he yearned for easy money—a lot of it, such as this promised—as his only possible emancipation from professional thievery, as conventional commerce with its gradual opportunities could

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

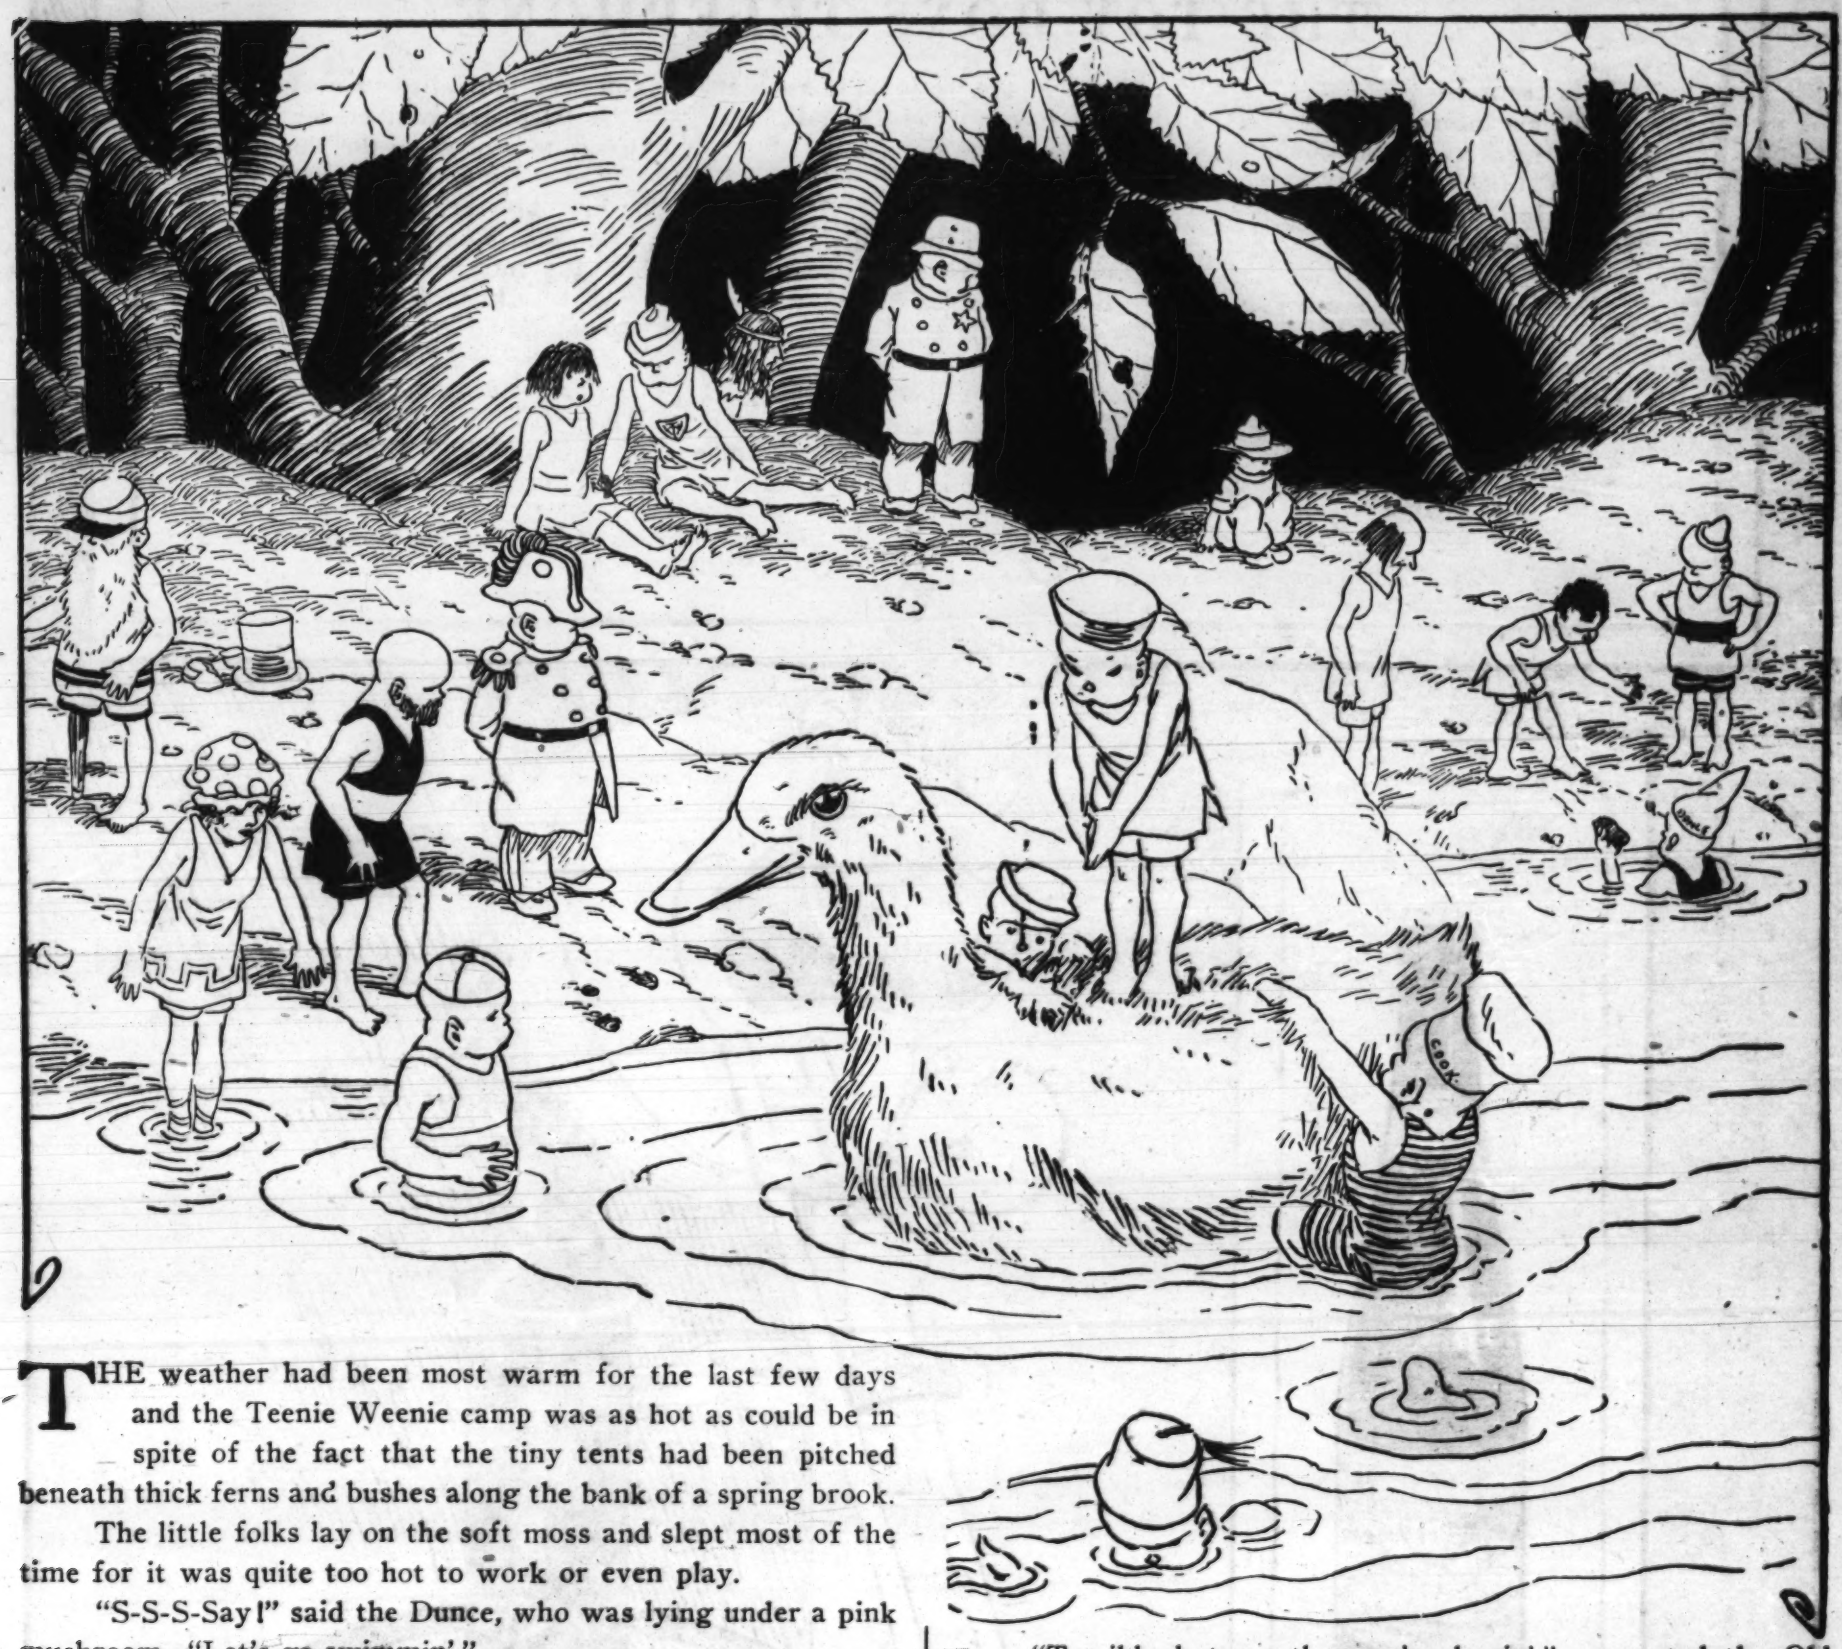
"COME ON IN-THE WATER'S FINE." SAID THE DUCK. By Wm. DONAHEY.



THE weather had been most warm for the last few days and the Teenie Weenie camp was as hot as could be in spite of the fact that the tiny tents had been pitched beneath thick ferns and bushes along the bank of a spring brook.

The little folks lay on the soft moss and slept most of the time for it was quite too hot to work or even play.

"S-S-S-Say!" said the Dunce, who was lying under a pink mushroom. "Let's go swimmin'."

"Too much work gettin' into my bathing suit," yawned the Turk.

"Keep quiet, Dunce; I want to sleep," growled the Clown.

The Dunce leaned up against the mushroom and mournfully watched the water trickle over the pebbles in the creek below.

He must have gone to sleep, for the next thing he knew he was awakened by a loud squawk, and opening his eyes he saw a fat young duck paddling up the stream towards the camp.

Most of the Teenie Weenies had been awakened by the duck's squawk, and the little people gathered on the bank of the creek to welcome the stranger.

"What, ho!" cried the Duck, grinning at the little folks as well as a duck could possibly grin.

"Good morning, sir," said the General, lifting his feathered hat.

"Miss, if you please, sir," smiled the Duck. "I'm a Miss Duck."

"Of course. Of course," said the General, blushing as red as a stick of peppermint candy. "How very careless of me. I hope you'll pardon me."

"Quite natural to misjudge me," said the Duck. "You see I've run around with the common chickens so long I've lost all my pretty ways."

"Live near by?" asked the Doctor.

"About a mile up the creek," answered the Duck. "Only duck in a family of fourteen chickens. My foster Mother's a hen."

"Terribly hot weather we're havin'," suggested the Old Soldier as he saw the conversation was about to drag.

"It's hotter than a sittin' hen," cried the Duck. "But the water is cool."

"Let's go swimmin'," cried the Cook.

"Come on in—the water's fine," said the Duck. "You can dive off my back and everything."

Most of the little people accepted the Duck's invitation for a swim and in a few minutes they had pulled on their tiny bathing suits.

The Duck was such jolly company and the little folks had so much fun diving from her back they soon forgot all about the heat.

The Duck spent the day with the Teenie Weenies and when she set out for home that night she had to promise the little folks that she would come again.

"Now don't forget to come often," cried the little folks.

"You bet I won't," cried the Duck. "I've had more fun today than you could shake a pin-feather at."

You can color up the drawing yourself with either water color or crayons. The tree trunks should be dark brown and the leaves green.

The ground is light tan and the water blue with some streaks of light green in places. The Duck's bill is orange and her fuzzy feathers should be light yellow.

The Teenie Weenie faces and hands, except Gogo, Zip and the Chinaman, should be pink. Gogo has dark brown hands and face, while Zip and the Chinaman should have a light tan complexion.

The Teenie Weenie bathing suits can be colored up to suit your own fancy.

MICE AND MEN by Katherine Newlin Burt

FIFTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

Viva—The Ranch!

FOR some time Merrial had caught the sound of voices downstairs in Miss Coke's sitting room.

"Aunt Jane must be back; wait a minute, Alice, while I reconnoiter," and Merrial tiptoed to the top of the stairs.

"Two hats on the hall table! Who on earth can be calling? Aunt Jane's back earlier than she expected. They'll be gone soon; stay and have lunch, and I'll walk back with you after and see Hubert."

"All right," and Alice gave Merrial one firm, long kiss, which said as clearly as words: "Thank you, from my heart. And from now on, not a word between us on this subject. It's closed!"

Presently their talk was interrupted by Aunt Jane's voice calling to Merrial to come downstairs.

"One minute, Alice," Merrial whispered. "Stay here till they're gone, and then come and help me get lunch, like an angel!"

And Merrial went down to see what was wanted of her. As she entered the sitting room her heart stopped dead for a full minute, as it seemed to her, with astonishment. Aunt Jane closed the door behind her.

"Dad!" exclaimed Merrial, in an awed whisper. "And Dick! O, dad, dear," and she flung herself at him with eyes that sparkled her ecstatic delight and astonishment. She clung to him and with one arm groped for Dick and hugged them both till they were all laughing together.

Presently, as if to get an explanation of it all, Merrial looked 'round for Aunt Jane. She was seated, very much composed, in her chair at the head of the table.

"What does it all mean, Aunt Jane?" How did they come here?" asked Merrial, utterly bewildered.

"I wrote to your father two or three weeks ago, Merrial, and requested him to come over here at once. He was good enough to agree with me that it was the right thing to do. I understand that he has something to explain to you and your brother. James," Miss Coke turned to her brother-in-law, "I will leave you with them. Of course, you will stay for a simple lunch; I will go and prepare it while you talk."

Miss Coke bowed acknowledgment as James Houlton opened the door for her to pass out.

"Sit down, kiddies," said Houlton. "I've got to tell you something that I hoped it would never be necessary to speak of." He cleared his throat and tried to make himself more comfortable in his chair. It was evident that he disliked "his job," as he would have put it.

"Well—no use; may as well get over with it. Nothing to be ashamed of, but—well, it hurts a bit, to scrape up something that's been buried. Dick, old son, in a sense it's to you that I owe an apology for what I'm going to say; and yet, remember that while I kept it back from you for your peace of mind, as I thought, I'm now telling it to you for your happiness. No one knew of this matter besides your mother, Merrial, and her father, and your Aunt Jane.

"I told them in strict confidence; your mother begged that her sister Margaret should not be told.

"When I came here from America years ago, and left it a year later with your dear mother, Merrie, I didn't come to England alone. I came with a little chap of a few months old, still in the arms of his nurse. His mother—had—died, just before I sailed; he was my son; you, Dick!"

There was dead silence; James Houlton looked directly into his son's eyes.

"Yes, dad?" It was Dick's voice that questioned him further.

"Your mother—it's hard to tell you, old man, and not to seem to be speaking ill," his voice dropped, "of the dead. Your mother and I—were not very happy. It was not her fault, nor was it mine, I think. We were young and impulsive; we married before we knew each other well enough." He paused again.

"Tell me all, dad; don't keep anything back, please. I feel I must know—even if it hurts us."

"You're right, son. Well, after you were born—soon after—she went away and left you with me. She was going to divorce me, she said; left me a note that she—there was someone else."

Dick gasped with the pain of it.

"But she was saved, as it were, by her death. The train that was taking her to meet him—crashed. She was killed."

Dick put his face in his hands; he was quite motionless. Neither James Houlton nor Merrial stirred, though her eyes were overflowing with pity for both her men.

Presently Dick got up, shakily, and came over to his father, whose eyes looked straight into his own; not a muscle of James Houlton's face moved. Not a word passed between them; Dick put out his hand, and his face told all that he felt. His father took the outstretched hand.

"Bless you, old man," he said, and a sigh escaped him, as though it had been pent up within him all these years.

"Dick, dear," Merrial went over to him and kissed him ever so gently on the forehead, "you see, then, that the Beauforts aren't your cousins, after all. Aunt Margaret didn't know of it, of course. Alice," she added. "O, Dick, it's wonderful! Alice is here, upstairs." She whispered for his ear alone: "and she's forgiven everything, and—O, you must see her."

It was a constrained but deeply happy pair of lovers that lunched with Merrial and her father and Aunt Jane.

Aunt Jane had never sat so straight.

Miss Coke's manner was purely judicial. Not a sign did she show that her feelings towards James Houlton had changed by one iota.

"I assume, James," she said to him after lunch, "that you will make things clear to my sister. It should come from you, of course."

James Houlton looked into the unrelenting eyes of his sister-in-law.

"You are correct, as ever, Jane," he smiled, grimly. "I must return to London this afternoon, however." He turned to the others. "Young people," he said, "I will ask you to keep this all under your hats, as we say in America, until tomorrow. Alice, my dear, do you think it will be convenient to your mother if I should call on her tomorrow afternoon?"

"Certainly, Uncle James; and I know she'll—love to see you." Her direct eyes held his; it was as if she would add: "I speak whereof I know; and I mean just what I say."

"Then, Dick, we'd better be off back to London—and I'll see that he comes down with me tomorrow, Alice; I won't let him get out of it!" And his eyes smiled chaffingly into his niece's.

. . . . . .

One by one Merrial Houlton's plans—those which she had brought with her from America to do and those which she had found to do when she reached England—had come to fruition. She checked them off on her fingers, with grateful heart, as she lay in bed that night.

Hubert was going to be strong and well, and the tragedy of Aunt Margaret Beaufort's life would be changed into a crown; Win and Kenneth were secure of each other; James Houlton's revelation had removed the one obstacle, which had seemed insuperable, to Alice and Dick's happiness; and Tripp—Tripp would make his proposition for the purchase of the quince preserve recipe to Aunt Jane tomorrow, and she [O, she'd have to accept it!] would be free from the petty grind of poverty and dependence for the rest of her life.

She had won the love of her mother's people for herself and for Dick, and—surely—for her father, with the possible exception of Aunt Jane, where her father was concerned. And even there she did not despair of success, even yet. There was that riddlesome glint in Aunt Jane's eyes that always kept you guessing!

Then—then why this awful, pitiable ache in her heart, when everything, more than everything, she had come to do was accomplished, or would be, before tomorrow was over?

"Merrial Houlton," she took herself sternly to task, as she lay there longing for sleep to stop the nagging of her heart, "you've made your bed, now go right to sleep on it." She tried to laugh at her little joke, but she just turned her face into her pillow, and cried her heart out.

"O, Tripp, Tripp, I've worn you out—and now it's too late. I know where my heart is now, I know it perfectly well. You've got it—and I shall never, never have it again. My poor little kingdom's all gone. I've nothing to buy it from you with, even if I wanted it back!"

When she woke next morning, it was with the resolve that this, the crowning day of all her labors, should not be clouded by repining. "Everything must end with a bang! It's got to be a real, proper chorus of happiness—and then, exit Merrial the heartless," she mocked herself.

Aunt Jane declared that she would walk with Merrial to the Grange, and see her nephew.

"I believe Tripp was coming here to see you, Aunt Jane," Merrial said. "But we shall find him there, so that will be just as good."

"Rather better, I think. It will save him from hypocrisy."

"Why, what do you mean? Tripp's no hypocrite, Aunt Jane," she defended.

"He won't have to pretend he's come to see me, when he really just wanted to see you, you little goose," the old lady snapped back with huge delight at Merrial's confusion.

When they arrived, Miss Coke went into the house to see her sister, and Merrial, hearing that already Hubert was allowed to be out in the swinging canvas couch that Tripp had sent him from London, sought him out under the trees.

"I say, Merrie, what's wrong with you?" Hubert asked gently.

"Nothing, old man," but her eyes filled at touch of his sensitive sympathy. Hubert looked very closely at her; he was not to be put off.

"Have you quarreled with any one, Merrie?" He recalled that Winifred used to look like that, after she'd "quarreled" with Kenneth.

Merrial, try as she would, could not resist him. She slipped to her knees beside his couch and buried her head in his beloved Navajo blanket. Her shoulders shook.

"I think," he said sagely, "it's Tripp! He's all funny and different, too. Don't you and he like each other any more?"

She fought for self-possession, kissing his hand apologetically.

"He—he is going away from me, Hubert," she said at last. "I think he's tired of me."

"O, no. You're not tiring ever, except when you make a fellow laugh too long. You're awfully fond of Tripp, aren't you?"

"Yes, honey boy."

Her assent was so solemn that Hubert's eyes grew large. He patted her head silently for a while.

"I—I didn't quarrel; I—I wore him out, I think."

"That's pretty bad, to wear a fellow out. He looks so strong, too."

Merrial laughed shakily.

"I wish I could make you happy, Merrial!" cried Hubert suddenly.

"You do, old man. Don't worry. It's all right. I'm just—a goose!"

Whereupon she gave him, laughing, one of her hopeful hugs, and they began to play at backgammon. But to Hubert's disgust, just as his last piece neared victory, a loud coo-ee sounded from the direction of the house, and Merrial started up, the board was overturned, the men flew in every direction, while Merrial herself disappeared towards the shrubberies.

"Great Jumping Juncoes!" said Tripp, who had appeared at the very moment of Merrial's exit, as the pieces flew around him. "Am I under fire, old man?"

"I am glad you've come, Tripp!" cried Hubert. "A fellow gets tired of girls sometimes. They're awful unsatisfactory in the long run, even the nice ones. Now, see what she did to our game!"

Tripp was pursuing the scattered pieces. He sat down and turned the checks absently about in his large hands.

"I've come to say good-by, old man," said he.

"I know." Hubert's voice was very mournful. "Merrie told me about it just now. She was crying here."

At that Tripp threw up his chin, and his soul-stripping look searched Hubert hungrily.

"Crying? Merrie crying? Here? Just now?"

Hubert nodded.

"Yes. She said you were tired of her. She said she'd worn you out. So I suppose after all you'll never want to have a ranch with her and me."

Tripp had started up, and was standing with his back to the wistful face.

"She's awful fond of you, Tripp. I think you oughtn't to have made her cry."

The yellow haired Hermes wheeled about and strode over to him.

"You're a good chap, Beaufort," said he heartily, "and I hope we'll meet again soon. I can't stop any longer now. I've got to see your aunt and catch a train. But we'll get together somewhere, somehow. We'll ride a couple of bucking bronchos together one of these fine days, over a good stretch of plains. Give me your fist, old man."

Hubert gave his fist, and the thin fingers clung.

"You'll make it up with Merrie before you go?"

Tripp's hand tightened till it hurt.

"Thanks old man; I will," he promised, and started towards the house.

"That's the wrong way," called Hubert imperiously. "Merrie ran away to the shrubberies, down there."

Tripp paused; he wasn't sure if he'd got it right from the youngster, yet!

"Ran away? From me, do you mean?"

"Yes, of course," Hubert replied impatiently. "She didn't want you to see that you'd made her cry, don't you see?"

So it happened, as a result of Hubert's prompting, that Tripp, still fearful of burning his fingers again, found Merrial sitting on the grass at the foot of a tree. Her face was as cool and noncommittal as his own.

Tripp loooked down at her, long and thoughtfully. There was no sign of the reported outbreak. She looked tired certainly, but very much mistress of herself.

"Let's go," said he, "to the orchard. It's a first rate picnic ground."

"Are we a picnic, Tripp?"

He laughed shortly.

"Maybe not, and maybe so," said he. "There'll be apples."

"And a serpent?"

"That's your lookout, Merrie. Adam never had any dealings with the serpent?"

"Not till Eve had tamed it, but, after that—oh, my!"

Merrial talked as readily as a bird sings, but, while she talked, she thought. Tripp was strange. He had a tight strung look. As they turned into the orchard a very jubilee of bird notes greeted them.

"It's very wet, Tripp," said she.

Tripp strode into the long grass, and said

times when you have to dissemble," Mr. Gascoyne replied. "I am going to forbid Master Fred the house next time he comes courting you here. I can't have Steve upset—yet awhile. You and me have no cause to quarrel about Fred."

The girl scanned the old man anxiously and, satisfied, dismissed the subject, suggesting that he should go upstairs and lie down. He allowed her to lead him from the room, but before they reached the door she stopped and pointed to the sideboard.

"Why, whatever has become of the Dragon Casket?" she asked.

Farmer Gascoyne gazed a little guiltily at the vacant space on the shining mahogany. He was like a child caught in a minor fault.

"O that!" he quavered. "What sharp eyes you've got, my lass. I meant to tell you. I took it into the bank at Steeplecross this morning. I set a lot of store on the casket as an heirloom. It will be safer there."

When Ida had unlaced her grandfather's boots and made him comfortable on his bed she returned to the dining room and examined the used wine glasses, applying her dainty nostrils to each in turn and subjecting them to a prolonged scrutiny. In one she thought she detected the faintest trace of a sediment. That glass she took up to her own room and locked it up in a drawer, after soiling and substituting another glass for the servant to find on the dining room table.

Later in the day the old man remembered and for many days attended to the affairs of the farm with his usual vigor. Then, six weeks after his call at the bank to deposit the casket, he suddenly sickened and died. Dr. Haycraft, who had attended him for many years, had no hesitation in certifying the death as due to senile decay accelerated by heart failure.

Stephen Jarvis lost no time in asserting his prospective rights as heir-at-law. The very next day he turned up at the house, took the arrangements for the funeral into his own hands, and gave Ida to understand that he should come into residence as soon as the will was proved, which was as good as giving her notice to clear out herself. He went to the length of patronizing the girl by informing her that though he inherited the bulk of the property she had not been left destitute.

"You will have enough to live on in a small way," was his comforting assurance.

The conversation was held in the dining room, and as he was going out Mr. Jarvis alluded to the absence of the Dragon Casket, adding that he had noticed it before, but had abstained from questioning his grandfather about it so long as it was no business of his. Now it was different. Ida replied coldly by repeating what the old man had told her—that the casket had been deposited at the bank for safety.

"Old idiot!" spluttered Stephen. "I wonder if he had it added to the inventory of the other plate stored at the bank. I shall have to look into the matter, as all the stuff will have to be valued for probate."

He went off, greatly to Ida's relief, and shortly afterwards another visitor called. Ida was in the tall young man's arms the moment the maid closed the door. When he released her she began to cry a little.

"O, Fred, that beast has been here," she sobbed. "He seems to know all about the will. He as good as jeered at me for not being quite a pauper."

"Never mind, darling," her lover soothed her. "I'm sure to get a sound job directly. Then we can snap our fingers at Steve Jarvis, and in the meanwhile we shall be able to see as much of each other as we choose. What possessed the dear old man to saddle us with those restrictions I can't imagine."

They talked themselves into a calmer mood and then there was a tap at the door and the maid came in, treading softly, as befitted a house of mourning.

"A letter for you, Miss, from the bank," she said. "It came by hand and there is only a verbal answer wanted."

Ida tore open the envelope and read the contents. "Tell the messenger that I will be there," she said.

"It is from Mr. Duncan, the manager at Floyd's," she explained to her lover. "He wants me to call at the bank tomorrow morning on business of importance. What can it be, I wonder? I hate business. Will you come, too, and help me, Fred, if there is any knotty point to be solved?"

"I will be on hand, girlie," laughed the young man. "We will carry on together, always supposing they let me in. I know old Duncan very well, and he's one of the best, but he'll probably turn me out as having no pull in your affairs."

But Mr. Duncan raised no objection when Fred was ushered into the private room next day with his sweetheart. The manager spoke a few words of kindly condolence and went straight to the matter in hand by producing a sealed envelope and giving it to Ida. At his suggestion she opened it, extracting a key and the receipt of the casket. He explained that the heirloom had been deposited in her name by Mr. Gascoyne and that if she would sign the receipt, releasing the bank from its responsibility, the casket would be handed over to her.

"But won't my cousin object?" faltered Ida. "He tells me that he had inherited most of the property under a will."

"This transaction has nothing to do with the late Mr. Gascoyne's estate," replied the manager. "Mr. Jarvis can have no possible cause for complaint. For some reason best known to himself, your grandfather took this method of making you a present of the casket during his lifetime."

A clerk was summoned and the casket which Ida had so often dusted, and latterly had missed from its accustomed place, was set on the manager's table.

"I should open it," remarked Mr. Duncan dryly. "I know nothing, but I rather suspect a surprise."

Ida inserted the key and unlocked the casket. It contained a folded foolscap document and a sealed envelope addressed to Miss Ida Gascoyne. The girl's fingers fluttered undecidedly from one to the other of the two inclosures, but into the bank manager's shrewd eyes a sudden light had leaped.

"Will you allow me?" he said, gently taking the folded paper from her. "This may be important."

He glanced through it, his lips shaping unspoken words.

"I should rather think it is important," he exclaimed, smiling all over his face. "This is your grandfather's will, Miss Gascoyne, most certainly of later date than the one Mr. Jarvis knows of, and it constitutes you sole heiress to money, and lands, and everything. The dear old boy was game to the last. I wonder what he says in his letter."

Ida tore the envelope, but before she could extract the letter the door of the private room was flung open and Mr. Stephen Jarvis entered. His truculent gaze settled on the casket, roving thence in turn to the three occupants of the room.

"I suspected something of this sort when I heard that you two were closeted with the manager," he shouted. "A conspiracy to rob me of the Dragon Casket, eh? I shall hold you responsible for any hanky-panky that you have lent yourself to, Duncan."

Mr. Duncan laughed his professional laugh. "I shall be pleased to meet all my responsibilities," he said. "The casket is the legal property of Miss Gascoyne, and it contains a will, dated only two months ago and duly signed and witnessed, leaving everything the late Mr. Gascoyne possessed to his grand-daughter, Ida. Might I suggest, Miss Gascoyne, that you read this letter."

This is what the girl read out in a trembling voice, wincing from a hate that would have killed, if Steve Jarvis had had the power.

"My dear Ida: I take this means of putting you in possession of my last will because I could not trust your cousin with the knowledge that I had made a second one. If he had been aware of its existence, he would have been capable of substituting a still later will of his own manufacture. I flatter myself that I have outwitted him, and I hope that you will live long to enjoy what I have left you. If it is as the wife of that nice boy, Fred Heath, so much the better. I owe the young man an apology for my seeming rudeness, but it was necessary to keep the blinkers on Steve to the end, which I have sometimes suspected him of trying to hasten. Your affectionate grandfather, John Gascoyne."

Through the recital Jarvis had looked so vicious that Fred edged nearer to him and Mr. Duncan's hand stole to the drawer in which he kept a little automatic protector against "holdups." But there was no need for alarm. At the final sentence in the letter the dethroned heir went white, glacing furtively at the door. Ida stepped boldly up to him and whispered in his ear:

"I have a wineglass locked away at home. If you make no trouble I shall not produce it, for that attempt failed and you were not at the farm within a week of grandad's death."

Without a word and in person, Mr. Stephen Jarvis turned and followed the direction of that furtive glance at the door.

never have held him. So he beamed. He beamed as he accompanied Grant to the door. Then the beam faded out.

Standing at the door was a cowboy, holding two saddled bronchos. The Kid had never been on a horse in all his life, least of all on a half wild Texas horse.

"There's your hoss, Pete," said Grant, pleasantly, pointing to the off animal, a roan stud with a wicked eye.

The Kid wanted to say something, but could grasp nothing that offered a hold. If he confessed that he could not ride, the whole scheme would fall, for Grant would immediately recognize him as a fraud. He gulped and decided to take a chance—this horsebacking couldn't be so very difficult; why, he had seen girls gallop through the park, and if a girl could do it so well, he could probably do it well enough to get by with a partial explanation of some kind such as a lame back. Grant swung into the saddle in a single motion and sat there, waiting for his guest to mount. The horses were footing a bit, and the Kid was chary of stepping between them, so he circled them and attempted to mount from the right stirrup. In a moment he was spilled and sprawled. Grant, who had seen this profane performance with amazement, dismounted and stood over the Kid, who was hurriedly picking himself up. The visitor's face came up and his eyes met the fixed gaze of the aged Texan's.

"You lyin' scoundrel," said Grant. "You blackleg fraud, you. Cattleman—Arizona—you never saw a steer. I sort o' thought your talk wasn't exac'ly bony fidy, but I put it down to Arizona, where they talk neither United States nor straight Greaser. But, sah—when I see you try to straddle a hoss, sah, backwards o' nature's laws, that settled you. Get out o' here—and better get out o' thisyare country, because if I run against you in town I'll cowhide you, sah."

The Kid was up. And he knew the game was, too. He walked up to Grant and lifted his hand—argumentatively, only, not aggressively.

"You got me," he confessed, dropping his 2½ per cent southern drawl. "But I didn't mean no gyft, hones', Tom. I got a itch for this oil business, and I wanted to horn in right, and I knew you was the bird could jump a lot o' hurdles for me. So I lied about who I was an' where I was from, but I was on the dead level about goin' in with your son, an'——"

"A liar is a liar, and a liar is a thief," said Grant. "Thisyare country is becomin' so lawlessly law-abidin' that a good citizen an' a taxpayer can't put a bullet through a rattlesnake no more without kicking up a fuss, or I'd put a tunnel through you. My boy Carson don't need no pardners like you; whatever else he is, sah, he's no liar—he's had plenty to admit, but he's told the truth. Now, you thievin' no'the'ner, whoever you be, make tracks before I set the dogs on you."

"I'm goin'," said the Kid. "I'm goin', Tom. Sorry. I meant no harm. If I hadn't o' monkeyed with that plug I might o' been a millionaire. Well, I've kissed myself out o' breaks before, so—so long."

And he turned and wheedled off sidewise, apparently to bow farewell to Tom Grant, but actually to secure in his far-side pocket the $25,000 in bills he had painstakingly stolen out of Tom Grant's inside shirt pocket as the old Texan was quiveringly denouncing him. He saw Grant returning into the house. He saw his hired touring car waiting in the near distance. He caressed the hidden bills, ran to the car, ordered the chauffeur to start.

"And make it snappy," he spat at him. "I gotta make a 1 o'clock rattler for the north."

As he sat in his Pullman the Kid sipped an iced soft drink and reflected:

"Well, if he'd given me my chance I wouldn't o' lifted his jack. Maybe I can't climb a horse right side to, but I ain't no rummy when it comes to rising to a situation in my own line.

"As I told the old grouch my daddy told me—I, who never seen my daddy—a boob what plays another guy's game on that guy's own dump is a fish. Ridin' horse be his, but boostin' pokes is mine, an' wherever I start on my own p'fessional endeavors is my native heap, as the poet calls it.

"The old steer merchant is twenty-five grand out [a "grand" is a $1,000 bill in underworld argot], but maybe I give him a couple o' idees for that lightweight son o' his what'll save him that much in what them Number 2 chorus girls won't take away from him alone.

"Anyway, I done the best I could. A sap named Grant has no right to be a Dixie bug. An' if that funny lookin' Reub thinks it's a sign of honesty to ride a horse, he's nutty—Jesse James rode one for a livin'."

and she says the kitchen is 'ad-orable.'"

"She ought to know it."

"And she says you've a fascinating way with you, Aunt Jane," quoted Hubert daringly. He had not altogether understood this speech of Merrial's, but thought it might sound well, and risked it.

Aunt Jane's hand passed slowly over her mouth, and her eyes sparkled under their heavy lids.

"Oh, I've that, have I?"

"Yes. She say there's some life in you. Merrie says she can stand anything but 'slump-people.' They make her tired. She has a cousin in Boston who has slumped. It's a lady, I believe, who has let everything s'ide. Merrie recommends ranch life to her. I say, Aunt Jane," with a doubtful glance, "how do you think you'd like ranch life? Now, honest!"

Aunt Jane's sewing had slipped off her knee. She looked down at her small nephew seriously.

"Honest, Hubert," said she, "I think ranch life is what Providence really meant me for."

This brought Hubert up on one elbow with wide-open eyes.

"Isn't that great, Aunt Jane? I'm glad I heard you say that. That makes lots of difference somehow."

"Difference?" she demanded.

"Yes. You see, it shows that there's stuff in you. That's what Merrie says: 'There's stuff in you.' How did you like having Merrie?"

"I think," returned Miss Coke very deliberately, "that, on the whole, I rather liked it."

"And, I say, isn't Mr. Tripp ripping?"

"Very ripping, I should imagine."

"You ought to see him throw the lariat, Aunt Jane. It's, it's—" Hubert, with shining eyes, struggled for a new adjective, but was forced back upon the inevitable reserve. "It's ripping! And, I say, if you like a ranch, you know, you can come and visit me, if you like."

"Thanks! You are going to have a ranch?"

"A jolly big one, in Nebraska. At least, I think that's cattle country. I'm not sure. We'll ask Tripp. He and Merrie are going to have a ranch, and I'm going to stay with them, and learn to ride bronchos."

Aunt Jane did not answer for a long time. She was looking at the glowing face.

"You seem to admire Merrial Houlton, Hubert," she said at last.

The big brown eyes came swiftly up to her. They were warm, and soft, and deep.

"I love her, Aunt Jane; don't you?"

"I think," said Aunt Jane slowly, and her eyes held the curious glint that Merrial liked to see, "I think I love her better than any one else in the world, Hubert. In fact, I'll tell you a great secret," she added. "I've decided that Merrial's my favorite niece!"

And her eyes dwelt fondly upon the group of three happy couples, of which Tripp and Merrial formed the center.

THE END.

he thought things were pretty well dried up.

"Here's a log, at any rate," said he; "and you may have my coat."

He threw it off as he spoke, and she spread her filmy skirts daintily over it, and sat like a belle marquise playing at Phillida in the gardens of Versailles.

"Did you finish the game of backgammon with Hubert?" she asked him, feeling that they had both gone back to their school-days, and were playing "hookey" in a demure, half hearted fashion. That wretched interview at Aunt Jane's yesterday seemed thousands of miles away, but so did their friendship of the last three years. They had played "hookey" from every reality but one—a sense of which was making her heart beat very hard.

"I spent my time making straight the havoc you caused, runaway. Hubert was pretty well disgusted with you, let me tell you. He said girls were mighty disappointing—even the nice ones."

"Which is too true, isn't it, Tripp?"

"Yes."

Anything, Merrial thought, to break the next silence!

"This world is a funny, funny place!" she vouchsafed.

It came on a long, wistful breath, and Tripp who, magnificently regardless of damp turf, had thrown himself full length beside her, looked up quickly.

"That sounds so like you, Merrie."

"I'm glad you are going back to the ranch life, Tripp," she burst out all at once. "You'll be happier; it will suit you. I'll be glad to see you in your old things again, with your sombrero down over your eyes. If I'm to be allowed to see you occasionally, that is. Somehow, yesterday, you—you made me feel superfluous. It hurt, Tripp."

"I'm glad it hurt," was his sharp answer, at which Merrial sat up. Her eyes were not so cool.

"Since when have you learned to enjoy hurting an old friend?" she flashed out at him.

"Since I came to England."

"Then England is a bad place for you. It is spoiling you. If you grow small and spiteful, Tripp, I shall lose my faith in human nature."

"England is a very bad place for me," he agreed soberly; "so bad, that I am getting out of it as fast as I can."

Another silence. Anger weighed on Merrial—anger and sheer unhappiness. Tripp, too, seemed to be suffering. The corners of his mouth suggested endurance.

"It's not my way to ask questions," he said at last, with very apparent effort; "but I can't bring myself to go back home without knowing one thing, Merrie."

She swallowed hard, and wondered where her wrists had gone. There was a horrid sensation of vacancy which they usually filled.

"And what is your 'one thing,' Tripp?"

He seemed, this tall, bronzed Mercury, to have barely courage to speak. She saw him moisten his lips.

"Are you going to marry Lord Rivington?"

Merrial's face shadowed.

"I am not going to marry Lord Rivington," she said.

A vivid picture of Sir Philip Sidney pained her memory. He had been very fine in his friendship, and in his brief courtship. He had seen its futility, and accepted it generously.

"I am not going to marry Lord Rivington," she repeated, tremulously.

Tripp stood up.

"I had to know that, didn't I?" he said. "That's all, I reckon, Merrie. We'd better be getting back. This must be good-by for us."

And he looked down at her with what she felt was indeed a good-by look. But, turning sideways so that he could not see her face, Merrial put out a wistful and uncertain hand. He caught at it and bent over her, shaking.

"Be careful, Merrie," and the shake had got into his deep voice. "You are making me hope."

Up to him flashed the silent, impish laughter of her eyes.

"Oh, Tripp, I know where it is now; who's got it—my—my heart, I mean. And you were right! Now that I've found it again, my kingdom's a doubly wonderful place; yours and mine, Tripp. The most a-dor-able kingdom in the world."

. . . . . .

They were decidedly late for lunch when "the picnic" in the orchard was pronounced over.

"Great snakes!" ejaculated Tripp. "And I told Miss Coke I wanted to have 'a few words' with her before she left. Let's run, Merrie."

"I've a notion," panted Merrial as she ran, "how Aunt Jane will behave. She's been a sphinx from the start about quince preserve. I shall be dying to know if it comes out all right. Do get it all finished before dad and Dick arrive. They'll be here soon after lunch. And I want to get hold of him before Aunt Jane goes home."

But Miss Coke was serenely lunching, when they came to the table apologizing to Mrs. Beaufort a little guiltily for not having noticed how late it was.

After lunch, Tripp and Miss Coke remained in the dining room, when the rest dispersed.

Merrial found herself wandering upstairs, with Alice and Winifred on either side of her; her eyes had told them her secret, but they meant to have it, certain—sure, from her very lips!

"You told me," said Miss Coke to Tripp, wearing her curious grim smile, "that you had a business matter you wished to discuss with me."

"Yes; and I hope it will interest you. It means quite a lot to me."

His manner was very sweet. As he sat opposite her, his eyes shed some of their love light upon "Aunt Jane." Mentally, he was calling her that, and thinking her, because she was Merrial's aunt, altogether beautiful. Aunt Jane was almost thrilled by him, as she had been at their first meeting when his true eyes had offered her their reverence.

"You may not know, Miss Coke," smiled Tripp, resting on his elbow and leaning towards her, "that I am in the preserve business."

Aunt Jane started. She also folded her large, bony hands together, and narrowed her eyes.

"No," said she, "I did not know it." And under her suspicious look there was a humorous twinkle. "In partnership, perhaps."

He looked more than ever like a god in masquerade. She felt a mother's impulse to smooth down his yellow hair and straighten his tie for him. But he was sublimely unconscious of these disarrangements, and was making a great effort at a business-like clarity of countenance.

"Yes," said he, "I bought up a small English concern, and the ex-proprietor, Mr. Carter, has gone into partnership with me. I've an interest in some fruit ranches and a cannery in America, you see, so of course, we're always on the lookout for novelties in jam. Merrial put us on to a recipe of yours."

There was a sort of gasp from Miss Coke here; but Tripp kept steadily on, though the corners of his mouth tucked themselves in humorously.

"Carter sent an agent down to your place some weeks ago. He tasted your quince preserve, and came back to the office quite up in the air; said there was a fortune in it, Miss Coke."

No answer. Miss Coke looked fixedly at her hands.

"It came at a good time. We wanted a novelty. Quinces, of course, are quite a product in the States. And"—Tripp crossed his knees, and became a thorough business man—"having our own cannery we shall have no difficulty in making up your quince preserve, provided we can induce you to sell us the recipe. That's what I've come to England for, Miss Coke."

"O, so that's what you have come to England for?"

The corners of Tripp's mouth tucked themselves in somewhat deeper. Also a flush ran up his cheeks under the tan.

"Yes, ma'am. It's important—this quince preserve matter—to us, even if it's not to you. Now I have here"—Tripp took out a paper from his pocket and spread it out on the table—"I have here an estimate of what we may expect from the preserve. Carter has agreed that we can make an offer to you of——"

Up came one of Aunt Jane's long hands.

"One moment, Mr. Hart. When did Merrial begin to interest you in this matter?"

"About a month or more ago, I reckon. She's rather an enterpriser in her own way. As soon as she tasted your jam she saw what there might be in it. So she set to work testing it about here. It took."

"Yes, it took," repeated Aunt Jane with her grim smile.

"When she saw that it was safe to make its way, she put me on. That's when we sent the agent up. Merrie managed the matter very well."

"Excellently; only she did not see fit to 'put me on.' Wasn't that an oversight, eh?"

"By no means. She wanted to be sure of her ground before she took her step, Miss Coke. Savvy?"

"O, yes, I suppose, I—savvy. Where does she come in on the profit, Mr. Hart?"

Tripp grinned. There is no other word for his big, boyish smile.

"You must settle that between you ladies," said he. "But I shouldn't let that keep you awake at night, Aunt—Miss Coke. Merrial's got a small sized fortune of her own."

Aunt Jane had never sat so straight.

"She has? Merrial?"

"Sure thing. That's straight goods. Mr. Houlton settled it on her and Dick when they were in the nursery. He's never put a finger on their money since. It wasn't involved in this last little worry of his."

Miss Coke drew a deep breath and leaned back. Also she thought of the old oak chest. Her expression thanked providence plainly for a narrow escape.

"What was Merrial's idea, do you imagine, Mr. Hart, in playing the rôle of an impoverished niece?"

"Did she play it?"

Miss Coke frowned thoughtfully. In looking back, she could not actually remember that Merrial had ever mentioned her finances. Only it had been taken for granted by them all that she was poor. "Poor and dependent"—yes, Merrial had certainly used that phrase.

"But don't you think it applies to me, too? Didn't you tell me that I was poor and dependent?" The little Machiavelli, with her questioning phrases! Aunt Jane was flushed. And it had been Merrial, of course, who had paid for Reval!

"What does your company offer?" she asked quickly.

Tripp got out a second paper, unfolded it, and glanced at it.

"We've put it down in black and white for you as an offer, signed by Carter and me. You'd better take it and study it out a bit. Take your time. I'll be glad to explain. I think it's fair—all right."

He held out to her the typewritten sheet with its business heading and its bold signatures. Aunt Jane took it. She bent her head over it, shading her face meanwhile with one long, thin hand. She read it two or three times, but said nothing. Tripp, leaning back with his hands in his pockets, regarded her quizzically.

Aunt Jane folded the paper carefully. Then she looked up. Her eyes were very deep. Tripp could not, for the life of him, tell whether it was anger or delight that had made them deep. Her speech, when [after a long, searching look that made him flush and straighten] it came, was startling:

"You are going to marry Merrial?"

"I believe I am," said Tripp with a glorious deepening of color and the light of joy in his eyes. He spoke, however, as if he could not quite believe it.

There followed a short silence, during which Tripp lost sight of Aunt Jane and quince preserve.

"Will you ask Merrial to come in here, please, Mr. Hart?" she asked at last. "I want to speak to her."

Tripp thankfully strode out, and in another minute an uncertain fairy child fluttered towards Aunt Jane, ready to fly to her or, it seemed, equally ready to run away. Aunt Jane fixed her with her heavy lidded look.

"So you have been masquerading, Merrial," said she.

At once laughter flashed into the clear, cool eyes. There was going to be a struggle, then. Merrial marched forward, and stood before her relative with reckless nonchalance. She nodded.

"I've been playing games with you," said she. "I've played poor and dependent, and I've played dollar making—played it pretty hard, too! And I've played scared of you, too, sometimes, Aunt Jane, though I never was scared of you one bit. And I've exploited your invention in spite of you. And now you've got to be independent, whether you like it or not, and have rocking chairs and porcelain bathtubs, too, in every room—all over, if you like. And you don't have to sell your chest to Lord Rivington. It was I that spoiled that bargain, for I was standing behind you that day, Aunt Jane, and I made dreadful faces at him till he had to give it up. Because, of course, I saw that you'd an adorable notion that you'd better give up the chest and help your poor niece. But I wasn't a poor niece, so I didn't let you do it. I made faces and dropped out of the window. Poor Henry Rivington! I did put him into a hole—right up to his eyebrows."

She stopped, breathless. Aunt Jane looked breathless, too.

"Suppose I won't sell quince preserves?" said she, shortly.

"You dear, dear goose!" said Merrial, and then, being pretty well frightened, she hid her face against Aunt Jane's.

"I want to give the wedding at my house, Merrial," was Aunt Jane's next remark, after a considerable stillness. Merrial's pupils grew big as she lifted them to a softened face.

"Mine, Aunt Jane? My wedding? Do you mean it?"

"I mean it, my dear." And Aunt Jane kissed her. Merrial's eyes were big.

The door opened, and Mrs. Beaufort entered with James Houlton.

"What's all this about weddings?" he asked. "It seems to me that this is the third I've heard tell of! Margaret, are you or Jane responsible to me for my daughter's proper behavior during her absence from her father's chaperonage?"

Merrial laughed at him, impishly.

"It's Aunt Jane's doing, this time. It's to be from her house, dad."

"And might I ask who's the happy man?"

But there was no need for her to answer; Tripp had found his way to Merrial's side.

"So it's you, is it? Well, Well! Jane," he said, turning to Miss Coke with his most winning smile, "I think it's mighty nice of you to do this; are you sure it won't inconvenience you?"

And then Miss Coke surpassed herself. She came straight over, and gave him her hand.

"My dear James," she said, and her glance was straight as his, "let it be a simple token of how grateful I am to your Merrial, grateful for her dear self and for all the good gifts she has brought to us—of which the last, but not the least, is her father."

Houlton's simple "Thank you, Jane; thank you," was a heartfelt response to Miss Coke's sign of reparation.

Merrial was so full of happiness, heart and soul, that she could hardly find her voice.

"Oh, father, Aunt Jane, Aunt Margaret," she whispered, "how wonderfully happy dear little mother must be! I know she's—she's just singing for joy! You're all just too ad-or-able for words to have made my plan—my biggest plan of all—succeed."

Tripp raised her hand to his lips and kissed it, quite shamelessly. "Come on, people," he called. "Shan't we all go out to Hubert, and celebrate? I owe him a wonderful lot, don't I, Merrie—the good little scout!"

And they trooped out into the old garden, which in all its hundreds of years of joyful existence had never been the scene of quite such perfection of joy for so many happy hearts.

While Mrs. Beaufort and James Houlton strolled under the trees, and the young people sat about on the grass chatting at a short distance from Hubert's couch, Aunt Jane sat down beside him in a wicker chair.

"Well, Hubert," said Aunt Jane. "I thought I'd sit with you a while."

Hubert held out a small, well trained, uncertain hand to his awe inspiring relative, who took out some sewing.

"That's very good of you," he whispered, and looked at her over the edge of his Navajo blanket with solemn eyes.

"Isn't that thing frightfully heavy?" she asked him.

He clung to it.

"No. It's jolly nice and hard, not like those baby things they wrap a fellow in. The Indians sleep in them, I guess."

"We are very American nowadays, aren't we?" smiled Aunt Jane.

Her smile was certainly very grim; but, after all, it was a smile, and, as such, encouraging.

"Come, now," thought Hubert, in the manner of Wonderland Alice, "we shall get on nicely, after all."

He racked his brain for conversation. Aunt Jane seemed so very stiff when they both were quiet.

"Merrie would have a notion——" he thought. And, as though the very name had inspired him, a notion came.

"I like quince preserve, Aunt Jane," said Hubert.

Aunt Jane laid down her sewing to look at him.

"If she'd really open her eyes I could see whether she's angry or pleased," puzzled Hubert.

"It's malumpcious," he went on bravely. "I have it for breakfast every morning. When I'm well"—pride in the words flushed him to his hair—"and come over to see you, Aunt Jane, I hope you'll give me some."

"So, you'll be coming over to see me when you're well, eh?"

"O, yes," almost with an air of eagerness, "Merrie's told me all about your little house. She says it's 'quite cute' when you know it,

The DRAGON CASKET—

How It Guarded the Secret of a Man Who Feared "Things Worse Than Burglars" — By Headon Hill

THE cashier of Floyd's bank at Steeplecross glanced with respectful inquiry at the tall old man at the other side of the counter. Never before had he known this valued customer of the bank to omit a cheery response to his own salutation. But today Farmer Gascoyne seemed too preoccupied to return his perfunctory "Good-morning." The cashier thought that he had aged since his market day visit three days ago. He made no show of paying in or wanting to cash a check, but just stood at the counter as though he had forgotten the business that had brought him there.

The cashier, an observant young man, noticed that the prosperous agriculturist carried a brown paper parcel under his arm.

"Ah, good-morning, Mr. Warren." The old man found his tongue at last. "I didn't mean to be rude, but I am afraid I was half asleep. Getting up in years, you see. Is Mr. Duncan disengaged?"

Raising the counter flap, the cashier came out and conducted the customer to the manager's private room, off the general office. Here John Gascoyne was received with a blend of personal friendship and professional deference by the gray-haired gentleman who rose to greet him. Mr. Duncan had a bank manager's respect for a customer whose current account and deposits ran into big figures, but he cherished a warmer feeling for the hospitable sportsman who had given him many a good day's shooting.

"You are not looking well," he said as the old man sank wearily into the clients' chair.

Farmer Gascoyne, as he was called throughout the countryside, placed his parcel on the pedestal table which separated them and began to untie the knots in the string.

"I am not well," he replied with a catch in his breath. "I am fresh from seeing Dr. Haycraft. He doesn't give me more than six months. I suppose I can't complain—80 next month."

The last knot came untied, and Mr. Gascoyne unwrapped the article which he had carried so carefully to the bank. It was revealed as a silver casket, beautifully chased with fantastic dragons by some skilled craftsman long since dust and ashes. Mr. Duncan, as a frequent visitor at the farmhouse, which was almost a mansion, had often seen it before, in a place of honor on a priceless mahogany sideboard.

"Why, that's the Dragon Casket!" exclaimed the bank manager. "Do you want us to take care of it for you?" he added, eyeing his visitor with unaffected curiosity. "Burglars about?"

The question was only thrown out as a bait for further information. Mr. Duncan knew very well that the most ferocious burglar would have no terrors for the old man facing him.

"No," said Gascoyne. "There's worse things than burglars. I shouldn't fear such trash so long as I can hold a gun. All the same, I want you to put that casket in your strong room, Duncan, and make out the receipt to my granddaughter, Ida Gascoyne, so that she alone can claim it when I'm gone. Just jot down my instructions, will you?"

The manager drew paper toward him and made a note of his client's wishes. They were of the simplest nature. On Mr. Gascoyne's death the bank was to notify Miss Gascoyne that it held a package which had been deposited with them in her name for safekeeping, and that if she would call at the bank a receipt enabling her to claim it would be handed to her.

"You wish us to retain the receipt as well as the casket it refers to?" Mr. Duncan raised his eyebrows. "That is rather unusual. Why not give the young lady the receipt and ask her not to use it until after your death?"

Mr. Gascoyne stuck out his chin aggressively. "You don't want me to shift my account over the road at this stage of the proceedings?" he said. "Very well, then. Put the thing through like a good fellow and humor my little whim. Your branch of Floyds won't suffer in the long run."

After this the transaction was quickly completed. Mr. Duncan wrote out a receipt to Miss Ida Gascoyne for a silver casket intrusted to the bank for safe custody and placed the document in an envelope, together with a silver key which the farmer extracted from his vest pocket. At the latter's suggestion, the envelope was sealed with a great splodge of red wax.

"All right," said the manager. "I will see that your instructions are carried out, provided I don't predecease you. It is very irregular, the bank's holding the receipt. What's to hinder me or my successor forging your granddaughter's signature and appropriating the casket? I've often coveted it while enjoying your hospitality."

Farmer Gascoyne rose heavily and buttoned his overcoat.

"I'd rather trust you, Duncan, or any rogue that may follow you, than a bigger rogue I'm up against," he replied.

The manager accompanied him to the outer door of the bank, helped him climb into his dogcart, and looked after him with affectionate solicitude as he drove away. Not till the cart had rounded a corner in the sleepy High street did Mr. Duncan return to his private room.

"Dear old chap," he murmured. "On his last legs, I'm afraid. I wonder who the rogue is. There are such a lot of them about."

Then he saw to the bestowal of the casket and the envelope in the strong room, and in the pressure of other business relegated the touching little incident to the back of his mind. Provincial bank managers have not much time for exploiting their more human side.

In the meanwhile Farmer Gascoyne drove his high stepping blood mare at a brisk pace out of Steeplecross to the stone built house which had been the home of his forefathers for centuries. Three miles out he turned in at the white gates and handed the reins to the stable boy who ran out of the yard to meet him.

"Mr. Stephens is in the house, sir," the lad informed his master.

The farmer nodded, and, entering the front door, passed into the dining room, where a pale, middle aged man with sandy eyebrows was standing with his back to the fire.

"How are you, grandfather?" he said heartily, advancing with outstretched hand. "I cycled out to see how you are. Thought you were looking peeky when you were in town on market day."

"Very good of you, Steve," the old man replied. "I'm all right for an old un, but I can't expect to last long at my age. Dr. Haycraft does not give me more than twenty years."

"I suspected something of this sort. A conspiracy to rob me of the Dragon Casket, eh?"

"Twenty years!" came the astonished exclamation. "Well, well, grandfather, I'm sure I hope so." The dismay was quickly toned down into affectionate regard. "You don't look a day over 60 anyhow."

Mr. Stephen Jarvis was Farmer Gascoyne's grandson, the only son of his only daughter, long since dead, who five and forty years ago had married the Steeplecross solicitor. On the death of his father Stephen had taken over the lawyer business, but he had never been a success. People didn't like his manners or his methods. The clients who had liked and trusted Stephen's father had mostly gone over to the rival practitioner, excusing their defection by saying that it wouldn't hurt Steve Jarvis. There was no need for him to practice law. He would inherit at any rate half, probably a good deal more than half, of Farmer Gascoyne's money and property. Ida Gascoyne might get some of the money, but the old man loved his broad acres too well to leave any of them to a girl who wouldn't know how to farm them.

So wagged tongues in Steeplecross and there was shrewd common sense at the back of the wagging.

For Ida Gascoyne was most certainly a girl, and with equal truth it could be said that she was not capable of running a farm of two thousand acres. She was Farmer Gascoyne's granddaughter, sole child of his only son, much younger than his sister, Steve's mother, who had been killed while serving with the yeomanry in the Boer war. Ida kept house for her grandfather, and kept it well. The lore of dairy and orchard she had at her fingers' ends, but to saddle her with the burden of the pastures and the plow lands would have broken down pretty shoulders not meant for such work.

On the whole Mr. Stephen Jarvis was fairly satisfied with his prospects, and for very good reason. He was his grandfather's legal adviser and as such was well acquainted with the provisions of the will which Mr. Gascoyne had executed five years before. Mr. Jarvis had not drawn the will himself, since he was the principal beneficiary under it. The work had been done by a solicitor in a neighboring town, but Mr. Gascoyne had been quite frank as to the purport of the will. It tallied with the public gossip. The bulk of his property had been left to Steve, with only a modest pittance to Ida.

There was, however, a fly in the amber. At the time of the execution of the will Ida had been a pretty child, mostly away at boarding school. Since then she had grown to womanhood and was the apple of her grandfather's eye, tending the old man with a loving care which he plainly prized beyond all his possessions. So far Stephen Jarvis was sure that the will he wotted of had not been nullified by a later one, but he lived in a state of chronic dread lest that last testament should be altered in Ida's favor. Being what he was, he took every opportunity of undermining the girl in their mutual grandsire's estimation.

If only the old fool would die before he did something silly! Steve had had thoughts of providing against contingency by marrying his fair young cousin, but he doubted if he stood a dog's chance of that. She had never attempted to disguise her antipathy to him, and he had, moreover, plighted his troth to a barmaid in Steeplecross who would most assuredly mulct him in damages for breach of promise if he threw her over. Also, and again being what he was, the voluptuous charms of the barmaid appealed to his senses more than did the slender grace of Ida Gascoyne.

The farmer produced a decanter of his famous sherry and chatted a while on the weather and the crops. Then Steve said he must be going, and, like a scorpion, the sting was in the tail of him.

"I saw Ida with young Fred Heath again this morning," he remarked as he made for the door. "Nothing in it, I dare say, but it's a pity she goes about with a wastrel like that. Demobbed six months ago and not got a job yet. Living on his mother, they tell me."

The old man's face grew black as thunder.

"I'll talk to her," he growled. "I'll talk to her, Steve. Glad you mentioned it. Leave her to me."

And Mr. Stephen Jarvis departed, smiling darkly to himself. He had put yet another spoke in his cousin's wheel.

He had not been gone many minutes when there swept in upon Farmer Gascoyne a radiant vision of girlhood, throbbing with health and high spirits. At sight of the old man's tired face Ida checked her exuberance and kissed him tenderly.

"You are not well, granddad," she said, glancing at the sherry glasses on the table. "I met Steve on the road. I hope he hasn't been worrying you."

The farmer made a grimace. "He did his best to," was the reply. "Pitched me a tale about having seen you with young Heath."

"The sneak!" exclaimed Miss Ida. "But it couldn't be that that makes you look so ill, granddad. You like my Fred, don't you, dear?"

"I like him all right, lassie, but there are

he thought things were pretty well dried up.

"Here's a log, at any rate," said he; "and you may have my coat."

He threw it off as he spoke, and she spread her filmy skirts daintily over it, and sat like a belle marquise playing at Philida in the gardens of Versailles.

"Did you finish the game of backgammon words, with her before she left. Let's run, Merrie."

"I've a notion," panted Merrial as she ran, "how Aunt Jane will behave. She's been a sphinx from the start about quince preserve. I shall be dying to know if it comes out all right. Do get it all finished before dad and Dick arrive. They'll be here soon after lunch. And I want to get hold of him before her ground before she took her step, Miss Coke. Savvy?"

"O, yes, I suppose, I—savvy. Where does she come in on the profit, Mr. Hart?"

Tripp grinned. There is no other word for his big, boyish smile.

"You must settle that between you ladies," said he. "But I shouldn't let that keep

"Mine, Aunt Jane? My wedding? Do you mean it?"

"You dear, dear Goose!" said Merrial, and then, being pretty well frightened, she hid her face against Aunt Jane's.

"I want to give the wedding at my house, Merrial," was Aunt Jane's next remark, after a considerable stillness. Merrial's pupils grew big as she lifted them to a softened face.

Out of the War

The new healing antiseptic which worked wonders for the wounded. Now used for infected gums, skin eruptions, dandruff, etc.

The great war quickly proved the need of a new antiseptic healing agent. Thousands were dying from infected wounds, lockjaw and blood poison. Old healing methods, old standard antiseptics proved a failure. America solved the problem by producing the new chlorine antiseptic which quickly brought infection under control and healed wounds often in one-fourth the usual time. Over 50,000 physicians and dentists are now using it.

This same wonderful healing agent is now available to every home and factory, in the form of Kloria Tablets. Being used by dissolving in ordinary water, it is very inexpensive.

Kloria doesn't smart, is soothing, harmless and not poisonous. Yet it destroys germs more rapidly, more effectively than any other antiseptic ever known before. That is why it heals so quickly.

In tender, bleeding, shrinking gums Kloria attacks the germ cause with amazing results. All gum soreness and bleeding usually disappear in one week. It also makes the most effective mouth-wash for preventing tooth-decay, gum infections, tonsillitis and contagious diseases.

Kloria takes the place of all old-time healing salves and antiseptics. Cuts, sores, boils and burns often heal in one-fourth the usual time. Skin eruption and itching, eczema, dandruff, ivy poison, etc., promptly fade away. Kloria also destroys all offensive body odors instantly.

Sold by druggists or mailed prepaid for 50 cents. Money refunded if not entirely satisfied.

Package gives directions for making proper strength solutions for all uses. The liquid keeps perfectly in a bottle, ready for use.

"Gets-It" for Corns

Got a corn? Why? Why tolerate such an annoyance? Why endure its ache and pain? Why wear extra large shoes to accommodate it? Why dabble with useless corn "remedies" and "cures"? Why risk infection by cutting and trimming it?

Simply apply two or three drops of "Gets-It" and your corn stops aching—instantly and forever! Without burning or irritating the flesh it shrivels the corn right up. First the edges loosen, then the roots let go, and you can peel the whole corn off with your fingers. Costs but a trifle.

THESE HEADLINES OF 1914 told of the beginning of the greatest war in history. Today is the sixth anniversary of the declaration of war by Germany against Russia, the act that made what at first appeared to be a neighborhood scrap between Austria and Serbia a world conflict. Two days later, on August 3, Germany declared war on France. The following day England entered the conflict. On August 8, Liege, the great Belgian fortress, was captured and the German army began its march toward Paris. Perhaps never before in the history of the world did its millions of inhabitants turn to the newspapers with such feverish interest and anxiety to learn the developments in a war whose magnitude could at that time hardly be imagined.

"CORNS"

FAST ◇ FADELESS

THE first, and the dominant, appeal of the PREMIER is the unobtrusive beauty of the car as a whole. And, this impression of artistic fitness in every part is entirely confirmed, when one comes to study the car in detail.

Take, for instance, the magnetic gear-shift, which adds so very much to the ease, comfort and safety of motoring. By means of this gear-shift, the extraordinary flexibility of the aluminumized motor is supplemented and completed. This device permits a pre-selection of the gears, against a possible emergency in congested traffic, or on the open road in hill country. If, as now and then happens, the need to shift gears does not after all arise, a touch returns the control lever to its former position. Meanwhile, the driver, without loss of poise, sits at ease, keeping undisturbed his view of the road.

This magnetic gear-shift, with which the PREMIER is exclusively equipped, appeals instantly to the woman who, by choice, not infrequently drives her own car. It is, however, only one of many refinements, mechanical and decorative, that give the PREMIER distinction, when compared with even the finest of European importations.

Beautify Your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength, and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

Shoes for every summer need

Dozens of different styles for men and boys to choose

NO matter where you go this summer you will see Keds.

These light fabric shoes are made of finely woven canvas—so cool and flexible that they are always comfortable in the hottest weather. Their springy rubber soles make them a delight to wear.

Some of the newer models are made like leather shoes, with welt construction soles and firmly boxed toes. They are just the shoes you need with your white flannels, or for business wear in warm weather.

With these additions, Keds have become a complete line of canvas summer shoes—ranging from the easy, less formal tennis shoe to the latest and most fashionable styles of footwear. Last year millions of pairs of Keds were worn by men, women and children.

Good dealers everywhere carry Keds. Try on the different models. See how light they feel, and how perfectly they fit. Look for the Name Keds on the sole.

For men and women $1.50—$7.00
For children $1.15—$4.50

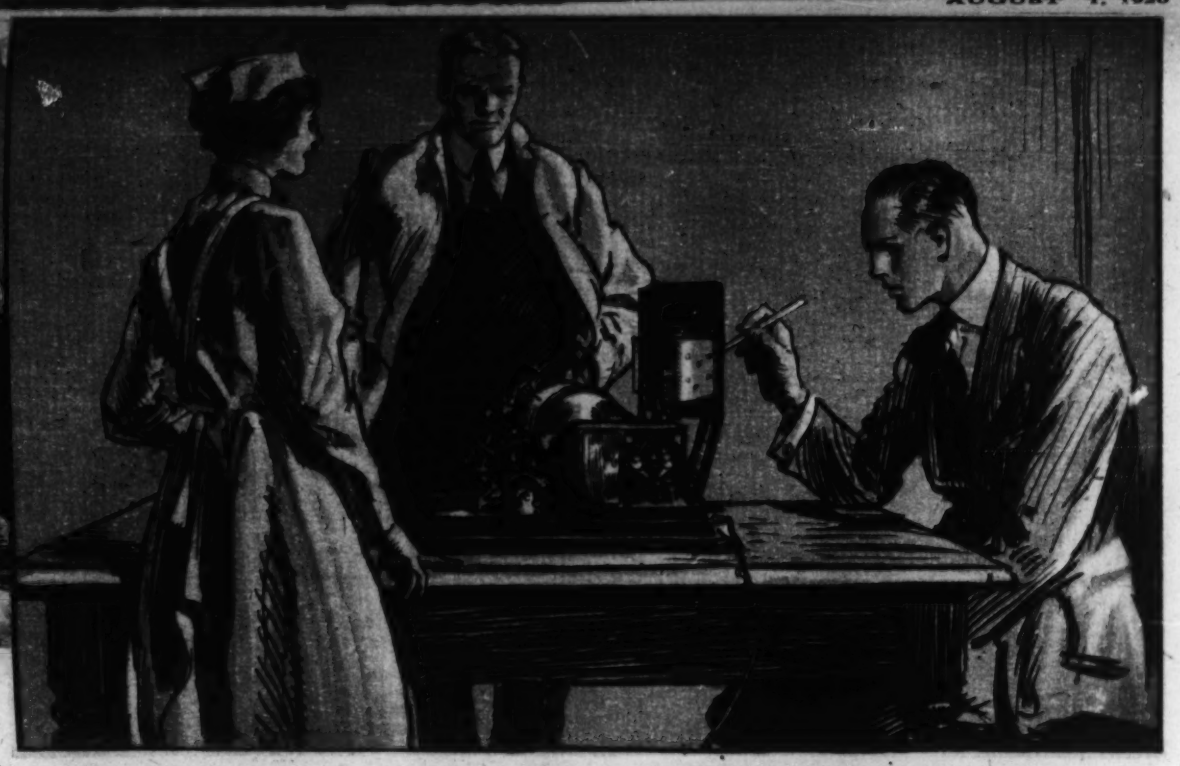
"Today one of the greatest of wastes comes from pounding away your energy on hard, modern pavements"



Measuring fatigue by machine—an artist's sketch from a description by an eyewitness

A new machine to measure fatigue

What record would you make on it?

AFTER years of effort to discover a means of measuring fatigue, a successful machine has at last been perfected in England. It can determine your nervous condition by testing your ability to concentrate.

This fatigue machine, recently described by Dr. Winifred Cullis, Professor of Physiology at the London School of Medicine, has a slit, behind which a roll of paper unwinds at a speed controlled by the operator. On the paper are dots printed at unequal intervals. The person being tested endeavors to pierce with a pointed instrument as many dots as he can in a given length of time.

By comparing the number of dots you can punch in the morning as you come to work with the number you are able to strike at the end of the day, your condition is determined. With this machine your state of fatigue at any time can be accurately shown, your ability to concentrate measured.

Dr. Cullis, during her recent visit to America, announced some of the results of extensive research into conditions of various branches of work which produce fatigue.

One of the most important results established was that men and women in various ways waste their precious energy.

It is because of this waste that they become fatigued and listless in their daily tasks. This is why so many fail and meet defeat.

Today one of the greatest of wastes comes from pounding away your energy on hard, modern pavements. Every step you take with hard leather heels or "dead" rubber heels acts as a hammer blow to your nervous system.

Remove this cause of fatigue

If you are a person of average activity you take 8,000 steps a day. The constant repetition of these jolts and jars tends to exhaust your energy—to produce that state of fatigue which is the greatest enemy you have in your work today.

You can do much to prevent this condition. You can eliminate the shocks of pounding hard heels on still harder pavements. O'Sullivan's Heels absorb the jolts and jars of walking.

To secure the resiliency, the springiness of O'Sullivan's Heels, the highest grades of rubber are blended by special formula. With this blend of live, springy rubber are "compounded" the best toughening agents known. The compound is then "cured" or baked under high pressure.

The same process that makes O'Sullivan's Heels resilient gives them their great durability. O'Sullivan's Heels outlast three pairs of leather heels—they often outlast two pairs of ordinary rubber heels.

Stop pounding away your energy. Go to your shoe repairer today and have O'Sullivan's Heels put on your shoes.

AMERICAN CHAMPIONS OF ENGLAND AND AMERICA—William Johnston and William T. Tilden, the American Davis cup team, startled Europe with their playing this summer and won the praises of the king of England by their work on the courts at Wimbledon. They constitute an unusual tennis team, as Tilden is the 1920 British champion, considered in England champion of the world, and Johnston is the American champion, holding the title because of his victory last year. Tilden is the first American ever to hold the title of British tennis champion.

Colors you have been trying to get and could not

LOVELIER colors than you have ever before been able to wash into your faded blouses.

A clearer blue, a truer rose, a more radiant coral.

You get these lovelier shades with Twink, the new colored flakes.

Twink is made by a wonderful new method for producing colors that makes it possible to get more exquisite shades than have ever before been obtained.

When this was accomplished the color authorities of this country were asked to select the loveliest and smartest colors for this season. Twink was then made to match these colors.

The Twink flakes dissolve instantly in boiling or very hot water. You whip them up into a rich tinted lather, and toss in your sun-faded organdie, or your yellowed georgette. Swish it about and squeeze the suds gently through the fabric several times. In a twinkling your organdie has its original soft lavender again. Your yellowed georgette is a charming copenhagen.

Twink colors turn out clear and even every time, with no streaks or spots. They are so fast you can wash your blouse several times before you need Twink it again. Twink will not injure any fabric that water alone will not harm.

Get today several packages of Twink in the newest blouse shades and just follow the surprisingly easy directions that come with the package.

Your druggist, the department stores, and the 5 & 10 cent stores have Twink. Lever Brothers Co., Cambridge, Mass.

LATEST and LOVELIEST PARIS MODELS

(Photographs copyright by Wyndham, Paris.)

TWO LUCILE FROCKS FOR GIRLS, in soft white satin. The one veiled in tulle has silver roses across the front and an edge of tiny silver flowers. The other has a scalloped hem with frillings of real valenciennes and the paniers are like little baskets over each hip.

SHE LOOKS LIKE A BUTTERFLY in this Lucile frock of soft silver satin and net studded with sequins. The net is a heliotrope shade that deepens in the velour binding and the funny wing—like panier supports.

A VERY PARISIAN PINAFORE of navy blue shantung, embroidered and buttoned with white over a white linen frock. The back shows the same tablier effect. It is a Tiburce model.

A SEASHORE CLOAK in jersey de laine with deep yoke and scarf edged with black squares. The hat is pale blue.

SHE MIGHT BE STARED AT on Michigan avenue. In Paris, she would only be admired in this chic tight little bodice like a peasant's, and the wide skirt in silver on black.

IF Chicago's registration of automobiles had increased as fast as the sale of Horse-Shoe Tires (9,000% in five years) Michigan Boulevard would have to be widened to the dotted line to accommodate the traffic.

The sale of Horse-Shoe Tires has increased five times as rapidly as the sale of cars.

Many Chicago motorists drove Horse-Shoe Cord Non-Skid Tires all last winter without chains. For sudden stops or sharp turns, in the Loop or on the boulevards, the stubborn grip of this distinctive cord tire effectively prevents skidding on really slippery pavements.

Less than 1% of the thousands and thousands of users of these tires have ever asked for an adjustment.

Horse-Shoe Cord Tires have established a new standard of service. That's why a million motorists recommend them. Any of the following will demonstrate to you how actually non-skid these tires are.

At that Garden Party yesterday you just couldn't help watching a little enviously how the other girl was surrounded by admirers. She had such a good time—and her face was radiant with happiness and good looks! While you . . . .

Why does she win?

YES, you have just as pretty clothes. You are young, and you have charm. But you don't win, somehow! There's no middle ground and everybody knows it—either you are popular or you're not!

And the greatest of all secrets lies in a clear colorful face. . . . . That's all—a complexion that makes your friends happy whenever their eyes turn to you.

What Makes Failure

Skins mar or make good times!

And yet we go on rubbing toilet soaps into our skins never dreaming that they are sometimes half-raw and are stealing the natural oil which is so necessary to smoothness and youth. After a while we see that something is wrong. We realize that the soap we thought was safe does not agree with the skin.

The trouble is that our complexions haven't the vitality to withstand soaps that are harsh—half-raw. They go too deeply into the tender underneath life—deep into the millions of tiny pores—down to the very nerves and tissues. That's what half-raw soaps do to us—all unawares! They give us the dull, muddy complexion we all hate so much. It costs us too much in happiness and popularity.

Pears' Heat-Toned to Win

One soap is made to agree with the skin. For Pears' isn't the least bit raw. At the stage where others are ready to wrap for sale, Pears' is considered only half done. It is then and there started on its special heat-toning process. It is scientifically treated by heat as no other soap is treated.

The rawness or "greenness" is taken out of Pears' by putting it in special retorts closed against the outside air. It is carefully finished under great heat. And when it is all through, the very feeling of Pears' has changed—even the color has changed. It is no longer the ordinary soap color but the rich, soft wine tone which we know is Pears'.

But best of all, the very quality inside is changed. Pears' lather is smooth and soothing—not the fluffy lather of cheap soaps. For all the soap molecules are softened—broken into smaller particles so you can almost see into the Heat-Toned depths of the cake.

Haven't you often felt the need of a soap that is mellowed—ripened—just as fine fruit ripens in the sun? Your skin needs such a soap, and Heat-Toning gives it to you. Pears' will protect the tender, inner life and allow the skin to grow smooth, colorful, soft. Use Pears' and win.

THIS SEASON'S FASHIONS ARE BUILT TO DISPLAY THE HANDS

How to keep your nails exquisite with fifteen minutes' care each week

BRILLIANT fans to permit a graceful motion of a perfect hand. Sleeveless gowns that lead the eye down the slender arm to rest on the finger tips. Beads with which pink finger tips may toy.

Never before have hands been so conspicuous or have women given so much thought to their care.

The chief beauty of the hands is the nails. The cuticle must be slender, even, firm. It is unpardonable this year not to have perfectly kept nails and cuticle. Fortunately, it is no longer hard to keep the nails lovely.

Fifteen or twenty minutes given regularly each week to this simple, scientific method of caring for your nails will keep them always exquisite.

There is no need for the slow, ruinous cutting of the cuticle. Learn to manicure the safe way—cutting the cuticle leaves a ragged, irregular edge. The more you cut it, the more rapidly the cuticle grows—the tougher and more uneven it becomes.

But with Cutex, the safe cuticle remover, you can rid yourself of superfluous cuticle without cutting.

Follow the directions. A few minutes, once or twice a week, is all that is necessary to keep your nails lovely.

If your cuticle has a tendency to dry and grow coarse, apply a bit of Cutex Cold Cream each night. This cream was especially prepared to keep the hands and cuticle soft and fine.

MEXICO RIDES to BATTLE on RODS and ROOF

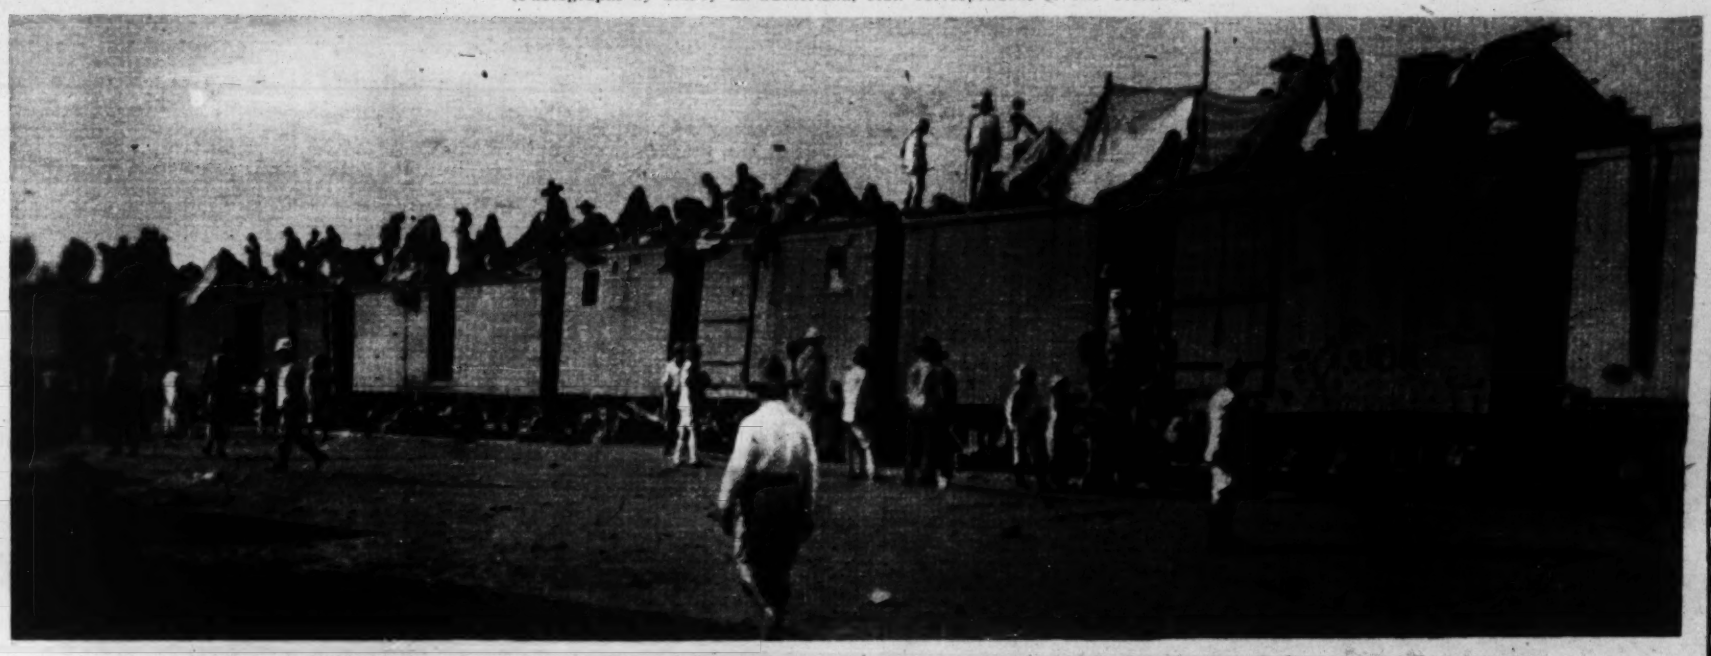
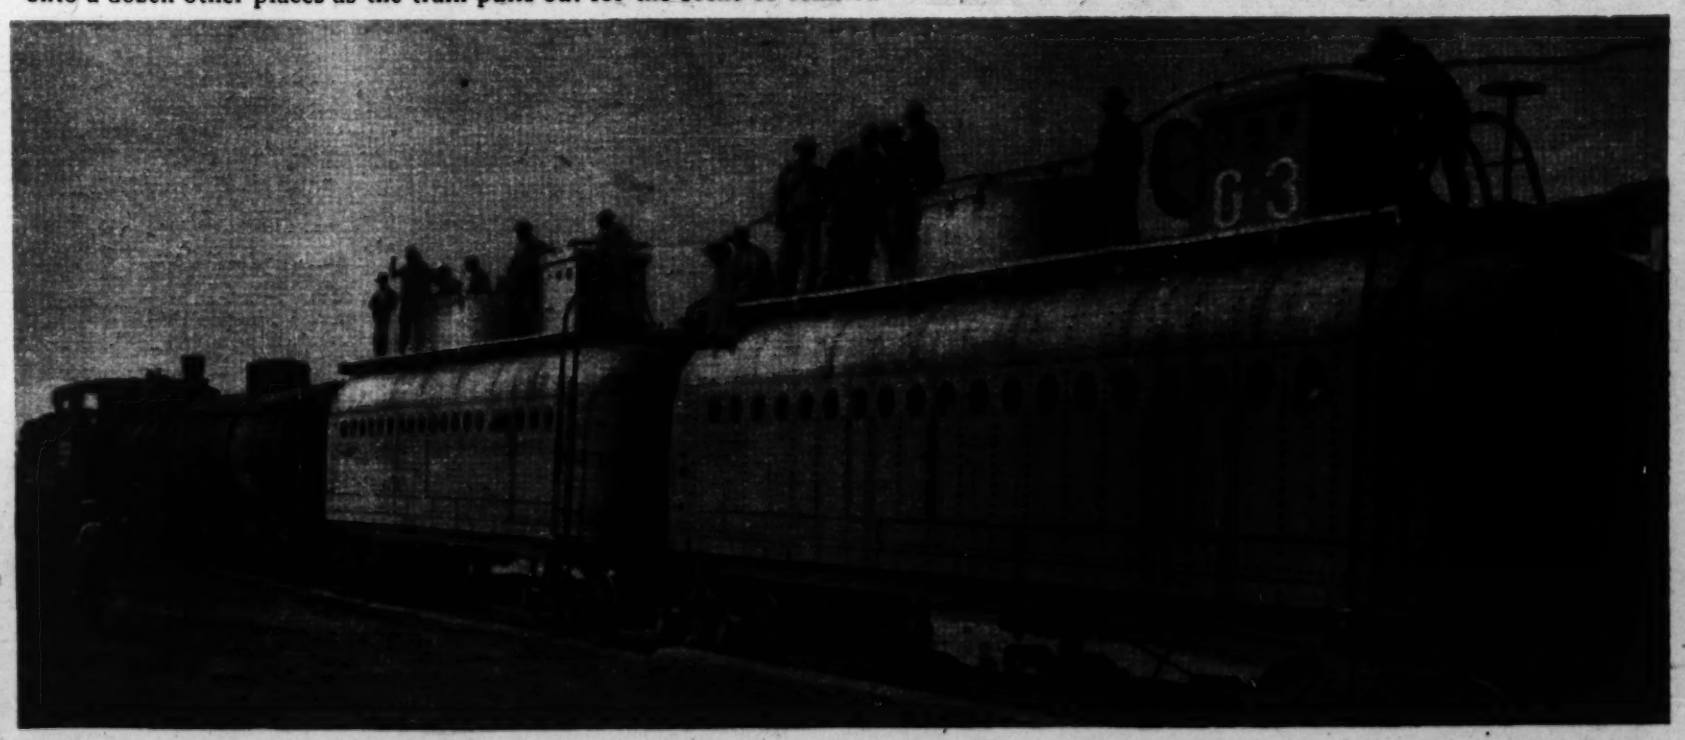
(Photographs by Sidney M. Sutherland, staff correspondent of The Tribune.)



LEAVING FOR THE SCENE OF TROUBLE—The Mexican soldiers live in, on or under the box cars that take them to battle. Pitching their tents on the roofs of the cars or swinging their hammocks along the brake beams, they go off to fight as carelessly as only men who have had a decade of revolution can do.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT MOTHER, even if she does have to take up her abode under a box car? Resting on planks tied to the rods, she and her family of chickens, pigs, dogs, birds and goats find plenty of comfort, more so than many of the women who hang onto a dozen other places as the train pulls out for the scene of conflict.



MEXICAN ARMORED CARS have helped to open up the railroads for travel. These two, G-2 and G-3, are about the only good armored cars the Obregon government has, but they have given such excellent service that most of the roads except in the state of Chihuahua are safe for travel without escort and at night.

How the world's highest salaried engineer gets his relaxation

In order to give this famous scientist his needed moments of rest, the rules of a great company have been set aside

BRIGHTLY lighted streets and houses—swift elevators—fast-moving cars—these modern marvels of science are possible only because of one tireless brain. It is the ceaseless work of Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz that is the real basis of many of the greatest electrical inventions of our day.

Today he is known as one of the few "hundred thousand dollar" men of America. For years he has been chief consulting engineer of the General Electric Company.

And he alone among the 60,000 workers in this great firm is allowed to smoke.

His long, thin cigars are almost as famous as his Law of Magnetism. They represent his method of making hours of work and moments of rest count to the full.

All the world's leaders—all the men and women who have accomplished the most—have had this same faculty. They have known the value of alternating work with brief moments of relaxation. It is only this frequent momentary recreation that has saved them from breaking down under the strain of their efforts.

In order to gain these vital moments of relaxation, Foch discussed theories of science while battles raged. A famous surgeon frequently reads a passage from Mark Twain with his waiting-room filled with patients. One of America's greatest scientific workers stops his work from time to time to play a tune on an organ. Roosevelt used to pause to read jingles.

It is remarkable how many different things and what simple things will help us gain this momentary relaxation.

We have all noticed, for instance, that just the ordinary act of washing the hands often relaxes and rests us surprisingly.

Make your brief moments of rest really refreshing

TODAY there is a new way—a simple, inexpensive luxury that makes this commonplace, pleasant act of washing twice as refreshing. With Jergens Violet Soap you can make the bathing of your hands and face a real momentary relaxation. Notice the delightful feeling of fragrant cleanliness that this simple act gives you—how smooth and cool it leaves your skin.

This crystal clear soap contains an ingredient that soothes and refreshes. The living fragrance of violets is released the moment the cake touches the water.

Whenever work leaves you fatigued or nervous—in the middle of a busy morning or afternoon, or at the end of a trying day—use Jergens Violet Soap. The same unusual properties that make it refreshing when you are tired are just as delightful for general use. It gives the mere bathing of the hands and face a new value—makes it a new pleasure.

You can get Jergens Violet Soap wherever soap is sold—15 cents a cake.

Send 6 cents for a guest-size cake

Send us 6 cents and we will mail you at once a small cake of this delightful soap. Write today to The Andrew Jergens Company, 6536 Spring Grove Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio. If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Company, Limited, 6536 Sherbrooke Street, Perth, Ontario.

Fashions Beauty Contests

FOR ALL SPORTS AND CONDITIONS OF SUMMER

By CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in the Chicago Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Scene: Any country club. Time: Any hour, morning or afternoon. Heroine: Any girl in any kind of sports clothes.

Summer is, in fact, a haphazard sort of dramatist. It is even less exacting than the Elizabethan playwrights who asked only "two boards and a passion." The chief demand made by hot weather in writing stage directions is, indeed, "two board (walks) and a passion (for sports clothes)."

Yet, of course, sports clothes are not all there is to a summer. There are the numerous types of tub frocks which so many fashionables don for morning wear in preference to sports skirt and sweater. These tub frocks are so simple that even a Balkan princess might feel nervous in their presence. Thus, during a trip to one of the smart Long Island resorts, here are a few of the things I noted:

A chambray frock with white organdy ruffles rising at the back of the neck and flowing down to the hem of the frock to form a front panel bounded by the same sort of ruffle finishing the hem. And, by the way, these ruffles, set vertically instead of horizontally, and generally giving the effect of a panel, are one of the features of the present summer frock. Next, a combination of white linen and polka dotted English sateen in which the latter figured as a hip length bodice extended to the hips to meet the white linen skirt. After that, numerous dotted swisses and organdies and dotted voiles. Last, a figured muslin developed with sash and collar of white organdy stood out because of the possession of one of those inverted tunics which a leading Fifth avenue designer launched early this spring. This tunic, set on just above the hem of the skirt, widened in calla-lily wise about the hips, where it was held out by a plaited ruffle corresponding to the one attached to the lower terminus of the drapery.

Yes, everlasting rhythms of artful simplicity are going on in the new tub frocks, but in spite of this the main motif of summer wear continues to be the skirt and either blouse or sweater. Before leaving these morning frocks, however, let me not forget to mention the wide use of English sateen this season. This fabric seems to have replaced, indeed, the calico fancy of several years ago, and the belle of Newport and Southampton flies straight as a homing bird to the sateen either in plain or figured form. The fact of it is that even the separate skirt of English sateen in printed design has been tried out. One of such models fringed at the hem and worn with a slipover sweater of plain color was a bit of style illumination offered by what somebody calls a "leading debutante" of Southampton.

The sweater continues perhaps the favorite way to introduce color into a sports costume. Yet at some of the very smartest summer resorts it is noticeable that the coat of some kind of sports attire is worn in preference to this hot weather classic. Some of these coats are in Tuxedo style, and some of the most striking models have the good old blazer stripe. Imagine one of these coats—white striped in red—worn with a skirt of white Baronet satin or white plaited georgette, with fine batiste blouse inset with filet and with sports hat of white silk, and you see why the magazine cover artist has a hard time catching up with life.

ROBIN HOOD would probably step his favorite sport of robbin' somebody else if he could see his own sports costume of leather adapted for the lady to the left. For the links nothing could be smarter than this blouse of green velvet suede trimmed with punch work and worn with green and black plaid skirt. Next, the silk coat, which has partially supplanted the sweater, is shown here in white tricolette worn over a frock of white flannel blocked in navy blue. Following this a sports suit of navy flannel is banded in white suede, and last, a yellow and white sweater is paired with a yellow and white plaited skirt.

The coat, made of tricolette, is another pretender to the sweater crown. These coats, as exemplified by the girl who wants to do her sweater bit, are knee length and then fringed to a depth of from eight to fourteen inches. Elbow sleeves are the rule here, and so are brilliant colors, among which may be mentioned first and foremost the ubiquitous yellow and orange. Such coats are generally donned for late afternoon and evening wear, and their companion is almost always the white silk skirt.

For morning wear the very thin weight Shetland wool sweater is now very smart. You often do this in black or else navy blue with white skirt and a white sailor banded in georgette, the color of the sweater. The sailor hat with draped band of georgette is, in fact, worn intensively this summer. Lucky is the woman whom it becomes, but the truth of it is that we have now discredited the old adage that every girl looks well in a sailor. Most of us annoy our enemies more when we wear a soft, graceful hat of silk.

The tricolette sweater blouse with short sleeves and wool embroidery comes in most delightful colors. Even newer, however, is the filet silk crocheted one. One of these latter I saw worn by a girl at Southampton, had a Puritan collar, short sleeves, and heavy wool embroidery in contrasting tones. It was extremely smart in conjunction with plaited white silk skirt.

In spite of the color, which makes a country club porch look like a shower of confetti, it is noted that all white costumes are frequently elected. In the figure second from the left we note this predilection in a white flannel frock blocked with navy blue and worn with a white tricolette sports coat.

Flannel overwear is now an important item in sports togs. We borrowed this from the French, who make up what they don't know about sports in what they do know about clothes. They are fond of trimming suits and separate skirts of flannel with leather or suede. It is a fancy which we have followed in the sports suit of blue flannel second from the right, for the adorable little loose coat of this is banded in white suede.

Speaking of leather, nothing less than the jerkin of olden days has been devised to go with sports skirt of homespun or tweed or flannel. Yet how Robin Hood would have opened his eyes to behold the present apotheosis of his own original sports costume! For these jerkins are made of the softest velvet suede, and the brown in which they so frequently make their appearance is offset by blue or red crepe de chine lining. What is more, they are often garnished with punch work, and a few of the models which have been brought to us from the other side have wonderful hand painted designs taken from old china platters.

At the left of this page we show, not one of the familiar types of jerkin, but a blouse made of green suede, trimmed with punch work. This is held in about the hips by a black patent leather girdle, and it is worn with one of the popular checked skirts—this in green and black. These leather blouses and jerkins are worn a great deal on the links, and the latest thing to set them off is a tam of suede. Here the hat is of green felt, which is much used now for sports millinery and promises to be continued for fall days.

Last of the models on the page is the one to the right, a yellow and white plaited skirt, worn with yellow and white wool sweater.

New Millinery Modes

Alluringly smart, the new Fall Hats are of Velvet, Duvetyn and Satin. Navy Blue, Brown and Copper are the prevailing colors.

The Autumn Mode

NEWS from our buyers, who are now visiting the style markets of the world for new ideas, indicate that our Fall Styles will constitute still greater achievements for the house of exclusive styles. The new merchandise on display now is prophetic of the glorious mode of tomorrow—it is alluring in both line and coloring.

August Sale of Furs

offers the most advantageous time to buy furs this year. Our opportune purchase of furs makes it possible for us to offer better prices now than we can later, because the best quality of skins and skilled labor promise a big increase for Fall. Contrary to expectation, our discounts this August are more liberal than ever. Our stocks are wonderfully complete, displaying distinctive models that are worthy of Stevens style traditions.

There are smart coats and wraps in all the desirable furs—Minks, Sable, Hudson Seal, Squirrel and other popular furs, as well as numerous attractive Neckpieces and Stoles. Every garment was bought with the view of offering our patrons extensive savings.

The New Suits

Trim, tailored and navy blue seem to be the requirements of the new Autumn tailleur models. Most of the jackets agree on the finger tip length, but the style of the collars is varied, while trimming is a matter of choice. Although some suits prefer to remain severely plain, most of them are elaborately embroidered and braided with a host of buttons.

The New Frocks

Simplicity distinguishes the new Autumn dresses, even though the materials are rich and soft. Heavy Tricotine gleams with jet beading or silk embroidery, while Duvetyn, Kitten's Ear Crepe or Callot Suede Crepe depend entirely upon a bewitchery of line for their chic—and the line varies. The smart Redingote with its long, slender lines, divides favor with the kimono sleeve bodice and the graceful harem skirt. Sleeves remain short and the waistline is as variable as the weather.

Do you know a real love story—one that is stronger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

AUNTY'S PLAN WORKED.

IN the small town of W. lived Miss Carrie, as she was called, aged 37, unmarried and without a single matrimonial prospect. She was, however, one of those capable and self-reliant persons, who seem just naturally to have responsibilities thrust upon them, and who have developed the strength and courage to meet them. But she possessed none of the subtle fascinations attractive to the other sex. She held a secretarial position to one of the "big" men in the small town.

Miss Carrie happened to be a friend of my aunt, who said to her one day, "Carrie, you should be married. Since you seem unable to ensnare a man with your own simple charms, I am going to help you to accomplish that, but you must do exactly as I say." Miss Carrie acquiesced.

My aunt forthwith proposed a month's vacation at a fashionable sanitarium. She must meet eligible men. She then began to study Miss Carrie's possibilities. She realized that she had many. And she believed firmly that the first requisite in the matrimonial game was to make oneself as attractive as possible. So she took Miss C. on the wildest of shopping tours, where some good looking and fashionable wearing apparel was selected. From there Miss C. was taken to hairdressers and manicurists. When she emerged there was a noticeable change in her appearance. She looked about ten years younger. Her face took on a new and happy expression. The funny side of the game began to appeal to Miss C., and for the first time in her life she laughed heartily. Part of the game, however, was that she must be marcelled and manicured and dolled up during her entire stay at the sanitarium. My aunt wagered that she would secure a man in that time. So without much ado, bag and baggage were gotten ready and she was whisked away to the scene of action.

But two weeks passed and nothing exciting or thrilling happened. No man appeared on the horizon. Miss Carrie was tired of being dolled up and always manicured. She thought she was a fraud and she was anxious to get home and get to work. But my aunt implored her to stay at least another week. So to please my aunt she stayed.

One morning as she was sitting on the veranda, reading a magazine, she was startled by some loud talking and commotion near by. There was a man in a wheel chair, swearing at his nurse, who, in her desperation, called to Miss Carrie to look after him for a few minutes while she went downstairs.

When he saw Miss Carrie he quieted down a little, somewhat abashed at his violent outbreak. But before he had a chance to make any apologies regarding his conduct, Miss Carrie told him in plain English what she thought of himself for such violent outbursts of temper; that she felt sorry for the nurse who had him in her care. When the nurse returned and found her patient quiet and serene she was amazed. Instead of storming, he became more considerate. The nurse got the habit of calling on Miss Carrie frequently to relieve her when her patient became very trying. This threw the two together and they became interested in each other. It developed that the man was a widower without any family. She used to read to him and he used to look forward to her coming with eager interest. But Miss Carrie's stay was coming to an end and she wanted to go home. The soothing effect her person had on this particular patient, however, was brought to the attention of the superintendent of nurses at the sanitarium, and before she started for home she was offered a position in the institution. This, however, she declined. Her visit was over and she wanted to get back to her work at home, so she packed and left just as hurriedly and suddenly as she had come.

One day shortly after her arrival home, she happened to be walking along one of the streets in the town when she suddenly stumbled over something. She looked and saw a pair of feet, the owner of them lying on the ground under an automobile. He emerged ready to sputter at the person who had the audacity to disturb him. When their eyes met and Miss Carrie recognized the man from the sanitarium. He had followed her. They were quietly married a month later.

HOW TO SWIM

By Antoinette Donnelly

BREAST STROKE

1. Breast stroke; body perfectly straight, arm straight to front, palms down, legs straight back, and toes pointed.

2. Sweep arms sideward, with palms against water to a point not farther back than line across the shoulder; legs held straight.

3. Bend arms in toward body against sides, hands under chest and pointing forward and down; at same time draw legs up toward body, keeping heels together and spreading knees as wide as possible.

4. Extend arms out in front the same as in starting position, at same time kick feet out as wide as possible until the legs are straight; then snap together. This will bring you back to starting position.

THE CRAWL

The most important thing is to know how to breathe properly in the crawl. In illustration 5 you see how the breath is taken through the mouth. This swimmer inhales as left arm comes back. In breathing, a person breathes in through the mouth and out through nose under water. If you breathe in on left side, take your breath just as arm sweeps back and is lifted from the water. Begin exhaling through the nose as the same arm passes the head going into the water, as in illustration 6. The face only should be submerged to the eyebrows.

The arm action is what is known as double overarm stroke in the trudgeon crawl. In the case of this swimmer, the left arm is carried back and is leaving the water as the right arm is dipping into the water in front of the shoulder. The arm that goes down is carried back under the body, using the hand firmly against the water until it finishes at the hip in the backward sweep. Relax the arms as much as possible. The arm is carried forward above the water, so that the hand will be about five to six inches above the water in passing the head. The elbow is bent at this point. The hand then curves inward and enters the water in front of the shoulder. Continue to repeat these arm actions slowly, as in illustration 7.

The legs are held as near to surface as possible at the start of the stroke, with a fast up and down crash of them continually used, as in illustration 7. They are in a straight position at all times, with the toes pointed back and turned under slightly (pigeon-toed, in other words). The knee and ankle must be held as relaxed as possible to keep the legs from tiring. This is known as the 6 beat 2 crawl, which means six beats of the feet to each two arm action.

A full breath must be taken inhaling and exhaling for each complete stroke in every distance over forty yards. Beginners should breathe on every complete stroke. A good way for beginners to learn this breathing is to do "bobbing," which is to stand on bottom, hang on to a rail, and take a deep breath through mouth; then submerge face and begin exhaling until lungs are nearly empty. Then raise the face just as you finish your exhale. Take a new breath and then repeat. Five or ten minutes a day for the week should perfect one in the breathing. Inhaling may be done in this stroke either on right or left side. Choose the most natural.

"A pair of water wings is valuable to a beginner on any stroke," says Tom Robinson, swimming instructor at Northwestern university, to whom I am indebted for these swimming instructions. "You can coördinate your strokes while your wings are holding you up. Beginners in using water wings should wade out to water just above the waist, place wings across chest, face the shore, and start. Never swim away from shore with wings on."

Another point for beginners urged by Mr. Robinson is, "Don't walk around with hands over head or over water. You can balance yourself with hands under water if you stepped into a hole or beyond your depth." For an average healthy person forty-five minutes is about the right time to remain in the water, but for a delicate, thin child or grown person twenty minutes. For a fat child or grownup one hour is beneficial, because there is heat supply enough in their fat to keep them warm. It is the absence of this that makes the thin, underdeveloped person find the water not so enjoyable. Four times a week is as frequent as any one should go swimming unless it is in salt water.

DIVING

9. The easiest way for a beginner to dive and the surest way to avoid hitting bottom or trouble of any kind is to kneel on the board, one to three feet above water, place hands over head, and bend down to crouching position as illustrated. Take a deep breath through the mouth, fall forward slowly without any push.

10. This is a racing start, and is made by crouching at knees and hips, so hands are back alongside of hips. At word "go," hands are swung forward quickly and spring made simultaneously.

An Inquisitive Messenger.

I have a young brother who is at the impossible age of 12. I have discovered that sending him on errands, with proper compensation, is one way to utilize some of his surplus energy. One day I sent him with a love note to my girl. He probably wended his way most leisurely, for that night at dinner, in the presence of the entire family, he recited my note verbatim. Of course, every one but me thought him exceedingly amusing. M. R.

Just Slipped Away.

I was at boarding school and my aunt lived across the way. One day our dean forbade us to leave the premises on account of quarantine. While the girls were playing ball I slipped over to my aunt's house, intending only to stay for a few moments. The door bell rang and my aunt asked me to answer it. Imagine my embarrassment when, on opening the door, I beheld our dean, who was trying to find a room for a friend. R. S.

At Full Speed.

One of the clients waiting to see the boss was a neighbor of ours, so I decided to show off. I started the typewriter going at full speed, pretending to be copying from my notes, but my finished copy was nothing like what the notes would reveal it should be.

Just when I thought she was forming a good opinion of my typewriting speed the boss came out. Surprised to see me typing so fast, he looked at what I had written. You can imagine my embarrassment when he exclaimed, "When did you turn Chinese?" Of course, she knew then that I had just been pounding the keys and not really writing anything. L. K.

Altering Dolly's Hat.

Some girls and I were looking at Dolly's hat and giving advice as to fixing the too floppy rim. One girl suggested turning it up in front, but it wasn't becoming. Without thinking I said, "O, no! Don't make the hat look worse than it is now." G. M. J.

I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. MARIE: YOU GET THE HABIT OF going around the house with sloppy shoes and corsetless figure, and before you know it you look the part all the way through. Some day I am going to write a story about one of the finest looking women of 60 I know. Her ankles and figure would answer the requirements of a beautiful model ad. How does she have them at 60? She never in her married life and work around her home let herself go about without corsets, and she wore high laced shoes as well. She was just that kind of wonderful housekeeper—and her husband says she's the "prettiest girl in the whole world."

JACKIE: BLISTERS CAUSED BY perspiration may be relieved by the application of spirits of camphor on a piece of cheese cloth. Genuine blisters should be painted with collodion to protect them from the air and from the friction of the hose. Calloused spots should be rubbed with pumice stone and softened with vaseline or cold cream. Do not cut them.

JOHN: JUST PLAIN TABLE SALT applied to the tooth brush and rubbed on the gums is an excellent pyorrhoea preventive.

BLANCHE: NO, WATER WOULD not cause the yellow headed pimples. On the contrary, you probably do not get enough into your system. They are probably blackheads that, not being removed, have festered. I will send you complete instructions on how to take care of this condition of the skin if you wil send stamped, addressed envelope.

MISS B.: WHY DON'T YOU TAKE the milk diet? It is quite wonderful for the skin and undoubtedly much of your trouble would disappear as you put on the flesh. I would suggest, however, that you take the milk treatment under the direction of a physician.

TREE SUPERSTITIONS

BY DORIS BLAKE

MAUDE MARTIN ELLIS

IT used to be a tradition in some communities to plant a tree at the birth of a child, and as the tree grew, so grew the child.

Among some savage races, souls are ascribed to the trees, and it was thought very bad luck to cut down an old tree.

It is bad luck to climb over a tree that has been blown down across the road. Walk around it.

For a branch of a tree to grow into your window is a sign of success in your wishes.

The first fruit of any tree should be gathered into a sack and some left on the tree so that it will bear well ever after.

If the oak and beech trees bear many acorns and nuts, it is a sign of a severe winter to come.

If you hear old trees crashing down the mountain, it is a sign of a storm.

If a young tree withers without cause, there will be sickness in the family living nearest.

A few leaves trembling on a tree when every other part of the tree is still forebodes bad luck to the observer.

If you carve your name on any tree, it is said you will be opposed by some one all your life until the tree is cut down and burned.

There is another superstititon about cutting the name on a tree. It will die when you die.

If a tree near your house splits in two, it foretells ill luck.

If a tree you planted grows crookedly, there will be a black sheep in the family.

There is a Negro superstition that water taken out of old stumps of trees will take the kinks out of Negro's hair.

Cut down a green tree and it brings bad luck.

If you see a tree fall to the right, you will go on a long journey before the end of the year.

The Indians believe that the holes in trees are doors out of which the spirits pass.

To peel a tree will bring you poverty.

"Never cut down an old apple tree, or some old person in your family will die." (Jamaica.)

If in the fall the foliage on the trees sheds from the top down a light winter will follow, but if it sheds from the bottom up a heavy and hard winter may be expected.

It is considered a great sin among the Hindus if any member of the family should cut down a tree planted by an ancestor, and the misfortunes of many a family have been attributed to such an act of indiscretion.

To touch the warty excrescences on trees will cause warts. (New England.)

The weeping willow hung over the heads of the apostles while they waited and slept when our Lord suffered his agony, and ever after it has wept.

Another version of the weeping willow is: After Adam and Eve were banished from the Garden of Eden two angels came down and rested on a willow tree and wept so copiously for man's misfortune that their tears ran down the branches and forced the leaves to grow down, and it came to be known as the weeping willow.

Never take a house where there is a weeping willow tree in the garden. (Italian.)

Cut all your wood in the months with an "r."

When maple trees are tapped in the spring and the first sap is not sweet it denotes a long sugar season; if sweet, a short one.

Poplar trees near a house are unlucky.

WHISPERS OF FALL.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—How would you like long, snug fitting sleeves for a change, that clasp closely round the upper part of the hand, and skirts about a mile round the bottom? I need not ask how you would like the long, straight figure, because you have never departed from it for a moment. But the signs of the time would almost say that the French are going to take unto themselves such basic features of silhouette construction for the fall models of style, with traceries of lace, fur, and embroideries for embellishment.

Lace, especially, bids fair to be more fashionable than usual. Whole dresses of it are now being shown at the summering places. If there is a history to go with the lace, so much the better.

As for the straight line and the chemise frock—wasn't it the Greeks who started it? Whether it was they or the Visigoths or the prehistoric tribes, it has remained the most popular of all outlines, and is the most universally becoming to Anglo-Saxon, Latin, and Teutonic figures alike. Come to think of it, I don't believe the chemise frock ever did rage among the Teutons, and Germany is the one place where I have not seen it flourishing. Maybe that is a recommendation, but this is not a political discussion, merely a rather unsuccessful way of trying to say that straight lines are threatened for the coming season, and are ever the most popular on any long-time wager.

Don't go and make your winter wardrobe, however, according to these preliminary whisperings, because you cannot be sure of yourself before September—on account of the fact, often cited that style depends not on the makers of it but the wearers, and that is you.

Mightn't you have expected it—surely it won't come quite as a shock. Collars that have been hanging down round the waistline, and have extended east and west in a line the circumference of a good sized hoop are becoming a mere shadow of a streak. Two little bands of sablex will replace a collar that used to envelop all of the figure from the hips up.

Maybe the shortage in sables and other furs may have something to do with this, but I do not think so, for the law of extremes and not of supply and demand governs fashions. At any rate I am here but to present facts. Coats and collars can wait for further treatment—what with a furriers' strike and hot weather in America, and beautiful late summer clothes showing in Paris, so why concern ourselves with the dictates of winter yet awhile.

As for specific instances dresses good for late summer and periods much further distant in time, there is a costume consisting of a serge over-dress in that inevitable color, dark blue, with its companion material of black satin constituting a foundation skirt. The waistline drops low over the hips at the sides, and is outlined in embroidery of green and blue. The same lined pattern runs down the front of the bodice, as well as round the neck and the short sleeves. The bodice descends into a tunic, longer on the sides than directly in front, and this tunic is embellished in squares of braid in different shades of yellow, some of them as deep as orange.

A charming evening dress, a little extreme perhaps, but fine in line for "les Americaines," is composed of a long, straight bodice of silver metal cloth, and crossed with wide ribbons of taffeta in soft yellow. Perhaps I should have put high up in my remarks on the subject that the dress ceases to exist at a point just below the under arm, and this line of demarcation is observed by a horizontal rope of tightly stretched pearls, which presumably are responsible for the fact that the dress stays on. The yellow ribbons fall in soft, ruffle-like effects at either side of the arms and over the pearls. If it were not altogether too practical a remark to make of any costume so unpractical, they compose little sleeve ruffles. The skirt of this remarkable dress is made of the same soft yellow taffeta, finely plaited.

The third costume is not for the bedroom—did you think it was?—but for the street. It is a walking suit, just so you don't walk too much or too seriously in it, and it is of blue serge with a green stripe in the material. The entire bodice is like an exaggeratedly wide, tight belt. It, as well as the collar, cuffs and hem, is of blue satin.

We are getting awfully excited over everything Chinese, and Mr. Molyneux has shared the craze to the extent of whipping up a little Oriental conceit into a Paris coat. There is a little difficulty in distinguishing length from breadth in its proportions, but that is not distasteful to the French fancy for the silhouette at present.

It is of white wool, lined with citron yellow satin. The lining is of jade blue and turquoise, and the pipings are of embroidered silk in the same tones. The Chinese figure in the lining is carried out in a large, round design on the front of the coat.

My Funniest Childhood Adventure

Giving Mother a Change.

I heard my mother say that she was tired of our house, tired of the furniture, and O, how she wished for some sort of change!

I was the oldest of four children and always the leader of all our play, so one afternoon when we were left alone I informed my brothers and sister that we'd give mother a surprise by moving the furniture all around. We succeeded fairly well with chairs and tables, but in trying to move a heavy bookcase we pushed it too hard and it fell forward, striking, fortunately, the wall, for if it hadn't my small brother would have been caught beneath it.

However, things were bad enough, for the glass doors in the case were broken and it was so heavy we were unable to move it farther, so that we couldn't remove traces of our crime. How mother did wail when she saw it, and how she did make me wail, too!

F. K.

What was the most amusing thing you did as a youngster? You must have been up to some tricks. We'd like to hear about it. Address Funniest Childhood Adventures, Chicago Tribune. Don't get this contest mixed with Bright Sayings. It's deeds we want to hear about. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published.

Mother Was Unappreciated.

Mother and I visited a friend's house one day. Seeing the curtains on the windows arranged with each panel tied back with a ribbon, I liked the idea very much—thinking it very pretty and effective. Upon arriving at home I immediately got a scissors and, taking the new parlor curtains, I sliced them up the center and tied them back with ribbons, and then called my mother to witness my handiwork. Needless to say, she did not appreciate it.

Get an Introduction.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man of seventeen, and about two years ago I went with a girl of the same age, and whenever I would ask her to go out with me she would say, yes, and when the time came for her to go out with me she would always say, 'Oh, I have to go out with my mother,' which wasn't true, because I would see her with another fellow. Then when I would see her the next time I would ask her why she told me that lie, and she'd reply, 'You look so young and small walking alongside of me.' 'So what I want to ask you is this, I know a nice girl I always see coming and going from work, and I like her very much from what I hear from other people, etc., and the worst of it is I want to ask her to go out with me, and I haven't the heart to ask her to go out with me. So will you please tell me how to go in a nice, polite way, and what words to say to ask her?

"LONESOME."

Am I to understand that you have not been introduced to this second girl? The first thing is to get the introduction and then speak right up like a man and ask the girl if she will not go to the show or wherever you want to take her.

The Store of To-day and To-morrow

THE FAIR

Established 1875 by E. J. Lehmann

State, Adams and Dearborn Streets

WHEN THE LAUNDRY COMES BACK

Lace trimmings torn, linens worn through, frayed edges on clothes you like best—not now and then, but every week. "It makes me heartsick when the laundry comes home," said a woman we know.

And it does not have to be that way. Clothes are saved without the drudgery of washing when you have the 1900 CATARACT ELECTRIC WASHER to do your laundry.

Mere labor saving is not a sufficient recommendation for an electric washer now. A washer that has nothing but the advantage of an electric motor to run it is not enough.

A DEPENDABLE WASHER

It was this feeling that the representatives of THE FAIR had when they went into the markets to search for an electric washer that the store could recommend to its customers. We felt that THE FAIR customers would expect from this store a washing machine that would carry into their homes the same kind of service that the store has given in other articles.

After a thorough study of the washing machine industry, THE FAIR representatives found the 1900 CATARACT WASHER to be the one washer that combined the full labor-saving advantages expected of electric washers with a construction that insured CLOTHES SAVING.

THERE IS NO RUBBING

In the washing process of the 1900 Cataract. There is no inside machinery to pull at clothes or tear them. There is nothing in the 1900 Cataract but the simplest of washing materials—soap and water doing every bit of work possible every second. When the 1900 Cataract comes to the home, the clothes are saved and the clothes are completely washed without drudgery.

Every home needs an electric washer. You owe it to your health to visit our demonstration.

Patterns by Clotilde

9720—Woman's dressing sacque. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2⅝ yards of 36 inch material, with ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

9706—Little boy's suit. Sizes 1, 2 and 4 years. Size 4 requires 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material and ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

9700—Woman's and misses' one piece dress. Sizes 16 years, and 36 and 40 inches bust measure. Size 40 requires 3¼ yards of 40 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

THE dressing sacque, No. 9720, is an attractive design, and just the thing to use for outing or French flannel for cool mornings.

It is made with the peplum cut separately, and fits in enough at the waist to look trim.

If it is made of flannel, the edges could be finished in one of two ways—either bind with ribbon or make bias binding strips of sateen, or else embroider scallops. Of course, the latter way takes more time, but makes a very pretty finish, and if done for pickup work will not seem tedious.

The collar and cuffs could be made of organdie, and entirely finished so as to tack on. The pockets are shirred across the top, and should be faced with the same color as is used to bind or embroider the edges.

This pattern is also suitable for any thin material, and would be pretty made of flowered voile or muslin, or even of taffeta.

If a plain color was chosen there could be some conventional design embroidered in the corners of the peplum, on the pockets, and on the fronts. The taffeta should be some rather delicate shade of a becoming color, and the binding could be in the same or some contrasting color. The collar and cuffs should be of crisp organdie.

No. 9706 would make a smart looking suit for the small youngster, made up in white duck, with collar, pockets, cuffs, and trimmings of a checked gingham. Where the blouse closes at the neck the eyelets should be laced with a small cord matching in color the color in the trimming.

A straight piece of the suit material should be laid, right side to right side, over the blouse opening, and stitched to the blouse around the opening edges, taking a narrow seam, and continuing it around the lower edge. Clip the seam where the curve comes, then turn to the wrong side, baste and stitch down.

Then the eyelets are punched opposite each other, about three-quarters of an inch apart—the length of the opening. Don't use the buttonhole stitch for the eyelets, but a close over and over, and don't pull the stitches too tight. The pockets should be reinforced on the under side at the upper corners, to prevent their tearing the blouse.

Galatea in blue, tan, or brown would be good looking for a suit of this kind, and would be both comfortable and becoming to the small boy.

No. 9700, while as plain and simple as a pattern could be, is nevertheless just the design for a lovely afternoon frock, if made of any of the thin, summery materials, or taffeta, foulard, or satin. There is nothing more fashionable just at present than to have plaitings introduced in some form or other on a gown. And this pretty model with the narrow plaitings edging the front opening of the waist, neck, and sleeves will be smart and becoming.

The skirt and waist are cut in one, and there is a plait laid in the skirt at the waist both front and back. Across the sides the skirt is gathered, and at the bottom measures two yards.

The dress can be worn with a sash or with a narrow belt that is made to go across the back and front, and on the sides it slips to the wrong side, so is invisible there.

The waist part is cut with kimono sleeves, and should be reinforced at the under arm where the waist curves.

Pussy willow taffeta with flowers or some conventional design in colors would make up attractively, and the plaitings could be of georgette or net. The little vest could be of taffeta or georgette with stunning, small buttons set on rather close together.

Crepe de chine, voile, or pongee would any of them make up well, and, of course, other trimming than the plaitings could be substituted; but one could hardly choose anything daintier or more becoming than the plaitings would be sure to be.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

By Loretta King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

FOLLY OF INSUBORDINATION.

OF the business girl's grievous sins, insubordination is the unpardonable one. She need not expect to be forgiven, for to commit it is tantamount to giving up one's job. Although it is not a frequent offense of the business girl, the seriousness of its consequences warrants a word of warning. I am giving it in the form of a letter from a girl whose interest in her fellow workers prompted the recital of the following experience:

"Dear Miss King: Two months ago our office manager was promoted to the position of assistant general manager. His place was taken by a bright young chap who had been up to that time nothing more than a clerk.

"With the exception of one of the girls, everybody in the office liked the new manager and approved of the promotion. Naturally, when he became our boss, his manner toward us changed a little. None of us resented his change of manner but Miss T., who did not like him. She deliberately tried to annoy him whenever it was possible by addressing him with an exaggerated respect and carrying out his instructions and orders literally even though they were not intended to be taken that way.

"Miss T. had been with the firm for a number of years and had stood high in the esteem of our old manager, and so, I suppose, she felt perfectly secure in her job in spite of her antagonism to the new manager.

"Mr. M. at first tried to overlook her unfriendly attitude toward him by pretending not to notice it, but it finally became too pointedly evident for him to ignore. He was a good man for the job. On her failure to fall into line peaceably with the rest of us, after giving her every opportunity to do so, he changed his tactics and severely called her to account.

"This made her furious, and she became more intolerable than ever. He was her match, however, and made things as unpleasant for her as she tried to make them for him.

"He didn't discharge her because of her many years of service with the firm, but he arranged with the manager of another department to have her transferred.

"When Miss T. learned that she was to be changed to another department she made the fatal mistake of taking the matter up with our old manager, whom she thought she could count on as her friend. She registered a number of complaints against Mr. M. and flatly refused to be transferred.

"After a short conference with the assistant general manager Mr. M. discharged Miss T. She refused to take his dismissal and again went to headquarters to have the matter settled. There, much to her dismay, she was told that Mr. M.'s decision was irrevocable, and since she had deliberately ignored his authority she must go.

"It was a terrible blow to her and when the other girls and I saw how badly she felt we were sorry for her. But our sympathy and offers of help were valueless. She had to go.

"This experience has made me realize—and I hope I can make others realize it, too—how futile a thing insubordination is. One gains nothing and usually loses a great deal by it. Unless she is prepared to give up her job it is extremely unwise for the business girl to ignore the authority of her immediate superior. S. E. L."

Pork and Beans Dyer's

Packed in Vincennes Indiana by Dyer Packing Company

They Have an Intense Flavor

Much of the goodness of foods is carried off in the steam of cooking.

But Dyer's Pork and Beans are prepared without permitting any of the flavor to evaporate.

By sealing the beans in the can and cooking them that way, the essence of the flavor is not lost. It can't escape. It's cooked into the food—giving a more intense natural flavor.

We suggest you try Dyer's Pork and Beans with the sealed-in flavor. Your grocer sells them.

FIRST—To release the sealed-in flavor, place unopened can in boiling water for ten minutes. The heat releases and intensifies the flavor.

NEXT—Open in the usual way, placing cloth around hot can to protect hand and strengthen grip.

LAST—Serve piping hot and you'll notice their wonderful sealed-in flavor and exceptional redness.

CHICAGO'S CHALLENGE TO PARIS: THE FASHION SHOW

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE first fashion show I saw this year was one held in Paris in an old French garden belonging to the house of one of the most fashionable of Paris modistes. A cold moon looked in over the slim tops of tall poplars, and under our table a colder pail of chopped ice glittered resentfully as slowly but surely the bottles of real champagne it held were taken from it. Champagne made that show.

It was rather a social affair; one went by invitation. The air was sharpened with quick, abrupt conversation—the talk perioded by the popping of corks. There was dancing, too, on a raised platform—dancing that as the evening wore on became restricted to the solemn whirling of clinched couples in tiny spaces of floor conceded grudgingly to them by the increasing, relieving throng.

But the charm of the show was in the wine; that absent I doubt whether the white moon would not have lit a deserted garden with its light. The models were lost among the guests, if any were present at all, and were not thrown into prominence for our pleasure.

The last fashion show I have seen is that at the Marigold Gardens, and it is decidedly different. Champagne is here converted to a popless punch, but the models make up for it. It really is a fashion show—even lemonade and watermelon could not quench our interest in the costumes. It also, comparing it for a moment with the French affair, had a moon which shone down over the tops of trees and a band that played gayly for intermittent dancing on the smooth raised floor. But the clothes were the thing.

As far as one may judge, this season's costumes will not differ radically from what the late spring has taught us is la mode. Skirts are scant and short, though not as short as those worn with on Paris boulevards. Simpler lines and less trimming seem to be the word. There are few buttons and less braid. Fur, however, is featured. Great shawl collars of fur are found on the coats, as well as deep cuffs and deep bands about the bottom. The dresses for street wear the trimming may be of beads or, as in the case of one attractive costume of nigger brown duvetyn or hand embroidery in contrasting colors.

I was rather surprised to see that the sleeves of the cloth dresses are of any length. Some are cut off just a bit below the shoulder, others are below length, others three-quarters, and a few full length. This surprised me the more inasmuch as I had heard on good authority that the fall models were coming in with the long sleeve. In Paris, it is true, they were showing summer frocks with the tiny sleeve, or, in dancing dresses, no sleeve at all, but the street dresses, as I remember, possessed the full length sleeve.

One distinctive feature that caught my eye in the Marigold show was the full, bloused back of many of the coats. This was not true of the suit coats as it was of the full length dress coats. One particularly distinguished costume showed a dark blue duvetyn coat trimmed with a standing collar of krimmer fur, with a cape that fell back from the shoulders to the bottom of the skirt in back. The first was straight with short bands of the fur set one under the other and ending in a large button. There are three of the bands.

The cape collars are used in the all fur coats, but high, standing collars are in vogue in the suits and coats.

A distinctive costume was one of dark blue serge, trimmed with beads. It was wired at the waist with a fringe of jet beads falling from the flare, and the elbow sleeves each bore another black fringe. There was an overskirt of the cloth, but the lines were simple. The small collar was square and edged with four rows of beads; buttons emphasized the severity of the blouse.

With this might be worn a jaunty tailored hat of dark blue duvetyn that was seen. The brim rolled softly. An ostrich feather of the new shade of burnt orange, known for some unintelligible reason by the horribly inadequate term "tomato," circled the crown in a graceful sweep, and cross stitching in the same shade of wool on the crown was the complement to the feather.

The plaited skirt was not in as great evidence as its popularity across the sea would seem to demand. There were a few accordion plaited suit skirts and sport skirts. For the most part this plaiting seemed reserved for the lingerie. There is various shades of green and pink and blue and soft silken plaits fell in company with many bows of delicate ribbon and insertions of narrow lace.

The evening gowns showed nothing particularly thrilling, nothing conducive to Theda Bara quivers of suspense. A cloth of gold gown draped in front and furnished behind with a huge flat bow and a train was striking for the matron of 30. Color was supplied in this by the use of orchid and green tulle. The same combination of colors was used in a charming dancing frock for the debutante and the slightly older girl.

But, to go back to the premise with which we started, here the models were the thing, and in the sister show over there champagne was the thing. It seems bitter with that contrast facing us to ask whether this year or next Chicago or Paris will be apt to set the world's fashion in fashions. I think we will still go to France.

Frederick was not popular with the other boys, as he was of a quarrelsome disposition, and Tony shunned him whenever possible. When asked about it he replied, "Well, he's always looking for trouble, and if I'm not, I've just got to stay where he ain't, that's all."

Frankie burst in, quite out of breath, to tell us of the "booful white kitty" his papa had bought for him. He has no conception of time, ages, sex, relationship, etc. So when we asked him what kind of a kitty it was, he said, "O, it's half male and half Angora!" He heard his papa say that it was a male cat and was partly Angora!

Eugene was leaving for New York alone. His brother wrote out for him a telegram announcing his safe arrival, which he charged the youngster to send as soon as he reached his destination.

No telegram came. After burning up the wires to assure himself of the youngster's safety the older brother awaited with interest Eugene's first letter.

It said, "I arrived safe so I did not think it necessary to send the telegram."

"Perfection and Economy Combined in Lura Vanity"

THIS charming and very necessary little purse accessory sells for only 50 cents. The box is exceptionally dainty and attractive, convenient in size, durable and complete. But, best of all, the powder and rouge are of the better sort, rarely found in compact form.

LURA Waterproof Rouge is so concentrated and lasting you really need only a touch once or twice a day. It is specially blended to be used with LURA Rose Oil Powder, which is also contained in the Vanity. There is no waste to powder and rouge in compact form. This means another saving.

A New Powder Compact and Fresh Puff for 25c

You will use more of the Powder than rouge, of course, so you will want to renew the powder compact. Just push up on the mirror and the powder case slips out. Insert a new compact and your Vanity is as useful as the day you bought it!

See the Combination Vanity at drug and department stores. If you cannot find it, write to us, sending 50c in stamps or money order.

$25.00 for a Slogan!

Big Cash Prize Given for a Few Words on the Combination Vanity

Mrs. J. A. Curtin, of 236 E. De Wald St., Fort Wayne, Ind., won a cash prize of $25.00 for writing the headline at the top of this advertisement

Now we want a slogan for the Combination Vanity, and this week we'll give another $25.00 Cash Prize to the person submitting the best slogan. The Vanity has seven big points of superiority. You can write your slogan to cover all seven points, or you can pick out some one point and write about that.

Keep These Seven Points in Mind

|---|---|
| Quality | Daintiness |
| Convenience | Economy |
| Box Construction | Compactness |

LURA Rose Oil Powder and Waterproof Rouge

Your slogan must not be over 15 words long. This will be much easier to write than a headline because it can be more general—you are not held down to one of the seven points. Write your slogan today and get the $25.00 prize. The winner will be announced in our advertisement in this paper two weeks from today. Duplicate prizes will be awarded to those who submit the same winning slogan. You do not have to purchase a Combination Vanity to enter the contest.

Send your slogan at once to Advertising Dept., Ideal Laboratories Company, 533 South Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Slogans must be received before noon of Aug. 10th.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

CANNING THIS YEAR.

ON July 7 the weekly published by the United States department of agriculture had an article with these headings: "Lack of sugar should cause no curtailment in canning. It may be necessary to can all or part of fruits without sugar. By time canned fruits are used next winter sugar will be more plentiful, it is expected. Much sugar hoarded."

This publication has had in almost every number for some weeks some item or article urging that home gardeners, and every housewife that is able, should fill the family supply of cans. One of the frequent arguments has been that the commercial canners are having to pay such high prices for vegetables and fruits that canned goods next winter will be higher in price than ever in the world before. Those who have raised these fruits and vegetables have found it so difficult to get labor, and have had to work so hard themselves, that they must sell at high prices.

Midsummer is not the only canning season. According to our newest canning schedule, there should be four canning seasons. In early spring the greens and rhubarb are put up. In midsummer there is a great wealth of berries and fruits. At harvest time there is even a greater abundance of food to be conserved, and winter is not without its products. By this system it is possible to use a container four times over in a year. The slogan of the new canning is: a can of fruit and a can of vegetables for every family on every day in the year. This means a constant emptying and refilling of cans

Cold Pack Method.

I was an onlooker at the first demonstration of the one period cold pack canning in this vicinity. I have practiced this method each year myself, have had many letters about canning failures. I have watched many people demonstrating it, and have been the supreme judge of products put up by the one period cold pack method which got national attention. From all this experience I believe the following is my most important conclusion:

Follow the directions of the best teachers and writers on this subject. Even in some of our best publications there have been utterly unreliable articles on the subject of cold pack canning, articles written by professional writers who never canned a can of tomatoes or hulled a strawberry.

Many Recipes Misleading.

These writers usually get their material from various sources and, by the time they have made the combination, the directions are such a mixture as to be worthless and even wickedly misleading. The people who write from an earnest experience in canning, list only a few absolutely essential utensils. One noted writer, taking up this subject so foreign to her experience, listed three times as many utensils as needed, and nearly at the end of the list was "a fly trap."

While I would like to commend all recipes prepared to help sell a product or utensil, I must say that as a general thing the literature that is given out with the innumerable accessories of the cold pack canning business would better be neglected, or at least checked up with the best advice. It mixes methods in many cases to the disaster point. This is because those who pass on such literature know all about making what they have to sell, but know little or nothing about the actual work of canning.

The Best Directions.

What are the best directions and why? Farmer's bulletin 839, put out by the United States department of agriculture, embodies these directions. That has not been perfect in every particular but it has been much nearer perfect than almost anything else obtainable, and I believe it is under revision now. Why best? Because Mr. O. M. Benson, the author, has given ten uninterrupted years of enthusiasm to developing and teaching this one subject.

He had hundreds of thousands of students who can demonstrate the subject almost, yet not quite as well as he, but perhaps there are not a dozen of them who could present the subject as completely as he in writing. He has preached and practiced and promoted the subject incessantly in all these years, with laboratory workers behind him to test, and assistants to try out in practical ways what the laboratories have pointed out.

The greatest value of all this work is that the instructions for this work have been standardized and made uniform for all products. If you know how to can one vegetable or fruit by the one period cold pack method, you practically know how to can them all. Mr. Benson found, when he undertook this work, a vast mass of unorganized and seemingly unrelated recipes based on nothing so scientific as a principle. He investigated and tested, visited the commercial factories, turned his home into a laboratory, canned everything that anybody ever saw in a can, and then set out to teach, over a large territory, what he had learned, and he kept up this teaching season after season.

O. H. Benson Articles.

If you want to realize a little about what Mr. Benson has done you may read two articles by him in the May and June numbers of the Pictorial Review. The first is on "The March of Home Canning." The second is on "Sensible Home Canning: Wise Planning Means Greater Food Thrift." That journal had Mr. Benson prepare a sheet containing simple directions for home canning by the one period cold pack method, with special information on making sugar sirups and canning without sugar. The announcement of it ends thus: "Send a stamped addressed envelope for this to Home Canning, Pictorial Review, 222 West Thirty-ninth street, New York City."

The best way to learn cold pack canning is by imitation. The hundreds of thousands of girls in clubs all over the land have learned in that way. Mr. Benson's official work was the "boys' and girls' extension work of the northern and western states." He directed food production and food conservation work among these youngsters for several years before we entered the war. He was not officially a demonstrator of a new canning method, but did this as the most effective part of production and conserving, or extending the life and service of the garden."

Cold Pack Method in Brief.

The next best way to learn cold pack canning is by pictures. These show first the fresh, ripe, sound material in the hands of the worker. The second picture shows how these are washed free from every particle of dirt. Next it shows how to tie them up in cheese cloth or how to tie them in a wire basket for the blanching and cold dip. They are to be dipped in violently boiling water and left there according to a time table which gives the time for each separate product. A clock is indispensable in canning as it should be in all cookery.

After the hot dip the cold dip is as essential, and the water should be genuinely cold. From that minute work rapidly. There are scientific as well as practical reasons why the product should not stand around. Mr. Benson loves to write of the team work of families in this business, how it has united them, and given them a vivid interest. He tells of one case of husband and wife, two sons, and a daughter, who set apart certain hours for this work. In one evening they canned thirty-nine quarts of tomatoes in one hour and forty-five minutes. The wife's report of the value of this work in promoting family appreciation and companionship is lovely.

It is in the preparing of the material and in the packing that team work counts so much. Canning parties are parties of the best sort. There are always some people gifted with a perfect genius for packing about three times as much into a can as another. This economizes on cans and on fire for processing. And here is where we need the clock again. There is a definite time for cooking each article.

By the way, a tenth more of time is added to the regularly processing time when fruits are put up in water rather than in sirups. As you know, the processing time for vegetables which nearly all have boiling water added after packed and before processed, is longer than for fruits.

Pictures show equipment and how to use it. All the details here should be mastered if success is hoped for. Every can must be inspected and tested and above all things, sterilized, and then kept sterile.

Canning Fruits Without Sugar.

See that all equipment is ready before starting. Test jars and rubbers. Select only fresh, firm, sound products. Prepare by cleaning, sorting, stemming, seeding, paring and coring. Scald or blanch per time table for each individual sort. Dip quickly into cold water. See fruit lists in reference to treatment each should receive. Some are not blanched. Pack in hot, clean containers. Pour boiling hot water over. Wipe around jar carefully with sterile cloth. Never use a dish cloth even of the cleanest sort for this work. Place scalded rubber and cap in position and follow directions about partial sealing for the sterilizing or processing bath. Sterile according to time table—different times for different fruits—adding 10 per cent to the time if that given is for a fruit in sirup. Remove jars from canner and seal completely.

Rothschilds' Greatest August Furniture Sale Bursts Into Its Third Sensational Week!!!

Just hit its pace—that's how we find Rothschilds' and Chicago's greatest furniture sale at the beginning of its third week of astounding success! Like any other event of immense size, it gains speed as it goes, and now is sweeping all before it. Money saved is money made, and this is the sale for savings!

Rapid-fire selling naturally follows our wholesale chopping of furniture quotations. Householders who know the market are buying their next winter's furniture now at this great sale, not only because of our startling reductions on today's prices but because today's prices may be low prices compared with those of next fall and winter. We do not sell subject to cancelation or exchange; therefore you always get new goods.

Furniture factories closing—building booms over the nation—lumber becoming scarce—labor troubles—all these things tend to boom the price, decrease production, and impair quality. Now is the time the wise man buys!

Special suites and single pieces must be delivered at once or sent to some warehouse for you. We still have a little room, however, for beginners who buy large outfits for delivery by October 1, but cannot be held beyond October 1.

Look at these values! Compare them with any others you choose! Come—see the furniture—examine it carefully—we know that if you need furniture ours will sell itself. Read the offers in this advertisement—and set your alarm clock and get here early Monday morning.

One-fourth cash and easy payments. Furniture department, 6th floor. Store opens 8:30

Questions on sewing will be answered if a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Address Clotilde, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

LINGERIE MADE AT HOME.

MAKING lingerie is attractive work for most women, and by so doing it should be possible to buy fine materials and trimmings. The lingerie shown in the shops is certainly attractive, and makes one want to buy generously, but many cannot afford the prices asked, and so the woman of fastidious taste who hasn't a long purse will make the dainty garments herself.

It is a good idea to be familiar with the different lengths required for the different undergarments, for there are always remnants of white goods, some of them beautiful fine batistes and linens, as well as fine cambrics. A distinct saving can often be made by buying these remnants if one is familiar with the lengths required so there will be no waste in cutting.

The long seams of garments may be stitched on the machine, but the felling down of these seams should be done by hand. Hems look best when done by hand, and, of course, all lace is set in the same way. Lace edgings should not be fulled on, but held easily in the hand and overhanded on, always holding the edge next to you. This eases it sufficiently.

Nearly all insertion used in lingerie comes with a thread in each edge that can be pulled up. In this way the lace can be made to take any desired line. In basting the insertion on curved lines, always baste first on the outer edge of the curve, then the opposite edge of the lace can be pulled up to fit.

The lace should be basted down on both edges, then hemmed to the material. After this the material is cut away on the wrong side, leaving a one-half inch margin. These edges can be finished in rolled hems, or the edge turned sharply back and a fine overhanding stitch used through both the folded edge of the cloth and the edge of the insertion. The stitches must not be drawn too tight, but must be small and taken close together, and when the work is smoothed out it is almost impossible to see how it was set in.

Sometimes where insertion is set in in straight lines, an added decoration can be made by drawing curved lines or lover's knots, etc., and outlining these lines in the finest possible single feather stitch. French knots also are used.

Plain or dotted footing is effective when sewed to the material and used to draw ribbon through.

When ruffles of any kind are to be used, the edge should be rolled and the ruffle whipped on by hand. If this work is not easy to do, practice on a separate piece of cloth. Start rolling at the right hand end of the material, and roll the cloth just enough to cover the edge well. Roll about one inch at a time, taking the stitches on a slight slant, and over and over, not catching in the roll at any time. Pull the gathers up about every inch or an inch and a half. Then they can be let out and the fullness evenly adjusted after the length has been finished.

Crêpe de chine makes adorable lingerie, and is delightful to work on. It wears well, but is rather expensive for many purses. Still one set would not cost a great deal if made at home. It is the fineness of the materials and the beauty of workmanship that count on these garments, rather than any elaboration of decoration. Laid embroidery, well placed and designed, is as attractive a way of trimming as one could wish, and delightful to do as well.

VOGUE OF PAINTED FURNITURE.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In the commercial "home of novelties," a New York house, supposed to deal exclusively in innovations, very little, at first glance, seems entirely new, but on close inspection it is palpable at least that old ideas are handled in a new way.

Last year, I remember, this house had a great deal of painted furniture, and seeing but little of it among the stock, I inquired if painted furniture had quite gone out of fashion—whereupon I was lead into the workroom, and, behold—the most lovely things were being painted,—but all painted to order. Fabrics and furniture were selected at the same time, and the furniture painted to correspond with the color scheme of the drapery stuff. Parts of the design in the figured draperies were copied on the furniture.

A very exquisite printed linen showed ovals, well filled in with bouquets of flowers, and on the ground between the ovals were festoons of fruit. The ground was old ivory. A scrolling of blue ribbon ran through the pattern, so the furniture was painted old ivory, edged with faint blue, and the festoons of fruit were repeated on the fronts of drawers and the little chiffonier doors, and blue taffeta was introduced into the scheme by way of cushions and bed dressing. It was all planned to be used with a taupe floor covering.

Painting on natural wood, however, is this year's application of new style to an old mode. Nothing could be lovelier than natural walnut as a background for floral painting. The colors, instead of being brilliant, as they were when used on the enameled grounds, are very subdued, and the paintings as finely finished as the hand of the best artist can make them.

A bedroom set, painted Copenhagen blue, has chairs and settee cushioned and upholstered in the same shade of blue. Figured wallpaper and a patterned carpet are to be used in the room and Copenhagen blue silk curtains.

A saffron colored wicker set has cushions of brilliant Roman striped rep. On a little black lacquered table to go with the set is one of those adorable Japanese amber trees. It is the piece de resistance of this room. On the floor is a dark blue art rug, with a border in jade green worsted loosely embroidered on it.

Shown in the illustration is a group of gifts for the bride. The four leaf clover cushion is French gray kid, piped with apple green braid and trimmed with green worsted tassels. Pancake pillows are made of the same kid in a variety of colors piped with contrasting braid.

The nest of tables is in green and gold lacquer. The lamp, one of this year's table lamps, has a green shade, trimmed with moss and tassels. It may be washed by sousing in sudsy water.

The little desk is a conventionalized spinet in brown mahogany with green paint rubbed in at the turnings and a little floral ornament of roses and green leaves.

Very attractive is the telephone cabinet of brown mahogany with table and bench stool to match.

Among the minor novelties are breakfast and lunch sets in chintz china. The name is descriptive enough. The china is figured all over in chintz pattern. Colored luster ware, too, is all the rage. Hardly a bedroom is planned without a tiny breakfast table being part of its equipment. Tea tables matching the furniture in the room are the best liked, and the breakfast dishes are designed to present a cheery morning color note.

In almost every shop and studio of any importance a few accessories repeat themselves. For instance, everywhere there were examples of old fashiond cross-stitch embroidery, technically known as gros-point and petit-point, which may be a hint to those who love needlework. Fire screens are made of it, and delightful little stools and sofa pillows, and chairs are completely upholstered in it. Everywhere, too, are colonial rugs, tufted rugs, hooked rugs, and woven and braided ones.

New to us is the very fashionable Spanish rug, the technique of which is exactly similar to our American hooked rug, but the colors and patterns differ. They are what might be called cubistic, and would be almost too startling in effect were they not held down by the introduction of much black in the design.

One of the most unique framed decorations I have ever seen is a pair of modern Japanese paintings done in distemper in bright colors. The subjects are fish and birds, and seaweed and flowers, and they are done on a background that is part paint and part cracked gold leaf. These are not called pictures, but wall decorations, and they are framed in flat strips of natural pale tinted teakwood.

Floral paintings are having full fling. Many of the best are in shaped frames that are subtly polychromed to harmonize with the room schemes.

Glass curtains, that is, thin curtains set close against the window, are used more in the east than in the west. A fabric they like for this use resembles natural tinted crash, but is thin as tarleton. The Home of Novelties takes such a curtain and embroiders it with a border done in the ubiquitous cross stitch in colored worsted. This type of curtain is particularly well adapted to an Italian room, where the ceilings are beamed, and deep, richly colored damask inside draperies are hung.

What do you think of this? A society woman in New York has just ordered a supply of black crepe de chine sheets! Something anomalous about that—something—how shall we say it?—virtuous vampish!

Mandel Brothers' August sale of furs de luxe

—including regal French importations. "Quality" the dominant note

On "quality" is based all the prestige—all the success that has been accorded our fur shop in ever larger measure during thirty-six years. In this, the 37th August fur sale, quality dominates all other attractions for patrons who have learned that, in Mandel furs, it is unvaryingly the principal element of "value." In August fur prices are, of course, lower than they will be in the fall.

Most of the furs were purchased four, five and six months ago, from the broader selections of superior pelts then available. Master furriers then put forth their best, because unhurried, efforts in the skillful matching and making up of the furs in 1920-21's authentic designs—and these are the "quality" coats here offered.

Hudson seal coats

—plain dyed muskrat with self collar and cuffs; each coat with a belt to match.

30-inch, $425 and $515 40-inch, $600 and $700
36-inch, $500 and $600 45-inch, $700 and $750

Unusual values at the above August sale prices.

Hudson-opossum

Dyed muskrat coats with self belt, and collar and cuffs of Australian opossum.

30-inch length, $535. 40-inch length, $725.
36-inch length, $650. 45-inch length, $800.

The model illustrated in the center is in 30-inch length. Fifth floor.

Hudson-squirrel

Dyed muskrat coats with self belt and natural Siberian squirrel collar and cuffs.

30-inch length, $525. 40-inch length, $700.
36-inch length, $625. 45-inch length, $825.

The coat sketched is 36 inches long, and typifies the chic of this fur combination.

Hudson-beaver

Dyed muskrat coats with self belt, and Hudson Bay beaver collar and cuffs.

30-inch, $475 and $550 40-inch, $625 and $750
36-inch, $575 and $675 45-inch, $750 and $825

The swagger model pictured on the right is in 45-inch length. Fifth floor.

Patrons without charge account

by making a cash deposit, may reserve the furs they wish for delivery as late as November first. Meantime we will store their fur selections free of charge.

In his search for the elite of French fur fashions, our personal representative visited the establishments of Paris' world-famed designers: Drecoll, Callot Soeurs, Madam Jenny, Madeleine and Madeleine, Grunwaldt, Mauner Meyer, Paquin, Doucet, Martial Armand, Cheruit, Premet, Fournier Max, Redfern. The Parisian fur creations selected by our envoy, include:

"Badrigal," in hudson seal, by Madame Agnes and Madame Havet.
"Cresus," in mole, by Brandt. "Bysance," in mole, by Beer.
"Pactole," in mole, by Worth. "Taupline," in mole, by Georgette.
"Desir" and "Diabolo," in mole, by Felix Yungman.
"Danube," in mole and skunk, by Felix Yungman.

Skunk trim'd coats

Dyed muskrat coats with skunk collar and cuffs, and self belt. Fifth floor.

30-inch, $475 and $550 40-inch, $625 and $750
36-inch, $575 and $675 45-inch, $750 and $825

The 45-inch model is pictured on the left.

Natural nutria

coats in choicest quality; a full flowing model, with belt—unusually handsome.

30-inch length, $375 40-inch length, $[illegible]
36-inch length, $475 45-inch length, $[illegible]

Rare beauty in these nutria coats.

Siberian squirrel

coats in natural color and in the newest style; each coat fitted with a belt, and interestingly priced for August selling.

30-inch length, $550 40-inch length, $750
36-inch length, $675 45-inch length, $825

Siberian squirrel is distinctly vogue.

Pony and beaver

Black dyed coats of finest quality Russian ponyskin; 36-inch, with markings like broadtail; collar and cuffs of beaver.

All-black Russian pony coats, with skunk collar and cuffs, $300.

Unusually smart and highly serviceable.

Our magnificent window exhibit

—the entire State street frontage—is a vision of superlative beauty. Every fur is of exquisite mink, and between the mannequins are draped the most gorgeous and luxurious of imported brocaded silk linings.

Last season's heavy demands decided us to enlarge both fur salesroom and fur factory—and to lay in a greater stock of furs than in any preceding year, against an anticipated greater demand.

New 40-inch all-silk crepe de chine

'way below the current market

Superior crepe de chine, purchased during the recent break in the silk market, is offered at a figure far lower than that justified by the present high cost of raw silk. Second floor.

White, flesh, street and evening shades 1.85 Plenty of navy and black in lot

Soft, lustrous, serviceable crepe de chine—in white and flesh for underthings; pastel tints for afternoon frocks; subdued shades for street apparel; navy and black, for the new plaited skirts. Early selection is advised—while the color range is complete.

Foresighted women will at once recognise the extraordinary value in this high quality crepe de chine which, at 1.85, is lower priced than elsewhere in Chicago.

2,000 new georgette crepe blouses

—at mid-summer's smallest quotation

Disposing of the surplus stocks and discontinued lines of four prominent makers.

Women's sizes misses' sizes, 3.95

Blouses trimmed with soutache or with rat-tail braid; blouses with lace; blouses with tucks. Basque, slipon and vestee styles—four as sketched. White, flesh and bisque blouses in foulard or printed patterns. Women's sizes, 34 to 36. Misses' sizes, 16, 18, 20 years.

Third floor.

Women's long glace kid gloves

—12-button—imported—at 5.95

They are fashioned of the finer, softer skins and, at 5.95, are much lower priced than their quality merits. Three clasps at wrist.

Vogue with short-sleeved frocks

These gloves will be eagerly and liberally selected by women and misses who take pride in conforming with fashion's edicts. White only, at 5.95. First floor.

"Chiffon" silk hosiery at 2.85

Another purchase of 1,000 pairs of all-silk stockings, in the popular "chiffon" weight, with double reinforced heels, toes, soles. First floor.

Black, Havana brown, taupe gray and Russian calf included.

The delightful sheen and sheerness of this hosiery has won them instant favor.

Girls' fur coats—August sale

Fall's authentic fashions charmingly exemplified by this display of the newest fur coats for the younger set. The coats' superior quality and styling are emphasized in the coat sketched, ### of lock squirrel

—and set off with belt, collar and cuffs of mole beaver; in 10-year size, at $195.

Other favored fur coats

The Theaters

The "Buddies" of Tuesday night's play at the Woods are "a group of American soldiers billeted in Brittany" while awaiting a transport for home. Among these is Ralph Morgan, who is in love with Miss Peggy Wood as Julie, a quaint French maiden), but who is too shy to announce his passion. Donald Brian, a private "big and generous of heart," tries to help the lovers to an understanding and gets into trouble, thereby, with his fiancée, a Brooklyn aristocrat. George Y. Hobart is the author.

Miss Nancy Gibbs, esteemed as the possessor of the most glowing smile on the English stage, is to be the prima donna in next season's tours of "Monsieur Beaucaire." She is now in "Jig Saw" at the London Hippodrome.

"Civilian Clothes" will be played in London by the company which acted it in Chicago for a time—William Courtenay, Frances Underwood, etc.

Ed Wynn's "Carnival," an entertainment of the New York revue type, will appear at the Illinois Aug. 15. It is possible that "The Sweetheart Shop," which does not begin its New York engagement until Labor day, will be transferred to another Chicago theater for the fortnight intervening.

Richard Carle will return to the big towns next season in "Oui, Madame," by Victor Herbert. The play was tried last year with Miss Georgia O'Ramey in a leading rôle, but the public in outlying cities of the east was averse to it.

When Eddie Cantor grew fretful last year because he was only a performer in and not the star of the Follies, Mr. Ziegfeld bade him to wait. Mr. Cantor's patience now becomes fruitful in the announcement that he will lead his own show into Chicago early in September, leaving the Follies a month or two before that time.

"Daddalums" affronts the English as the title of Louis K. Anspacker's successful comedy, and the management has offered a prize for a title less inane. The piece was called "Our Children" when, five or six years ago, Henry Kolker first produced it at the Princess.

In Indianapolis Stuart Walker is said to be having success with "Tarnished Henry," a dramatization of some of Samuel Merwin's stories about Henry Calverley III.

The next time the musical version of William Collier's "Caught in the Rain" is sent forth it will be known as "Pitter Patter," and William Kent, a forceful fun-maker, will be its chief performer.

Al Jolson, seeking investment for an income whose size, it is said, makes mere figures ridiculous, finds it in a musical production. Edward Knoblock's "My Lady's Dress." It is to be adapted by Harold Atteridge, author in chief for the New York Winter Garden. In its original form it was played at the Blackstone by Miss Mary Roland and Leon Quatermaine.

"Tomorrow's Price" was renamed twice last week. A. H. Woods announced it as "The Exposé" on Tuesday and on Thursday he changed it to "Crooked Gamblers." The piece, which had a brief run here, is about Wall street, and it was rewritten for its New York debut. Mr. Woods and William A. Brady, who has a Wall street thing by Owen Davis, called "Opportunity," have been racing to see which would reach New York first. Mr. Brady won, apparently.

Winthrop Ames will return to the drama next season by presenting a play of East Indian adventure by William Archer, the London dramatic critic.

When Frank Bacon's "Lightnin'" reaches Cohan's Grand before long, it may be without the acting of the author. Mr. Bacon is taking a vacation and his rôle in New York is played by Milton Nobles, a veteran who retired from the theater fourteen years ago. After Mr. Macon's return to New York, Mr. Nobles will be sent to the other cities. He was a soldier in the civil war, serving with a Wisconsin regiment.

"Jack" McKenzie, who has been a familiar and a pleasing figure hereabouts, will become an actor in New York next month, appearing for the first time on any stage in "The Checkerboard," a new play by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hatton.

In order to give Mrs. Mantell a further outlet for her talents, Robert Mantell will add "As You Like It" to his next season's repertory.

Paul Dickey and C. W. Goddard, authors of "TheMisleading Lady" and "The Ghost Breakers," are rehearsing a new comedy, "The Broken Wing," in Washington. It is about an American aviator and his descent into Mexico.

De Wolf Hopper and Francis Wilson will be partners next season in revivals of their most famous successes. "Wang" and "Erminie." Mr. Hopper will support Mr. Wilson in "Erminie" and Mr. Wilson will serve Mr. Hopper similarly in "Wang." George C. Tyler will engineer the exhibitions.

When Arthur Byron and Miss Martha Hedman appear on Tuesday night at Powers' in "Transplanting Jean," by Mme. de Flers and Caillavet, they will relate the following fable:

The Comte de Larzac is a man of 45, with the heart of a boy of 20, a professed hedonist, who has sailed gayly over the sea of experience, skimmed the waves of pleasure, and never foundered in the depths of satiety. There is a magnificence about this middle aged Don Juan, which makes him irresistible. A true child of the Paris boulevards, a virtuoso in the fine art of love-making, he wakes one morning to the realization that he has exhausted most of the pleasurable sensations that life has to offer.

He thereupon determines to settle down and cultivate the simple emotions. The prospect of seeing his natural son, whom he has never met offers his jaded palate the prospect of a new sensation. The youth has been brought up in the country, in the foothills of the Pyrenees, and is a healthy, blunt, matter of fact lad, an athlete, who exhales all out of doors—the complete antithesis of his father.

The interview between the two—the unimaginative young rustic and the debonair rake, divided between his astonishment at what he has become a father to, and a sentimental notion of what his feelings should be toward his offspring—precipitates a disclosure. The son is engaged to be married to an exotic flower, Naima Duval, whose beauty and vivacity have attracted the stolid Jean, and who in turn is attracted to him by the "romance" of his parentage. But when the Comte meets the young woman, he finds her so attractive and makes himself so charming to her that the son retires from the field and the irrepressible parent marries her himself.

Prominent in the support of Mr. Byron and Miss Hedman will be Richard Barbee, Forrest Robinson, George Graham, Kathryn Keys, Winifred Anglin, Hallam Thompson, Carol Rose, Evelyn Chard, Olga Lee, Albert Marsh, George Caston, and Jess Sidney.

'Girl in Spotlight' Stellar Roles Go to Obscure Pair

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Discovering genius has been a pleasant mania with George W. Lederer ever since the day he picked Edna May out of the chorus of "The Belle of New York" and intrusted to her piping soprano voice the words and music of "Follow Me."

In the newest musical comedy to be produced by him, called "The Girl in the Spotlight," he has two young persons previously unknown to theatrical fame, for whom he predicts brilliant futures and to whom he attracts public attention. One is Mary Milburn, a personable young woman who held a minor position in Mr. Lederer's "Angel Face" company a year ago.

Miss Mary hasn't been long on the stage, but before she gave up her job as a stenographer to try for a position in the chorus she had taken the precaution to spend a part of her weekly wage for singing lessons. Her teacher told her she might, if she kept at it long enough and worked hard enough, one day sing in grand opera, which is enough to indicate that Mary has something better than the average applicant's voice.

Hearing the voice Mr. Lederer brought her from the back row of one chorus to the front row of another, from where she jumped lightly to a minor speaking part in a third attraction. With this experience to her credit she was picked for the leading role in "The Girl in the Spotlight," and

ONCE IN AWHILE a theatrical production has charm enough or novelty enough or humor enough without an adverse criticism. In the case of the Selwyns' merry musical play, "BUDDIES," in which DONALD BRIAN, PEGGY WOOD and RALPH MORGAN are the stellar triumvirate, it would seem to be a combination of these three amiable ingredients of entertainment that has brought George V. Hobart the must fulsome praise of his brilliant career as a successful playwright, and established B. C. Hilliam as a composer to be henceforth reckoned with. "BUDDIES" opens at the WOODS, CHICAGO'S UTMOST THEATER, TOMORROW (MONDAY) NIGHT. Woods Civilized prices, 50c to $2.50; Wed. and Sat. Mats., 50c to $1.50.

"THE DARK LANTERN" is pretty bad.

It seems a great pity that everything in a picture should be sacrificed in order that the star of that picture may, to use a none too delicate expression, "hog" all the limelight. Especially is it a pity when that star fails to register one natural moment, pose, or expression, and resorts to makeup so applied as to give the impression that she smells something bad. All this is true of Alice Brady in her latest venture.

Something or other has gotten into the feminine stars these days. Miss Brady is not the only woman who is spoiling herself for her optiences. Many others, in a lesser degree, have dropped the naturalness that made them so charming. I suppose it is all because they are trying so desperately hard to do better work. Heaven help us unless they get wise to themselves! Or else heaven send us a batch of newcomers who have not been spoiled by praise.

So far as I can see there isn't any excuse for a picture like "The Dark Lantern." It has a most uninteresting story and there are no notables in the cast, with the exception of Miss Brady, without whom the picture would have been much better. James Crane, her husband, is a young man with nice eyes and pleasing manners, and as a stern young nerve specialist is a pleasant chap to meet. The picture, however, makes more or less of an idiot of him, as it does of a number of others who appear.

Little Russell MacDermott, who hasn't a great deal to do, does that little creditably. The photography is good.

I think all credit has been given that should be. To me "The Dark Lantern" was a mosquito bite.

"ARTHUR BYRON, in "TRANSPLANTING JEAN" at POWERS

PEGGY WOOD in "BUDDIES" PHOTO BY ABBE

It has come! Helen Jerome Eddy is to be starred. The Smith syndicate are the wise folks who have realized her worth. Maybe you don't remember, but we prophesied a long time ago that some day just what has happened would happen to Miss Eddy.

They say that the returns from "The Miracle Man" in the United States have exceeded $1,175,000. This was one picture that deserves anything it gets.

Elsie Ferguson cables that she has arrived in Manila, from which port she will go to Japan for a two months' visit.

And what do you think of Sarah Bernhardt! Report comes from Paris that she intends to visit America to star in two picture productions. Mme. Bernhardt is now about 75 years of age.

News has it that Oliver Morosco has signed Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne to star in screen productions. With their aid he will produce a number of his stage successes.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

LENA: I don't think I'd let a remark like that drive me to the movies! He might have called you a mustard seed and that would have been worse. Husbands are queer, but producers are queerer. If you can't get along with your husband chances are you'd have the dickens of a time with the director. Men are alike the world over, only some are more so.

TWO Y'S SISTERS: I agree with you that producers do manage to evolve wonderful miracles in the pictures. Their little "boners," however, are becoming fewer and far between all the time, and the reason they are is because people like you take the trouble to make a noise in the right place. Keep up the good work. I'm wid yez!

RUTH M. H.: Going to write Mr. Tearle, are you? Well, Friars club, N. Y., is his mail address.

P. D.: Of course I'll tell you! Zeena Keefe is with Selznick, 729 Seventh avenue, New York. Jay Belasco is at the Hotel Glidden, Hollywood, Cal.

J. D. G.: For once in your life you are absolutely right. Now I wonder if you feel better?

C. M.: Yes, I'm sorry to say that little Clarine Seymour died recently.

Double Bill Friday Night Will Test Ravinia's Talent

By Charles H. Gabriel Jr.

It is probable that no double bill has yet been announced so calculated to test the resources of the Ravinia company as that scheduled for Friday night. Then "The Secret of Suzanne," a masterpiece of comedy in music by Massenet, and Wolf-Ferrari's tragic "La Navarraise" will be heard.

Nearly five years have elapsed since "La Navarraise" has been produced in Chicago, the last announced performance of the work was scheduled during the season of 1915-16 by the Chicago Grand Opera company at the Auditorium. Perhaps the reason has been that the score is enormously difficult. The principal rôle must be sung by a mezzo-soprano of the very first rank, with a voice of wide range, great power, and dramatic color, and the artist must be no less an actress than a singer.

Miss Alice Gentle will interpret the rôle next Friday evening, with Morgan Kingston as the tenor.

Rothier, Paltrinieri, D'Angelo, and Ananian will complete the cast of principals.

In the "Secret," Mme. Easton will bring her rich voice and superb interpretation to the rôle of the Countess Gil, with Millo Picco as the count and Paltrinieri performing the bit of highly amusing pantomimic acting which falls to the lot of Sante, the butler.

Richard Hageman will conduct both operas.

Flower Carnival for Children.

The usual children's day, Thursday afternoon, will be celebrated this week under the guise of a wild flower carnival. The plans embrace a processional and pageant under the direction of Miss Bertha Iles, to be followed by a play, "The Lesson of the Wild Flowers," the work of Mrs. Charles Millspaugh, who will be present at the performance.

More than 4,000 children will take part in the carnival, costumed variously as flowers, birds, and fairies. There will be no orchestral concert on that day. All children under the age of 14 years are admitted without charge.

Thursday evening "Thais" will be repeated, with Mme. Mason, Rothier, Miss Kent, and Paltrinieri in the leading rôles. Hageman will conduct.

Tomorrow night's concert by the orchestra will be conducted by Hageman, and Enrico Tramonti, harpist, and Theodore Du Moulin, 'cellist, will play solos.

Famous Rôle of Michaela.

Another performance of "Aida," with the Metropolitan cast, including Miss Easton, Miss Gentle, and Kingston, will be given Tuesday night, Papi conducting.

On Wednesday night Mme. Mason will appear in her famous rôle of Michaela in "Carmen," Hageman conducting.

On Sunday night, Aug. 8, "La Traviata" will be sung for the first time, and the leading rôle, almost invariably sung by a coloratura soprano, will be taken by Mme. Easton. Charles Hackett will sing the tenor rôle, Miss Kent and Ananian being other members of the cast.

Continuing his policy of maintaining an interesting repertoire for the season, Mr. Eckstein announces for the near future "Don Pasquale," with Mr. Hackett and Vittorio Trevisan in the cast; "Martha," with Mme. Mason; "Romeo and Juliet," with Mr. Hackett and Mme. Mason, and "Zaza," with Mme. Easton in the title rôle. Antonio Scotti will return soon to the Ravinia company and will be heard in other performances of "L'Oracolo" and "Tosca," as well as in several new rôles.

Music Notes.

Friends of Hubay, the Hungarian violinist, recently collected a fund to send to the musician, believing him to have become impoverished and to be in want of food and clothing. The money was received and accepted by the violinist, but, through his nephew, Charles Hubay of New York, he wished to "correct the erroneous impression that" he was impoverished.

Mme. Melba recently sang in London under Landon Ronald. The king, queen, and Princess Mary were present.

Adolf Tandler, manager of the Los Angeles Symphony orchestra, stopped in Chicago last week while en route to his home from New York. The Angel city's orchestra is twenty-four years old and will give next year twenty-four concerts. Several concerts for working men and children, with 10 cents the admission price, are also given during the season.

The list of new players in the National Symphony orchestra of New York has recently been announced, fully two-thirds of the musicians being newcomers, including some of those who have been with the Chicago Symphony for several years.

Louis Graveure will be heard in concert at Orchestra hall on Oct. 14.

Stellar Roles Go to Obscure Pair

is now credited with a substantial success.

The other discovery is a tenor named Forbes—Ben Forbes. At least he is named Forbes now, but before Mr. Lederer heard of him and induced him to go in for light opera he was singing in oratorios and concerts as Bechtel Alcock. Also he was something of a protege of Charles M. Schwab—the steel man having a decided flair for music and a sympathetic interest in all earnest young artists.

Young Mr. Forbes is a better tenor by several degrees than those who generally find their way into light opera. His solos give joy to the composer and the musical director and pleasure to the audience. He is still a little awkward as an actor, and even though he stick to musical comedy it is not likely that he will duplicate the quick rise to fame of John Charles Thomas, seeing he is not the heart smashing type of youth. But he is to be numbered with the recent acquisitions that mean something.

As for the play, "The Girl in the Spotlight" is a pleasant little affair with quite a bit of pep sifted through a Victor Herbert score.

"The Girl in the Spotlight" was intended for a summer run in Chicago, but the strike of the musicians that was threatened last month kept it in New York. It was all fixed up, with no place to play, so the engagement at the Knickerbocker was decided upon. In the fall it will start west and take up its original route.

Octavus Roy Cohen has transferred the meat—the dark meat—of one or two of his S. E. P. stories about Negroes to the stage of the Broadhurst theater in a comedy called "Come Seven." There are none but Negroes in the cast, though all the parts are played by white actors variously tinted.

Gail Kane, for example, is a light chocolate heroine. Vistar Goins by name, who has acquired a swell wardrobe and a lot of upstage airs lad'maidin' at Palm Beach. Eagle Fox, recently a favorite of the cinema, likewise a pale brown Florian Slappey, a flashy youth with a gift for financiering and a real passion for Miss Goins. The rest of the cast, representing the comic element, is pretty black—Lucille La Verne appropriating the honors as Elzevir Nesbit, the thrifty wife of Urias, the shiftless, who is played by Arthur Aylesworth, and Charles Meyer representing the opposition as Semore Mashby, the darktown banker.

"A chocolate coated 'Potash and Perlmutter,'" some one has called "Come Seven." I wouldn't go as far as that. Its amusing dialogue is its best feature, and this is pretty generously overwritten, so that there is little suggestion of reality to strengthen the story. It is a good forty minute vaudeville sketch padded to play for two hours, and it has its amusing moments.

No Wayside Inns Beckon Motorists Through Illinois

By Mme. X.

THE country around Chicago is lovely, if not particularly exciting. To those brought up from childhood in this part of the west the broad fields, wide skies, and pervading air of peace and abundant fertility of Illinois are as beautiful as the bleak and bare mountains of New England or the uninteresting Alleghany hills. But two things are lacking to make pleasure trips in this part of the world attractive—the first is good roads and road signs; the second is wayside inns and tea houses.

New York and New England are threaded with excellent highways, state roads well kept up, and rendered still more available by the guiding signs posted along the way. Furthermore, attractive, well kept wayside inns and quaint tea houses are to be found at frequent intervals. These are frequently run by educated women, women who have "known better days."

The traveler often finds here refreshment for the esthetic as well as the inner man. Rare old furniture, charmingly arranged interiors, with pretty cretonnes, flowers, magazines, dainty service, and so on.

There is a famous little place of this kind in the White mountains where the wayfarer is asked whether he or she prefers a French or an Italian dinner. The mistress of the establishment has been much abroad, in those good old times when Europe was our pleasure ground. She there learned many characteristic and delicious dishes. She presides over the Eleusinian mysteries of her kitchen in company with a well trained old cook, and the result is a growing fame which makes many a motorist turn his machine in her direction. She, like many other of these summer innkeepers, will only put wayfarers up over night.

Lack of Inns Hereabout.

And the money these innkeepers gather in! Well, it makes the men in their families sit up and take notice.

Why doesn't some enterprising young Chicagoan, or a couple of them, choose a spot on a highway in Cook county and try this way of making, in a few months, an income for a year? I suppose that one reason is that the class of motorists hereabouts is not of a tempting quality. Nobody who can ship his car east would risk its springs and running gear on the kind of miniature hills and valleys called roads in this part of the world.

A small acquaintance with touring in the neighborhood of Chicago has left visions of dusty automobiles careening from side to side, and filled with shrieking mortals who delight to strew the roadside with unsightly debris. Pennants bearing strange devices flutter from the sides of the cars. Wilted, unsightly wayside weeds stick out of crevices. Shirt sleeved men and women in boudoir caps and "Mother Hubbards" seem to be the usual occupants.

No, such travelers would not care for the mahogany furniture, old prints, nor the prices of some of those esoteric eastern inns. A French or Italian dinner would, in their opinion, be a poor substitute for fried chicken, boiled potatoes, and pie a la mode.

Gagemere Altogether Charming.

This dearth of attractive wayside hostelries has promoted the many clubs which are to be found in this district. One of the most secluded, exclusive, and altogether charming of these is Gagemere, ten or fifteen miles northwest of Lake Forest. An unpretentious white house, with a broad veranda on three sides, it stands in a grove of trees on a slope overlooking a small, shallow, utterly friendly and guileless lake. Lush beds of yellow water lilies grow along its further side. Its shores are low, reed grown and green—so green that it seems as if, at night, they must be quite covered by the lake and only emerge by day for the use of club members.

The membership is, I believe, confined to Lake Foresters. Charles Edward Brown is president, and among those who belong to it are Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Farwell, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Baker, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Cramer, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert McGann.

It is a favorite playground for the young people of that community, who flock there in great numbers to swim in the soft, warm lake or paddle the club canoes among the reeds and rushes or to dance to the music of the gramophone.

Nowhere are there more exquisite sunsets than those at Gagemere, where the lake, or mere, turns quite simply and quietly, and without any fuss, to molten gold. Don't you know how some scenery knocks on your eyeballs, compels attention, and interferes with conversation, or reading, or even with cards?

Excellent, simple meals are provided, repasts where succulent, milk fed chickens, fresh green vegetables, cherry pies, and cottage cheese satisfy the inner man. And the ride home, through a landscape flooded with moonlight and fragrant with the breath of the sleeping earth, is the cream of the outing.

Girl Scout Camp Gay.

All the good times, however, aren't confined to the children of the well-to-do. I don't believe that one of those girls who compose the camp of girl scouts which is nestled on the shore of the Desplaines river, near Desplaines, would change places with any one. That neat, little row of khaki colored tents which crouches under the oaks and cottonwood trees of that section of the Cook county forest preserve houses as gay and happy an outfit for youth as could be found anywhere.

In the morning the 6 o'clock bugle rouses them to a day of complete happiness. The order of the day is posted up on a central tree. It includes an early morning swim, setting-up exercises, followed by breakfast, housework, tent inspection, lessons in sewing, in first aid, in woodcraft, and in simple cooking. At the same time the girls acquire ideals of conduct, of honor, of their duty to their neighbors, and a store of bodily health which is of great value to them and to posterity.

The organization of these girl scout bands is not unlike that of the boy scouts. The smallest unit is called a squad, and is composed of eight or ten girls, with a leader. Any group of girls may form such a unit and, after selecting a leader, apply for membership in the girl scouts. Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter is head of the Chicago scouts, while Mrs. Julius Rosenwald is honorary chief.

Mrs. Carpenter organized and equipped the Desplaines camp, in recognition of which the members of the first camp presented her with a pretty pendant representing the insignia of the organization. Others interested in the movement are Mrs. Eisendrath, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, and Mrs. William P. Nelson. A visit to the camp is the only way to get a just idea of the excellent work being accomplished by those fostering the enterprise.

Death of Mrs. John C. Black.

The sudden death from apoplexy a week ago in Vichy, France, of Mrs. John C. Black was a great shock to her many friends. She left Chicago late in May, apparently in excellent health. She joined her friend, Mrs. Berlin, in New York and sailed with her to France. Mrs. Black's last stay in Paris was in 1914, when she and her husband (who died a year and a half ago) were among those Americans caught in the outskirts of the maelstrom of the war. In the hurried flight from there they were obliged to leave behind them some valuable possessions, such as furniture and jewels. It was to assemble and bring these home that Mrs. Black went abroad in June.

She was a noted collector of rare and beautiful things, brocades, bric-a-brac, and pictures. Just what will become of these is a matter of interest to those who knew her, for her belongings and handsome home on West Walton place were the setting for a charming hospitality which will be long remembered. She was singularly alone in the world after the death of her husband, as, except for a nephew of the latter, it is said that neither she nor Mr. Black had any relative living.

The Blacks had lived in their house for over forty years when she sold it last spring. Forty years is a long time in Chicago. When they built it Robert Collyer was preaching in the Unity church opposite. Dr. and Mrs. R. N. Isham and their four children lived next door to the left. The old Mahlon D. Ogden house, sole relic of the great fire, was still standing in its grove of elms near by, where now the Newberry library presides over the leisure class that spends these summer days in what used to be called Washington park.

The Wheelers, Larrabees, and Burkes dwelt to the east of the Blacks on the same block, while across the street the Henry Huntingtons, so well known once, so forgotten now, used to entertain the intellectually élite of their day. Those times and people seem as remote as the times of King William and Queen Adelaide of blessed Cranford memory.

Working for Harding.

Not all the world of Chicago is gadding and on pleasure bent. There is Miss Emily Larned, for instance, holding the fort with Mrs. Lambert O. Wile, at the Republican headquarters, 411 Conway building, while Mrs. Jacob Baur is in Europe, and Mrs. Joseph Coleman is summering at El Mirasol, Santa Barbara, Cal.

Miss Larned will be remembered by many as the staunch and successful advocate of the motor busses when they were seeking a foothold in Chicago. So identified was she with their fate that it was suggested that they be called "Emilybusses." She has a genius as a publicity agent for any cause which she espouses. During and before the recent Republican convention she was an ardent Hoover advocate. Today, however, she is as enthusiastic a supporter of Harding as she was formerly of Hoover.

To her came the idea of a rubber stamp, which should at the same time be a source of revenue for the Republican ways and means committee, and an agent of publicity for her candidate. This stamp bears the inspiring words: "I am a Harding Republican." Not a Hoover or any other kind of Republican, but the genuine article.

It is to be applied to every piece of writing that such a Harding Republican sends forth, letters, checks, bills, invitations. It is really a brilliant piece of publicity. Reiteration is the spirit and soul of propaganda. These rubber stamps sell for 25 cents apiece and are distributed in neat little boxes.

Miss Larned is at present living with Mrs. Jonathan Jackson, as ardent a Republican as her housemate, although she, Mrs. Jackson, is a southerner by birth, and a cousin of the wife of Secretary of the Navy Daniels. Mrs. Daniels passed through town a few days ago on her way to join her husband and Judge John Barton Payne of Chicago in the west, where the party will travel to the Yellowstone park in the latters' private car. Judge Payne and Mr. Daniels have been up in Alaska inspecting railways and resources.

Departures from Town.

Mr. and Mrs. John Borden are leaving Lake Geneva soon and taking a party of friends on a similar tour in a private car to this our most wonderful national park.

Having up to now had the most miraculous summer on record for cool and bracing weather, various people are taking flight for distant spots. Mrs. C. M. Ely is going this coming week to Rye Beach for six weeks. Mrs. William P. Martin and her sister, Mrs. J. Allen Haines, departed yesterday for Osterville on Long Island sound.

David Adler sailed yesterday to join Mrs. Adler in France. The Adlers will spend several weeks in Venice, Italian boishevists permitting. One should make no European plans without inserting this reservation. Dancing on the brink of the crater of a peevish volcano is taking a trifling risk compared with the perilous uncertainties of foreign travel these days.

Notwithstanding this doleful outlook several of our fellow citizens seem to be having a delectable summer on the other side of the ocean. Mr. and Mrs. Honoré Palmer and Mr. and Mrs. William Clow have villas side by side at Biarritz, France, overlooking the blue and perfectly cheerful Bay of Biscay, on whose sandy beaches the smart folk of Spain, France and, in a lesser measure, England love to disport themselves. Not far away the Roy McWilliamses are occupying their lovely and hospitable villa at Bidart, just on the Spanish frontier. Mr. Clow, to return to the Clows for an instant, is on his way to France at this moment.

James Deering, when last heard from, was on his way to visit his brother, Charles Deering, at the latter's famous castle in Spain, Sitges, not far from Barcelona, and overhanging the western Mediterranean, whose stormy waters mumble and gnaw at the rocks

The case of Lucy Gray---

Lucy was explaining her experience to a group of girls.

"When I was 18 years old," she said seriously, "my father died.

"I had to go to work, but I didn't know what to do. I had just graduated from high school, and I had to have something quick. I simply couldn't afford to spend six months or a year learning shorthand or bookkeeping and I didn't know a thing about business.

"One night mother looked up from her newspaper: 'Lucy, dear,' she said suddenly, 'why don't you take up filing? It seems to me the work should be interesting and I hear the salaries are good.'

"Well, to cut a long story short, I took a course at the Illinois School of Filing. I graduated in 30 days and immediately secured a position paying $20 a week. I shall never forget how proud I was to get that first week's salary—the first money I had ever earned.

"That was a little over a year ago. Since then I have received two raises and today I am in charge of the Filing Department.

"The work is awfully pleasant. Best of all it is extremely interesting. I meet nice people—I come in contact with the big men in the business.

"And I am just starting. Some day soon I am going to be getting a good bit more than I do now.

"There is a great future for most girls who take up filing. I certainly advise any girl who wants to better her position to see Miss Gladys C. Bridges, the principal of the Illinois School of Filing. She will be glad to talk to you."

below the castle's stone balconies. Mrs Charles Deering is also there, and that pleasant house of many hospitable memories on Sheridan road, in Evanston, stands desolate, set far back in its grove of trees.

Lovely Nights at Ravinia.

Of course we've said it often before, but it must be said again: the choicest feature of life on the outskirts of Chicago is the opera provided at Ravinia park. An evening spent there in that large and airy pavilion, with the afterglow of a strident western sunset palpitating in the rear, and the pale, wan shimmer of a July moon slowly overcoming the daylight in the gardens on either side, while such artists as Scotti, Edith Mason, Leon Rothier, Morgan Kingston, Florence Easton, Alice Gentle, and others present the best operas in the repertory of the day, is an exquisite delight not to be matched elsewhere in this country. Nor do I know of anywhere abroad that first class opera is produced out of doors.

A tribute should be paid to Graham Marr, who for the first time in our experience makes the hitherto thankless rôle of Sharpless, the American consul in "Mme. Butterfly," into a real, thinking, sympathizing man, a decent chap ashamed of the unworthy conduct of his amiably weak fellow countryman, Benjamin Franklin Pinkerton. In addition Mr. Graham has a delightful baritone voice.

Besides its opera Ravinia park is the setting for many a north shore fête. The Ravinia club, an organization of women dedicated to keeping the park a shrine of high class amusement, got up the "Children's afternoon," which brought out a goodly crowd of youngsters last Thursday. The same association is planning another children's festival for Aug. 9, when the youth of the north shore will be expected to come, each child representing some wild flower. There will be music and special dancing, and the occasion will be used to instill into the young minds a love for the wild flowers so that they will protect instead of destroying them.

Dread Amusement Park.

Mrs. Frank R. Green of Winnetka is president of the club. Every town from Evanston to Waukegan has a local chairman who works for the welfare of the Ravinia opera, helps sell the tickets, and stimulates interest in the enterprise. Each year the men and women who work so hard for this high class entertainment breathe a sigh of relief to think that they have continued to stave off that dread of the north shore, a big, noisy amusement park, with its accompanying rowdy crowds.

Before leaving the subject of Ravinia opera the writer wishes that the Northwestern trains would rehearse with the opera troupe occasionally. Those doubtless well meaning engines so often come in at the wrong time that we suspect them of not being familiar with the score. A shrieking, roaring Milwaukee express will sometimes tear the "Thais" intermezzo to tatters. It would be an interesting stunt for some home composer to write a score expressly for the passing trains, taking into consideration the precise moment when the whistle always screams and the bells always clang. A really tremendous symphony, rival to Tchaikowsky's famous Moscow symphony, might be evolved.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

A FEW VAGUE, GENERAL REMARKS ABOUT APPLE TREES.

Perhaps a golden orange grove is your particular pet,
Or you may rave of celery (see the Kalamazoo Gazette),
Or it may be you love to see the cabbages in rows,
Or dote upon the artichoke in pastoral repose.
But none of these have art to please or clutter me with joy
As do the smiling apple trees in southern Illinois.

Long row on row and mile on mile they lie beneath the skies
And gladden all the atmosphere with gay potential pies,
And apple butter, apple sass, and all the rare delights
That fill the days with gladness and with peacefulness the nights—
Ah, saturate with sunshine, a sweet that cannot cloy,
They hang upon those apple trees in southern Illinois.

Yes, you may sing of waving wheat and rows of rustling "cawn,"
Or fields of sweet potato plants all gleaming in the dawn,
Or chant the subtle sweetness of the onion grove at eve,
Or a ruddy rhubarb orchard—but your words will not deceive
Nor fill my heart with envy, for I know a greater joy,
Down here among the apple trees in southern Illinois.

Annual August FUR SALE

There's this about furs

Historically, our August Sale is the event for the greatest values in furs. During the mid-summer month we place on sale our entire selection of furs at prices which make them an attractive buying opportunity of the first class.

And unless the common human aversion to taking good advice prevents, Chicago's women who want furs will lose no time in taking advantage of the reduced prices that are now in effect.

And a word of warning here.

We are in closest everyday contact with the market and state with authority there will be increases in prices as the season advances. Therefore it is an added incentive to action during August when discounts are liberal.

A—Hudson Seal Dolman. The model sketch typifies this season's extreme style. Made of choicest skins. Length, 45 inches. August price, $750

B—Russian Pony Skin Coat with markings like broadtail. Collar and cuffs of Hudson Bay Beaver. Length, 36 inches. August price, $264

C—Hudson Seal Coat. Skunk collar and cuffs. Full Flare. Length, 36 inches. August price, $523

D—Squirrel Dolman of best quality natural Siberian Squirrel. Unusually handsome. Length, 48 inches. August price, $855

E—Hudson Seal Coat. Skunk Collar and Cuffs. Coat of choicest quality, full flare model and belt. Length, 45 inches. August price, $669

Our August sale is now in progress

The selection of other fur coats, such as Mink, Caracul, Mole, Broadtail, Squirrel, Australian Opossum and Leopard is most complete.

The smaller furs are choosable here from a broad selection of Skunk, Mink, Kolinsky, Squirrel, Mole and Jap Mink.

Open Every Evening Until 9 P. M.

ART

Foreign Paintings to Be Exhibited at Art Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE paintings from the international exhibition of art at the Carnegie institute in Pittsburgh should be the topic which this column this week should engulf with waves of alternate approval and disapprobation were it not that the government officials (why they are concerned in it is still a mystery) have not as yet opened the boxes that contain the pictures.

The boxes are, or were at the time of writing, in the basement of the Art institute, waiting for the tardy official recognition before the paintings could be hung in the galleries of the east wing, which have been bare ten days or more in expectation of their coming.

Meanwhile, though there is nothing new in the world of art upon which one may feast one's eye directly, yet several new movements in the promotion of art have been projected in the last few days that promise interesting developments. The most immediately important is connected with the work of the extension department of the Art institute.

This department, by the way, fulfilled twenty-four engagements, many of them from five to six days' duration, in the states of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, Tennessee, Mississippi, Kansas, and Oklahoma, and one in Canada, during last year. For this year nineteen bookings have already been made.

The new development in this extension work is found in the opportunities offered by the state fairs, the first engagement of this character being a successful one held recently in Oklahoma. Inquiries from seventeen other states have been received about this phase of the work.

Mr. Ross Crane of the extension department has devised a new angle in the bringing of art and good taste to the people. At his suggestion dresses will be shown this year in the various exhibits, and the relation of dress to its wearer will be emphasized.

There are infinite possibilities in this. What should a woman with brown hair and blue eyes wear? Brown hair and brown eyes? Blonde with green eyes? Auburn with black eyes? Dark with violet eyes? And then the complexion—and the figure.

One can almost see Mr. Crane and his fellow workers being mobbed by women, each clamoring for the one and only recipe which will bring out her latent charm and beauty.

Men are concerned in this, too. There are such things as matching socks and ties and matching those to a bronzed or reddened face. There is such a thing as taste in men's clothes.

"Le Baiser," by E. Cabane, a charming study in tender sentiment, from the Paris salon of this year.

It is a huge subject. Mr. Crane will have his hands full if he deals justly by it.

At a recent meeting in the clubrooms of the Art institute there was much interesting talk concerned with the beautifying of small towns. One of the men most eager in the movement is Lorado Taft, the sculptor.

I remember this subject as being a favorite of his and his group of artist friends in their colony near Oregon. Ralph Clarkson was one of these, Oliver Dennett Grover another, and Charles Francis Browne, whose death this spring we so much deplore, was a third.

Primarily under their instigation Oregon has become one of the most attractive of Illinois small towns. It has several notable pieces of sculpture, good buildings, and a charming picture gallery.

What has been accomplished here lies within the possibilities of any small town's accomplishing. It seems so simple sometimes to say just so much and then leave the subject as finished. But as long as our country towns grow up sprawling and uncouth, just so long will it be before this subject is finished. There is no end to it.

The beginning must, as are all beginnings, be small. But the chances for a wonderful termination are good. At one time it was thought remarkable to exhibit good paintings and prints in the public schools; now in Chicago there is an ever growing collection of pictures which is used for that single purpose—to introduce the children to the best while they are children.

In the same way exhibits of good art may soon be sent from town to town, and a suitable hall be erected in the towns in which to install them. Lectures on art can be given, will be given. Illustrated lectures will accomplish a world of good. Little by little the taste of a community will be formed. People will know what they like, what they want, and why they want it. But first they must be shown.

If Mr. Taft and his group of cothinkers can succeed even a little in this work the future may find a thousand Oregons scattered over the country instead of the usual type of main street-drug store-grocery and depot town which goes by any name we choose to put.

In gallery 258 of the east wing of the institute are hung the paintings from the collection of Cyrus Hall McCormick. Several may be recognized as having belonged to the R. Hall McCormick collection which was disposed of in New York last spring.

Among the most beautiful of the paintings are the five canvases by George Inness, a marine by Dupre, the cupids and dolphin by Bouguereau, the winter harbor scene by E. W. Redfield, and a landscape by Harpignies.

The following bit of information about the work of Joseph Pennell is interesting in view of the excellence of the exhibitions which he has held here from time to time. Mr. Pennell is undoubtedly one of the strongest artists who discoverd the war, not only the actual fighting line, but the war of industries at home, which made the battlefields possible.

"Joseph Pennell's drawings and prints of war work, made by permission and authority of the various government departments of the United States, have been acquired by the library of congress at Washington, and will be preserved there as important records. They are already historic, as most of the war industries are now turned to peaceful uses.

"Mr. Pennell was associate chairman of the pictorial division of the committee on public information, and was authorized to make these drawings by the president, the secretaries of war and the navy, Dr. Garfield, Mr. Hoover, and the railroad administration. He also did two of the Liberty loan posters, and worked for the shipping board, Red Cross and other allied bodies. He received the thanks of the government for his services.

"The drawings he made in Great Britain, by permission of the British government, are now in the British museum and the national war museum in London; and a set of his prints was secured by the French high commission for the French collection in the Luxembourg, Paris. His drawings also were widely shown on the continent of Europe, and were published there and in the Orient."

ASTRONOMY

OUR FOUR SEASONS.

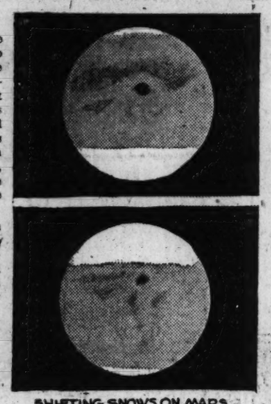
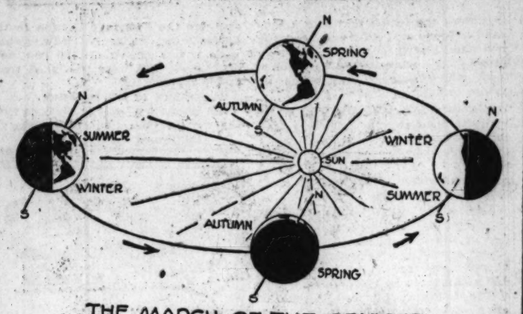
THE seasons are due in part to the earth's tilted axis and partly to its yearly journey around the sun. Neither alone could produce winter and summer; both must act together to make the four seasons regularly follow each other. The tilted axis inclined 23½ degrees, at times points a little toward the sun, and then a half year later a little away from it, while at the mid points on either side it completely misses the region of the sun and points off in the sky.

As the earth pursues its journey in its orbit the polar line assumes all the positions in regular order, and the result is spring, summer, autumn, and winter in the northern hemisphere and autumn, winter, spring, and summer in the southern.

The earth is 3,500,000,000 miles nearer the sun in January than in July, and in consequence our northern summers are cooler than they would otherwise be, while the southern summers are hotter. The same thing is true on Mars, but to an even greater degree, because the eccentricity of Mars' orbit is greater than the earth's.



SHIFTING SNOWS ON MARS



THE MARCH OF THE SEASONS
BY S.F.MAXWELL

The earth is not the only planet which has seasons. Winter and summer on Mars are very plain to see. That planet experiences great changes of climate, and the weather there would be even more unendurable from our viewpoint because the year there is almost two of our years long, with each season something over five months in length.

Little Mercury, the planet nearest the sun, does not rotate like the earth, but it has seasons, too. Its orbit is so much elongated that the changes in the sun's heat, due to differences in distance, are great. It runs through changes of winter weather as hot as steam to a summer as hot as melted lead every eighty-eight days, for that is the length of a year on that world.

Great Jupiter stands upright in his orbit as he goes, and all the seasons he would ever feel, if he were not so much of a semi-sun himself, would be due to changing distance.

Venus likewise stands straight up, and has a circular orbit as well, and so this planet in a telescope always appears placid and untroubled. There are no seasons there, but only one long, moist, never ending summer from the equator to the poles.

But the strangest planet of all is Uranus. This world lies over on its side instead of being merely tipped, with its poles squarely in the sun's track. In winter there it must be always night, and in summer day, with only spring and autumn possessing day and night.

The sun lazies through the sky, and takes a full eighty-four years to make one trip around. Not many earth men on Uranus would live to see the seasons pass and their first birthday come. Uranus is a hot sphere, like Jupiter and Saturn, but if it ever cools off and becomes a world, it will have arctic ice in sheets extending almost to its equator.

Mayflower Council Plans to Celebrate Pilgrims' Landing

By the Rev. Frederick L. Gratiot.

CHAS. H. GABRIEL

BULLETIN No. 1 of the "American Mayflower council" has just been issued. It calls upon Americans to celebrate the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrim fathers on Plymouth rock.

The statements of the bulletin mark and important advance in Protestant theology. Coming in the month when the Roman Catholic communion has canonized Joan of Arc and several others, it has, perhaps, greater significance. Its statements indicate an outlook impossible in the early history of Puritanism. Under the heading "Purpose" the bulletin says:

"Believing that society is under the sanction of a truly divine instinct (i. e., the Holy Spirit of Catholic theology), when the church commemorates its saints and sages, and the state celebrates its founders and fathers, the American Mayflower council seeks to make known the story of the Pilgrims to the whole country."

"The coming of the Pilgrims to America was part of a movement so significant to the history of modern institutions and times that the facts concerning it should be made known to the widest possible circle," says the bulletin.

Other purposes of the celebration are:

"To emphasize the spiritual significance of the coming of the Pilgrims to America, and to interpret the Pilgrims' ideas in terms of democracy," and "to make the spirit of the Pilgrims the basis of an appeal to heroism, consecration, and the spirit of sacrifice that is so necessary if we are to meet the new and pressing problems of today."

The achievements of the Pilgrims are listed as: "Confidence in the revealed word of God, religious liberty, popular government, popular education, obligations to men as well as to God."

The council plans to celebrate the Mayflower tercentenary by services and gatherings throughout the nation during the week of Nov. 21-28, in which Thanksgiving day comes. It asks churches to observe the occasion, and to hold appropriate services, with sermons on the significance of the events commemorated.

Representatives from Europe will be in attendance at the chief celebration, which will take place on Friday, Nov. 26, at Carnegie hall, New York.

Speakers for the annual Winona Bible conference, Aug. 20 to 29, have been announced by Dr. Sol C. Dickey, director, and Dr. Ira Landrith of Chicago, assistant director. The conference will be held in the new auditorium at Lake Winona, which will be dedicated Aug. 13 by the Rev. "Billy" Sunday. The auditorium will seat 8,000 persons. The Bible conference will follow a week's meeting by Sunday and his party.

Among the speakers for the Bible conference will be William Jennings Bryan, Bishop Thomas Nicholson, Bishop Edwin Hughes, Bishop Fred Fisher, Bishop H. H. Fout, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, and Dr. Samuel Chadwick, former noted London preachers, who now reside at Winona Lake; Dr. Ira Landrith of Chicago, editor afield for the Christian Endeavor World; the Rev. "Billy" Sunday, the Rev. A. T. Robertson, D. D., professor of New Testament interpretation in the Southern Baptist Theological seminary, Louisville, Ky.; the Rev. Melvin Trotter, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Dr. Milford H. Lyon of Winona, president of the Interdenominational Association of Evangelists; the Rev. George W. Taft, D. D., president of the Northern Baptist Theological seminary, Chicago; Dr. James S. McGaw of the National Reform association, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Dr. E. L. House, Dr. C. F. Wishart, Dr. George N. Luccock, Dr. A. E. Cory, Dr. Cortland Myers, Dr. William Evans, Dr. J. C. Massee, Dr. C. H. Woolston, Dr. James S. Gray, Samuel Small, Lulu Loveland Shepard, Senator Cannon, Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, H. L. Bowlby, William Danner, the Rev. Chester Birch, D. M. Goodman, the Rev. John M. MacInnis, Norman H. Camp, Dr. A. C. Dixon, Herbert H. Smith, Dr. D. W. Kurtz. Homer Rodeheaver, song leader for "Billy" Sunday, will be musical director.

The annual meeting of the Interdenominational association of evangelists will be held at Winona lake, Aug. 24 to 27, while the Bible conference is in progress. More than 700 of the leading evangelists and evangelistic workers and singers of the country are members, and the convention is expected to bring a large percentage of these to Winona.

Charles H. Gabriel, veteran gospel song writer, will conduct a song leader's conference and lecture at Winona Lake this month on the subject of the rejuvenation and rennaissance of church music. The conference, which brings together several thousands of the song leaders of America, will be held in connection with the Bible conference and opens Aug. 14, continuing to the 28th. Mr. Gabriel is the composer of over 3,000 religious songs.

The song directors' association, of which Homer Rodeheaver is president, will hold its annual conference Aug. 14 to 28. During this period a school for song directors will be conducted. This school will be for the training of men and women who wish to enter evangelistic work and for persons who wish to qualify for song leaders of churches and Sunday schools.

W. A. Peterson of Chicago is superintendent of the Winona Sunday school, which has an average enrollment of nearly 5,000.

John H. Whitter, superintendent of the Chicago Boys' club, is now at Winona lake, where more than 1,000 Chicago boys will be entertained at Boys' city during the summer months. The boys are brought here in sections of about 100 and are allowed to remain a week. The first section has already enjoyed a week's vacation at Boys' city and the second section arrived on Saturday.

Mrs. Hiram W. Thomas, widow of the late Dr. Hiram W. Thomas, Peoples church, will speak at the Thomas Memorial church, Sixty-fourth place and Homan avenue, today at 11 a. m., on "Money Changers in Christ's Day and in Our Day."

The Presbyterian home for the aged, the convalescent, and for dependent children, has begun construction on the sanitary system at its permanent location at Grant and Simpson streets and Ridgeway avenue, Evanston. The thirty acres of the property will be drained for farm and garden purposes, and the sewer which runs from the alley of the main building to the city sewer will be built at once.

The directors have examined the bids submitted on the construction of the main building and have decided that present prices for material and labor are too high. The contracts will be let in a few months' time, when the cost of construction is expected to be much lower.

The directors are making efforts to complete the total called for, $800,000. Over $500,000 is now in hand or in sight, and it is expected that the balance will be provided by Jan. 1.

"MEMOIRS OF MY DEAD LIFE"

By Guy F. Lee.

From the rose-coffin
Days of my youth
Love visions often
Whisper of Ruth,
Alice, and Molly,
Jennie and Dot,
And peppery Polly,
Pick of the lot.

Kisses of salad-days,
Wildering wine!
Mandolin-ballad-days,
Rapture divine!
Prue melancholy,
Belle, who was not,
And peppery Polly,
Pick of the lot.

How she would haze me!
Tender young jinx;
How she would faze me!
Dorable minx!
How she would jolly
As my goat she got!
Peppery Polly,
Pick of the lot.

We still have, by golly,
Arguments hot,
For I married Polly,
Pick of the lot!

COMMERCIAL ARTISTS PROPERLY TRAINED EARN $100 A WEEK UP

MEYER BOTH

COLLEGE [a Dept. of the Meyer Both Company] offers you a different and practical training. If you like to draw, develop your talent. Study this practical course—taught by the dominant organizations of the commercial art field with 19 years' success behind them—who produced and sold last year over 12,600 commercial drawings. Who else could give you so wide an experience—so broad a contact with the very field in which you desire success?

Commercial art is practical art for practical purposes—the demand for commercial artists is greater every year—today's shortage acute. It's a highly paid, intensely interesting profession, equally open to both men and women—home study instruction. Get facts before you enroll in any school. Get our special book, "YOUR OPPORTUNITY"—for half the cost of mailing, 4 cents in stamps.

LAKE FOREST ACADEMY for BOYS

To see the school and its surroundings—to understand the work that is carried on—to grasp the spirit of the institution, a personal visit is urged if possible.

Not necessary to send a boy east to secure a really thorough preparatory education. This mid-Western school has won the respect of the great colleges East and West because of the soundness of mental training and the spirit of service in its graduates. It offers a thorough education in the non-sectional and stimulating atmosphere of the Middle West.

Strictly preparatory for college. Admission without examination to ALL certificate institutions. Definite preparation for the entrance examinations of Yale, Princeton, Harvard and Mass. Inst. of Tech. Self-government led by a student council.

Situated on a spacious campus on the shore of Lake Michigan. Beautiful rural location, one hour north of Chicago, in a residential center of beauty and culture. All athletics. SCIENTIFIC PHYSICAL TRAINING for every boy. Swimming pool. Catalog. Address

AUGUST SALE—$100,000 Stock—FURS at 15% to 25% OFF REGULAR PRICES

This is NOT an ORDINARY FUR sale, but an EVENT THAT offers the greatest opportunity in years for the women of this vicinity to buy HIGH-GRADE FUR GARMENTS AT SAVINGS OF 15% to 25%. Go All Over Town—shop wherever you will—examine the assortments and values that are offered—then come here and make comparisons. You will have to admit that NOWHERE is it possible to duplicate the selections and the values to be found in this REMARKABLE SALE OF $100,000 WORTH OF THE FINEST FURS.

The advantage of buying furs in midsummer is all the more evident when one realizes conditions such as exist in the fur market today. Many furriers were fortunate to get enough skins, but they hardly started to put them into work when labor conditions became acute—and these plants are now practically at a standstill. Luckily, we made plans many months ago, and THE FURS ARE HERE TODAY—in plenty, and so low priced that no woman will want to delay buying her furs now for next winter.

FINE HIGHWAYS A MONUMENT TO OLD TIME SPENDTHRIFT WEST

J. Barleycorn Once Good Road Builder About Kansas City

Booze Licenses and Ancient Glacial Deposits Made Rural Boulevards.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Drop one last, maudlin tear for old J. Barleycorn. He built real roads for Jackson county, Mo.

Before they legislated the pesky old squatter clear off the superheated hills of Kansas City and environs he had pitched sufficient excess millions from the widows and orphans to lay down 200 miles of hard bound macadam boulevard and 700 miles of graded clay and stone highway as a monument to the old time spendthrift west.

They have a way of utilizing the ancient glacial deposits and nature's sternest elements out here to the best advantage of the high speed era. Operating in a big way—as most projects are approached by this jovial community—they simply pick out their right of way, be it cliff, ragged bluff, or perpendicular hill, and sheer away a surface line, cutting the landscape down to suit their uses. Then they "let it lay," as the builders express the process, and bake and broil under the particular summer sun which just now is said to be an outgrowth of Kansas.

When winter comes down from the north he finds it nicely forged and proceeds to temper it to his own liking. Then the builders go out before the road has time to break its spring bonds and bind it securely with macadam. Every year or so they resurface it and maintain uniformally excellent going from one season's end to the next.

Even the streets of Kansas City's business district, although narrow and pounded constantly by heavy duty trucks and all sorts of motor traffic, are generally better than Chicago's loop pavements. Their upkeep is included in the consistent highway program that has made city and county a Mecca for the road nomads of the nation.

Take it from George T. Jones, pioneer of northwest Missouri's highway engineers, good roads are here to stay.

"Providence made it more or less easy to pave the way for progress hereabouts," he states. "We'll never revert to mud and chuck holes now, even though heavy trucking turns us from the old natural building of new roads. All anybody in the world needs to make him a good roads booster is to get used to 'em. After that bond issues cease to be a hurdle.

"For years we have had the dramshop license fund to draw on for highway work. We didn't spend precious time in talking about costs and the like. We went ahead and built roads. The booze fund happened to be a means to a good end here; but, after all, it was just the same kind of money people have right now with the saloons closed. If they could buy booze and build roads, too, before the big drought came, they certainly can afford to better the good work now.

"So far the county paving generally has been macadam on graded natural road. It's the best there is for the pleasure car. But now the big trucks are beginning to tell on it. They are hauling practically all of the milk from this district into the city now by truck. Cattle, too, are coming in that way. We've learned that the short haul by motor is a commercial necessity and that it may take a good deal harder road surface to stand up under it. So far there's very little concrete paving in the county. But we're coming round to see the necessity for it. I congratulate Cook county on her foresight in building roads that will stand their newest tests."

Twenty-five foot highways are another feature of this commercial power plant. A few hard roads and numerous city streets will not exceed sixteen feet in width, but their meagerness is counterbalanced by the mile after mile of broad, safe boulevard in the great park system, the Cliff drive, and like arteries.

The influence of Kansas City's road building is reaching far over her boundary line to the north and east. Graded clay and hard baked dirt ribbons wind for leagues over the splendid Missouri hill country east and north to Chillicothe.

GASOLINE ALLEY—BE IT EVER SO HUMBLE

With a Kick.

According to the American Chamber of Commerce in London, the new empire motor fuels committee, just formed in Great Britain, is about to release several thousands of gallons of power alcohol weekly to motorists, in order that experience may be gained in its use. Prospects for the utilization of power alcohol are thus considerably better than ever they have been in the past. The first step toward the freedom sought by motorists to use power alcohol is provided by a section of the finance act, now before parliament, which allows for the repeal of the legal bar at present placed on the use of denatured alcohol for traction or other power purposes, and also gives conditional authority to use it for all power purposes.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor car has some story to tell. What is your best one? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published in "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Funniest Motoring Experience, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Getting His Bearings.

One day as I was driving along I heard a crack in the vicinity of the rear wheel. Upon investigation I discovered all the bearings gone.

Not being able to continue, I sat down on the running board waiting for help. Before long a seedy looking man came along in a car making so much noise that he had difficulty in hearing me.

I called out, "Hey, mister, do you know any place near here where I can get some bearings?"

The man looked around quickly, gave me a sly wink and said, "Sure, if you know enough to keep your mouth shut."

When Brakes Fail.

My wife was having an argument about her motor knowledge.

"What would you do if your brakes didn't work, and your car was going down hill in danger of running into another car, which was parked?" I asked.

"Why I'd jump out and put a rock in front of the back wheel," was her quick answer.

J. E. H.

Slightly Excited.

It was the first time I had been out alone with the car. I was going to the drug store, but couldn't seem to get near enough to the curbing. However, as I was only going to be gone a short time I left the car nearer the street car track than the curbing.

Soon I heard a great clanging, and, looking out, I discovered my car directly in front of the street car. I was excited, jumped in, threw it out of gear, and let out my clutch—but the car didn't start.

Finally several men came to my rescue and pushed me off the track.

You can imagine how I felt when one of them looked inside and said, "If you'd turn your key and step on the starter you might be able to start."

Left at Home.

One day I, with a party of friends started through the state to advertise a chautauqua that was to be presented in our town the coming week. We had a printed canvas ad tacked on the back of our automobile and as we drove through each town we called attention to the back of the car. After our day's trip we reached home tired, but satisfied that we had done our bit. We drove into the garage and there was our ad. We had forgotten to put it on the car, or else had lost it before we started.

Advanced engineering and finer manufacturing

Four years ago the Marmon 34 introduced the light weight scientific construction which has since been a distinctive Marmon feature. The remarkable easy riding qualities of the New Series Marmon 34 are in large measure due to this basic superiority of design.

Having thus successfully stabilized design, Marmon engineers turned their attention to motor refinements. And in this they benefited enormously by their war-time experience in building aircraft engines.

The results are instantly apparent in the exceptional smoothness of performance which distinguishes the High Efficiency Motor of the New Series Marmon 34.

And this advanced engineering and fineness of workmanship have not only set new standards of performance, but also of long life.

We shall consider it a privilege to give you a demonstration.

Good Tires Never Cheaper Than Now Nor Likely to Be

CAR owners who are holding back on the purchase of tire equipment in the hope of a reduction in prices are likely to be disappointed. There is nothing in the tire manufacturing situation to indicate a downward trend of tire costs.

Unless one studies carefully the underlying reasons for the successful checking of tire prices in the face of overwhelming advances in virtually every other commodity, it is rather amazing to note that prices now are much lower than they were ten years ago. It is still more interesting to compare prices of standard manufacture tires today with prices of the same product at the beginning of the war. Good tires now cost no more than in 1914. There has not even been an appreciable advance in the last two years. And yet the quality is higher and the purchaser gets more value for his money than ever before.

When one considers that prices of raw material, labor, and transportation have made more tremendous leaps in the last five years than during any period in manufacturing history the natural query concerning the manufacturers is, "How do they hold down the prices?" And from this question comes the answer to another, "Will the prices go down?"

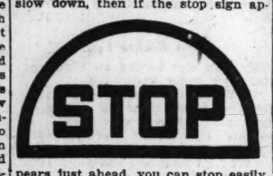
It does not appear that a decrease is likely. Manufacturing genius, which has about reached its limit, has kept down the cost to the tire user. The standard manufacturer has combated price increases by developing his processes. He has expended millions of dollars in the installation of new and better machinery and new methods. He has brought his output up to maximum and has made his profits on a quantity margin. He has smashed overhead expenses by use of these weapons and by putting his distribution on such a broad basis as to make it economical.

Output has about reached its zenith. So long as demand continues strong there is a possibility that tire prices will remain on their present level.

BELIEVE IN SIGNS AND BE SAFE AT RAILROAD CROSSING

STOP at all extra hazardous railway crossings. Necessarily there is a fine attached for violations, but even this is an added protection for you. The law says you must stop; slowing down does not suffice.

Extra hazardous crossings are all equipped with the semi-circular stop signs. This sign means that you cannot cross with safety to yourself and family without first stopping and looking in both directions. Whenever you see the approach sign, circular in form, divided into quarters with the letter R R in the upper quarters, you should slow down, then if the stop sign appears just ahead, you can stop easily.



Your safety and that of your friends and family is dependent upon your vigilance; do not fly in the face of providences by taking unnecessary chances.

Forty-six people were killed, 173 were injured, and 152 automobiles were damaged or destroyed at grade crossings last year, according to R. J. Clancy, safety specialist of the Southern Pacific railroad, who issued a warning recently to autoists to take no chances at grade crossings.

"A passenger train approaching at full speed and still a quarter of a mile away will cover the distance in eighteen seconds," he said. "This allows too small a margin of time to avoid an accident if anything goes wrong in shifting gears on a crossing. Motorists should think in terms of time as well as distance. It requires only a fraction of a minute to permit a train to pass and it is the wiser way."

Costs Nothing to Operate—Lasts a Lifetime

Have a HART-BELL installed at your dealer's. Your carbon troubles are over! No expense for upkeep—the HART-BELL uses no chemicals. No expense for another HART-BELL—it lasts a lifetime. Take it off the old car—put it on the new. You're done with carbon for the rest of your life. The HART-BELL operates perfectly on any car or truck.

How the HART-BELL Operates

Every elementary chemistry student knows what happens when water or steam comes into contact with incandescent carbon. The water is changed into its elements, hydrogen and oxygen. The oxygen unites with the carbon, forming a gas, carbon monoxide, which is burned. The formula is the familiar water gas formula—$H_2O+C=CO+2H$. Your carbon is merely gasified and expelled through the exhaust.

This is an increase of 22.4 per cent. The figures were obtained from the official reports of the chiefs of police.

Of the 31,349 stolen 1919, 23,332 were recovered—74.4 per cent. Of the 25,613 stolen in 1918, 20,203 were recovered—78.8 per cent.

Cars stolen which were not recovered were valued at approximately $5,410,000 in 1918, and at $8,658,360 in 1919.

New York again led the cities in cars stolen, with 5,527 in 1919, against 3,340 in 1918, an increase of 35.5 per cent. St. Louis was the only large city where the number was less than in 1918. This is accounted for by a vigorous law enforcement campaign against automobile thieves by the circuit attorney's office. Sentences up to twenty years have been assessed in St. Louis for the theft of an automobile.

The detailed list follows:

General reduction in the number of automobiles stolen is expected during 1920 because of the fact that interstate transportation of stolen automobiles is made a federal offense under the Dyer law. The national motor vehicle theft law, however, did not become effective until November, 1919. Numerous convictions have been made throughout the United States under this act this year.

Harry G. Moock, general manager of the dealer organization, has written all district attorneys of the United States extending to them the services of the dealer organization in expediting the collection of information leading to conviction for thefts of motor vehicles.

Profiteers' Problem.

Wonder what excuse they're using in Boise, Idaho. We learn from the Automobile Blue Book that natural hot water springs are piped through the city for domestic and heating purposes —making coal an unnecessary luxury.

Sometimes a man will admit that the most trouble he has had with his car was in getting it.—American Motorist.

TO THE YELLOWSTONE AND POINTS WEST.—Dr. Alan A. Foster and family live in Dallas, Tex., and have spent three weeks going to Washington, D. C., by way of Kansas City, St. Louis, and Cincinnati. They expect to reach the Yellowstone park by closing time in September via Niagara Falls, Chicago, Portland, and Los Angeles. Their previous touring experience, which has been extensive, has been in Mexico. Kitchen utensils which telescope into the largest one, a phonograph, two electric fans, an electric light plant fed by two six volt batteries, water and gas tanks, camp stools, and folding furniture are on board.

Ban on Fido

The day of the pup who likes to look at the scenery from the running board or tonneau of the family auto is over, so far as trips to the northern part of California is concerned.

For six months no dog may enter or leave Fresno county, says document from the California state board of health. He can't be shipped in by rail and he can't be carried in by auto. Any little dog already there is doomed to a sedentary life for six months at least, for that is the time over which the quarantine will extend. Fido cannot go into the county, nor can he come out.

An outbreak of the rabies is the cause of the ban, and it will be about October before the gates are opened to pet houn's of any description.

Elgin Race Year's Biggest Event in Speedway Circles

THE Elgin national road race is now the only road race of country-wide interest held in the United States. In the days of the Vanderbilt and Grand Prix races, Elgin was held as of secondary importance to these features, but is now the only real road race of the year. Santa Monica interest is limited chiefly to the Pacific coast and seldom draws as good a field as the Elgin classic.

This year's field at Elgin is the best which has entered for the last five years. Among the entries are Gaston Chevorlet, Tommy Milton, Jimmy Murphy, Ralph De Palma, Cliff Durant, Eddie Hearne, Ed Schillo, Joe Boyer, Eddie O'Donnell, and Ira Vail.

With a field such as this, competition is more than ordinarily keen. Indianapolis was the real trail of the new 183 cubic inch racing cars, but Elgin offers the road test, regarded as a much more severe trial than any track event could be. While the Elgin distance of approximately 250 miles is only half as long as the test to which the cars were subjected at the Hossier oval, the fact it is over country roads of only the ordinary smoothness makes it a test of the stamina and stability of the machines such as a track race never could be.

Insures Taxi Drivers.

Life insurance policies carrying death benefits of more than $2,000,000 are now held by employés of the Yellow Cab company—a gift to them from their employer. There are more than 1,700 members of the Yellow family on the list. Of these 500 will receive policies for the first time to the amount of $500 each. These are the newcomers who have been with the firm less than a year. More than 300 others, who have been employed three years or more, will receive the limit protection of $2,000. The limit on policies was raised on July 1 from $1,250 to $2,000, according to the length of service.

Reclaiming Swamp Land.

One of the greatest reclamation projects in the United States is to be seen in process at Kankakee, Ill., says the Automobile Blue Book. Few are familiar with the Kankakee marshes, which until recent years constituted more than a million acres of flood land. The introduction of a drainage system has added most of the swamp land to the fine farming acreage of Illinois and Indiana. Agricultural experts estimate the reclaimed land to be worth more than $100,000,000.

Now You Can Cut Your Tire Cost In Half

When your tire has given you all the mileage you can safely demand of it—

When the rubber tread is worn thin but the fabric is still serviceable—

When your next move seems to be the purchase of a new tire; call at nearest Gates Half-Sole Tire Service Station listed below and learn how to get a complete new tire with greater than standard mileage guarantee, at one-half the cost you have been accustomed to paying.

A new scientific principle of tire construction—invented by Chas. C. Gates, E. M.—which incorporates your casing within a new factory built Gates Half-Sole Tire, makes this radical reduction in cost and unusual gain in safety and comfort possible.

A glance at the illustration, which shows the reinforced double fabric strength and double cushion resilience, explains why over 1,000,000 car-owners, including the largest business concerns in the country, regularly and repeatedly purchase Gates Half-Sole Tires.

These exclusive cost reducing—worry ending Gates advantages appeal to every motorist regardless of cost, yet Gates Half-Sole Tires, guaranteed puncture-proof, cost only one-half as much as ordinary tires of corresponding size.

More than 2,000 Gates Half-Sole Tire Service Stations are now serving motorists everywhere. The list below is to help you locate the one nearest to you.

Log of Two Tourists by Jenks

JULY 19.—River reaches and hill-tops, deep woodlands and houn' dogs—the land of the drowsy sun. There it lies, baked mud and lush meadow, the neither land of Illinois and Missouri, lazily watching the greatest river go down to New Orleans. This pilgrimage felt it all keenly, missed an early call, and then waited round and waited round for leisurely garage men to decide they couldn't do a thing for the spindle ordered repaired last night, and to reckon we might get a new part somewhere down the river.

So we cautiously felt our way over the long toll bridge above Keokuk's mighty dam to climb a dusty cliff to the top of Illinois and share the world with sweet clover and plump, running quail. Black dirt and winding clay, rutted and deep in dust with treacherous little culvert planks over dry gullies at their bottom, climbed up and down to Lima, where, the senator decided, the nation's side dish comes from. Ancients whittled before the general store and gas station.

"Lemme borrey yer sythe tomorrow," quoth one, "an', Hank, I swear I won't never tote it back. Then ye won't worry 'bout the weeds."

"Roads're tollable from now on," in answer to our question. "Plenty of water here fer yer ho'se, I guess a quarter'll be enough fer that quart of oil."

He was right. Somebody had done a little grading over the hills to Ursa, where the Mississippi scenic highway strikes gravel into Quincy, with its high, hushed streets and its heroic figure of George Rogers Clark gazing proudly over his great northwest. We found that Quincy has grossly misused her limestone bluffs. To make Eighth street, the main artery south, some one scattered bowlders over the ground and named it a highway. Big trucks, laboring over the mess, have helped it a little, and at Marblehead fair gravel heads out to connect with good graded dirt along the old river shore line before the road meanders down into the rich bottom lands, diving through corn fields and threading swamps to the old Wabash bridge at Hannibal. It's always well to wait for the watchman there to wake up and send you across. Trains use the same bridge, but they seldom happen along when a car is going over.

Then Hannibal—you will be pleased with Hannibal. It's like Huck Finn, and the very colored boy who shared Huck's and Tom's adventures still runs the old elevator at the Mark Twain hotel. There's a good repair man at the garage, too. He gave us one look, "calc'lated" we were looking for suicide, and proceeded to put new threads on the spindle that they despaired of all up the river.

July 20.—Nothing can stop us now. We've come over the Ozark throwbacks of Missouri. Gravel smooth as a billiard table and splendid dirt, graded by government trucks turned over to county road work, reach through rolling wheat fields and tall corn to Huntington. People hereabouts never hurry, but somehow the work gets done. Then backwoods roads, gullies, and unsafe bridges beat a way through the hills past Monroe City to Lakenan, where Missouri's good dirt roads begin.

We found little other than scorching heat and dry chuck holes in the deep woods, but it was worth the trouble to discover Shelbina, the typical midwest home town on the old Pike's peak ocean to ocean trail, where a lot of little homes have been mortgaged to buy big cars. Our expedition labored from 9 a. m. to well after dark before reaching Chillicothe, a 142 mile run, the place that some ancient Indian wag named "the big town" long ago. We found it big and progressive enough in everything except hotel rooms with bath. They are rare, and their clerks have little time to spare for stained sojourners.

July 21—So this is Excelsior! Tin-cups and soda fountains; the town of a thousand baths. Excelsior Springs is rather a delicate subject to discuss in print. In the days of good Queen

THE ITINERARY—From Keokuk, Ia., to Great Bend, Kas.

Beth one could have talked of it quite candidly, picturing its multitudes who foregather at all hours of the day and night about the sovereign pool of Siloam and drink and wait and wait and drink. Strange maladies walk the streets and form the breathless topic of breakfast table discussion, white duck and gay summer frocks mingle with the wheel chair and the bath attendant in the bustling hotels, and the canny native continues to gather in the stranger's gold.

Your couriers took the open road toward St. Joseph after exhausting Chillicothe's fund of information at noon and found the broad ocean to ocean trail smooth and inviting. At Breckenridge they suddenly remembered a hotel bill and stopped to mail it back over the route posthaste. Engaging loafers about the general store changed the entire future route.

"Ha!" said one. "Goin' to Excelsior? Ever'body is. I sold another farm last week and had three gol' darned days of it. Roads are fair down thataway, too."

So we ran on to Hamilton and took the south turn on the Chicago-K. C.-Gulf trail. Here, too, the road drag has made perfect going over hard baked dirt on a road that rolls lazily over hilltop and dips steeply into valley and taps new scenic joys at every turn. At Polo it leaves county gravel for fairly graded clay and strikes southwest wrecked its motor making the car climb hills on high. Two new parts and a big repair bill marked the expedition's stay.

July 23—Beating west in Kansas is no idle pastime. Concrete leads out across the persistent Kansas river with its interminable sandbars to strike a sand road baked to a lifeless crisp by the harvest sun. Then the road takes a perverse turn and becomes graded dirt and rough stone in approaching Lawrence. We incurred the enmity of a native son there by asking him the name of his town, and left him still sputtering to climb jagged bowlders over the hills toward Topeka.

It is well this year to take the southern road from Lawrence, the "Red Line" route. They are preparing the Golden Belt trail for paving, as we found to our sorrow.

In Topeka the good road fans run to concrete, and they are building splendid roads as fast as the bumper wheat crop will let them. We happened across a wayside mechanic in Topeka this evening who talked to our carburetor a few minutes and thoroughly convinced the motor that it should run well for the first time since its harrowing experience with experts in the Kansas City service station.

July 24.—There may be something wrong with bleeding Kansas hereabouts, but it certainly is not the roads. Natural dirt, worked thoroughly by farmers who receive regular road pay from township funds, stretch away for miles over the tablelands smothered in wheat.

"All you have to do is to sit and drive," a Topeka editor declared, and he was eminently right. We have come more than one hundred miles in a night drive to Abilene through the heart of the harvest and the thriving harvest towns, St. Marys, Zeandale, Manhattan, Junction City, and Detroit.

Military road building is encountered southwest of Manhattan, where the Camp Funston and Fort Riley concrete has withstood the battering of army trucks all during the war period and stands today as an example of future transportation requirements for the nation. We are housed tonight in the old T. P. railroad hotel in Abilene, a town where the old west and the new automotive west meet.

July 25.—These Kansas dirt roads are too good to be true, as good as the patrolled roads in Wisconsin. At almost no expense, Kansas has made a permanent transport system for her crops by the consistent use of the drag and six mule grader. Our Sunday run of 110 miles today was one of unalloyed pleasure. It was made over dirt roads all the way, following the Golden Belt to Salina and the Meridian highway south through McPherson to pick up a country road—better in most respects than the main roads in Illinois—into Hutchinson, the banner wheat district of Kansas.

July 26.—North and west to Great Bend perfectly marked dirt roads take their way over country level as a floor. Hockaday, the tire and automobile man of Hutchinson, has spent a great advertising budget in trail marking through the west, and he has the everlasting gratitude of the tourist. All roads hereabouts are excellent and except for his markings the happy driver would tour himself to death in following cross roads. Great Bend is making ready to pave its county roads with concrete, for scores of motor trucks moving the crops are demanding even better footing than that found in perfect graded dirt. The expedition starts north now, after having come some 940 miles through the world's food belt.

Gillette

Buy one Gillette Tire—two—three or a set.

You will get maximum mileage at minimum cost from every one of them.

—buy a thousand Gillette Tires—or a thousand sets. You will get the same thing. Most in mileage for your money.

You don't have to trust to luck. It's never a case of a good tire or two—then a bad one. Every Gillette is the best a tire can be made. There is but one standard of quality—the finest. There is but one length of service—the longest.

That's what brought world fame to Gillette Tires before they had been on the market twelve months.

Customers were soon numbered by hundreds of thousands. They obtained better service and more of it than ever before. They come back. Rebought. Obtained the same kind of service. The result was—the second year sale of Gillette Tires was greater than the second year sale of any other tire ever produced.

The most phenominal sales record ever made—due absolutely to the greatest mileage for the greatest number of users.

That is the strongest guarantee ever "written" for tire quality. It assures as nothing else can—that in every Gillette Tire you ever buy you will secure satisfactory mileage. There's "even" excellence—uniformity of quality—and mileage that can be had only through the exclusive Gillette Chilled Rubber Process—an advanced method of manufacture that toughens rubber as iron is toughened when changed to steel. There's unparalleled road resistance—absolute dependability—little or no tread or fabric separation. No deterioration due to weather conditions—nothing but wear quality. Always your money's worth in mileage. Try them out. Put a couple on your car now. See how much longer they wear—better they serve. And how much you save in cost per mile. All sizes. Cord—fabric and non-skid. Gillette Rubber Co., Eau Claire, Wis.

Needs as Much Care from the Start as an Old One

BY HIGH SPEED.

THE average owner who receives a new car from the factory assumes that the vehicle is in the best possible shape, better than it will ever be again, and that he need not bother to give it the slightest attention until it has, so to speak, earned a little care. This idea is about as wrong as any notion could be. Abuse the car in its first thousand miles of service and it is likely to show the effects of the ill treatment throughout its career.

In a piece of intricate and close fitting machinery like the modern motor vehicle, there are many moving surfaces which have clearances of less than .0005 of an inch. Until these surfaces have rubbed together and worn away just a slight film of their metal, they are likely to bind on the slightest occasion. Excessive speed before the mechanism has been run in will produce undue friction with its attendant heat and possible evil consequences.

It frequently happens that in a factory where many scores of cars are being shipped each day, the man charged with the job of attending to the lubrication of each one, may, through oversight, skip one unit. He may fail to fill all the grease cups or may neglect to supply certain oil holes. The agency which receives the car may not go over it carefully enough to discover the omission, and the result is that the new owner takes his car out on the road for a spin and injures something on his trial trip. The first thing to do on receiving a new motor is to go carefully over the lubrication system to make sure that it is ready for business. If the transmission and rear axle housings are filled with grease remove it and substitute a heavy oil which should be of light body for winter use and heavy for summer.

Next on the list comes the battery. In these days when freight shipments are often delayed, the battery sometimes loses much of its vitality before it reaches the owner's hands, in spite of the fact that it left the factory in good shape. Test the battery with a hydrometer to see that it is up to strength or, if you cannot do it, be sure that the service station does so. See also that all the cells have the proper quantity of liquid in them.

In the haste of getting the car to the customer the agent may have neglected to pump up the tires to the proper pressure, or one of them may have a slow leak in its valve, so that the pressure has been sadly depleted on the trip to its new owner. Check up the pressure in all tires with a gauge.

Having made these inspections, we may assume that the car is ready for the road. Very well, drive it carefully. Do not try to see how fast it can go, but remember that all through that intricate mechanism, wherever moving parts come together, a wearing in process is going on and excessive speed may cause serious damage. Until the parts have worn in, it is difficult for the lubricant to get in between them and reduce friction, therefore be careful. Do not race the engine, nor make it do more work than is necessary. Do not throttle down to low on high gear. In climbing hills do not try to see how far you can go on high; change down to a lower gear and relieve the stiff engine. Do not do stunts until the mechanism has loosened up just a little. If the engine smokes do not reduce the oil level. The smoke is a sign that the lubricant is reaching the working surfaces.

It will probably be found that the new car consumes more gasoline than had been expected from the agent's talk. This is natural, for the stiffness of the mechanism puts an extra load on the engine and calls for excess power, which means fuel consumption. It will probably be found that the carbureter will have to be adjusted after the car has worked in, an excessively large opening being required by a new engine.

After the car has been in operation for a week, say, the starting and lighting system should be checked up. The charging rate may possibly be wrong. The owner who does little night driving will probably overcharge his battery, since he consumes little current for lights, while the reverse is true of the driver who uses his car frequently at night and little in the daytime.

After a week's operation the owner should go over the whole car for loose parts. Spring clips may have stretched, bolts may have loosened, nuts may need a little attention from the wrench.

The clutch of the new car needs particularly careful handling. It will be stiff in action and it must not be slipped. Do not keep your foot on the clutch pedal as you drive. Engage and disengage the clutch slowly and gently. The same applies to the gears. If the gears do not seem to mesh easily at first, do not force them into place. Shift into any forward gear that you can without causing rasping. Run on slow for a while, if necessary, but above all avoid harsh gear changes.

The finish of the car, the lustrous enamel and varnish, need tender handling in the early months of their service, or their beauty may be permanently destroyed. When the car comes from the factory the finish is dry, but it has not "set"; it is still soft, and slight abrasions will injure it. Mud spots should be removed at once and with cold water, poured on in a gentle stream. A large sponge soaked with cold water and pressed out on the surface does admirably. If a stream of water from a hose is used the pressure should be low.

After the car has been running about a month it is a good plan to use a good body polish on the varnished surface, following the directions given with the preparation employed. The top and curtains should have a few attentions, a brisk brushing with a stiff brush once a week and a cleaning with soap and water as need arises. After the first 400 miles change the engine oil, whether you think it needs changing or not. After 400 miles you may have to change the throttle stop setting, so the engine will idle properly.

H. C. L.—That's no excuse. Mortgage the old home and buy an automobile; then mortgage the car to buy gasoline. Perfectly simple and simply perfect when you come to think of it—American Motorist.

AUTOMOTIVE BAGGAGE—Antonio Moreno of the films found a way to beat the arbitrary anti-parking ordinance in Los Angeles not long ago when he had this vest pocket passenger car made. He parked it recently in the doorway of a barber shop and had it "checked" while being shaved.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

What is meant by gear reduction on high? What relation has the speed of the motor to its power and performance?

The term gear reduction refers to the ratio between the number of teeth on one gear to those on another gear. The gear reduction on high is the ratio between the number of teeth on the differential ring gear and the driving pinion. Thus 3 to 1 means that there are three times as many teeth on the ring gear as there are on the pinion. This means that the engine turns over three times to one revolution of the rear wheels when the gears are in high. As the engine speed increases the power increases up to a certain point called the peak. At this point the engine has reached its maximum power, although the speed may be further increased.

I have a great deal of trouble with my engine driven tire pump. Even when new the pump was little good and I have about come to the conclusion the hand pump is best after all. Moreover, it is a nuisance to be lifting the hood and making connections whenever a tire is to be pumped up.

The pump which you have is probably a cheap one, because a well made and properly installed engine driven pump rarely gives trouble. However, the next best thing is a pump driven from the forward end of the crankshaft. This pump is carried in the tool box and requires but a minute to be placed in position in place of the starting crank. A good hand pump always should be carried. Get a two cylinder, double acting one.

I understand that there is some advantage in having a racing type radiator aside from the looks. I fail to see any practical advantage. Is there any?

This type of radiator is actually more efficient because the air draft from the fan reaches almost the entire width of the radiator, thus cooling all the water as it descends. In the wider radiator parts at the ends are not thoroughly cooled.

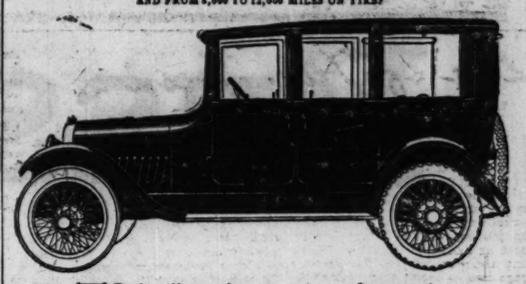
OAKLAND OWNERS REPORT RETURNS OF FROM 18 TO 25 MILES PER GALLON OF GASOLINE AND FROM 8,000 TO 12,000 MILES ON TIRES



TO the discerning motor car buyer, the six-cylinder smoothness of the Oakland Sensible Six Sedan expresses the mechanical harmony developed in it by Oakland engineering.

The easy driving and quick acceleration represents the efficient transmission of power from the capable engine through the double universal joints and tubular drive shaft.

In like manner its reliability of action and its thrift reflects the balance and light weight of the car obtained with a deep frame curving exactly under a body containing no needless pounds.

So also is the stability of this Sedan apparent in the direct joining of the body to the frame and in the bracing afforded by the single-seat construction in front.

This fine performance and shelter calls for no more in first cost than what is expended on many open cars, and it affords an operating economy rarely attained by open cars.

Bring your family to inspect the Oakland Sensible Six Sedan: to gain a clear idea of its advantages in serviceability and comfort gained with thrift.

Block Vandalism in Yellowstone by Check on Tourist

UNTHINKING tourists who deface the beautiful natural formations of Yellowstone National park by writing their names and crude sentiments in geyser bowls and on hot springs terraces are meeting with quick discipline this year.

Under an effective system of registration every tourist entering the park now is being checked in on arrival and checked out on departure and his method of travel noted. If in his own automobile, the state number of the machine is recorded.

With such information available, conversations like the following sometimes are heard over the park telephone system:

"Hello! Hello! Is this the north entrance? All right, chief ranger's office speaking. John Q. Blank, traveling in automobile with —— state license No. 12,345, wrote his name yesterday in Old Faithful basin. Hold him when the car checks out."

And when the automobile arrives at the north gate, or any other of the park's four entrances, Mr. Blank or Mrs. Blank, or Miss Blank, if they should offend, for women are not exempt—is fetched back to headquarters and told politely, but firmly, that such vandalism will not be tolerated. If he, or she, is willing to remedy the damage by effacing the writing, the incident may be allowed to end there. Otherwise the law takes its course before a United States commissioner resident in the park. Heavy penalties are provided by statute for injuring the formations in any way.

In all justice to American tourists, however, Yellowstone officials say they have a minimum of difficulty in enforcing the regulations.

XI.—To Starved Rock.

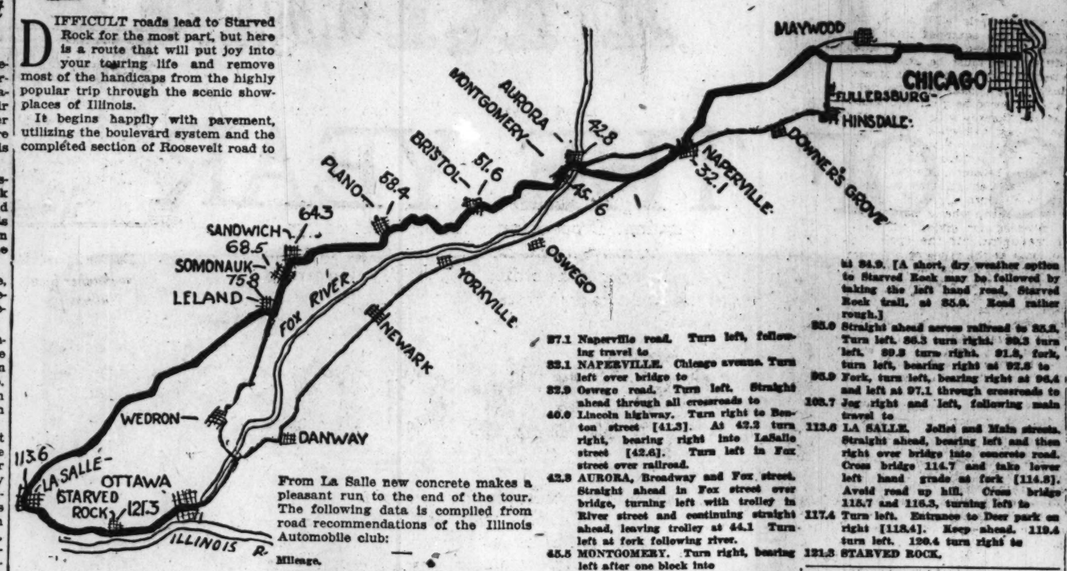
DIFFICULT roads lead to Starved Rock for the most part, but here is a route that will put joy into your touring life and remove most of the handicaps from the highly popular trip through the scenic showplaces of Illinois.

It begins happily with pavement, utilizing the boulevard system and the completed section of Roosevelt road to the Butterfield road, one of the few good arteries leading west this year. The Cannonball trail is picked up at Montgomery, and improved roads, safe in almost any weather, lead to La Salle. The usual route does not touch La Salle, following the worn Starved Rock trail to the historic grounds.



From La Salle new concrete makes a pleasant run to the end of the tour. The following data is compiled from road recommendations of the Illinois Automobile club:

Mileage.

0.0 Jackson and and Michigan boulevards. Go west in Jackson, bearing left through Garfield park [4.8] and following Jackson to

9.3 Oak Park avenue. Turn left to Harrison street [9.5] and left again into Desplaines avenue [10.7]

Now, more than ever before, car owners should buy tires on the sensible basis of low cost per mile

Mileage alone can reduce tire costs.

The significance of the Firestone pledge, most miles per dollar, strikes home today with renewed force.

For 20 years it has been the energizing influence back of every Firestone activity.

You may buy tires for less than the Firestone price, but you can't buy mileage for less than Firestone furnishes it.

For this reason most miles per dollar means more to you now than ever before.

THOMSON'S Graphite Penetrating OIL

If not, telephone us or write us for full information about the oil itself and the big advertising campaign which begins in the Tribune Sunday, August 15.

This is the oil that stops squeaks.

—that graphites springs without wedge or jack.

—that makes a car ride easier and better.

It is easy to apply, dissolves and prevents rust, releases bolts, nuts, king pins, etc., and it does not collect dirt nor dust and—because it actually does all these things—it sells to motorists on sight.

When your customers know about this oil—and they cannot miss seeing our advertisements—they are going to ask you for it. Will you be ready to supply it?

Few Gaps Remain in Dixie Highway Through Illinois

Hope to Complete Last of These by Early Fall

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., July 31.—To be able to boast of the first hard road connection with Chicago, which has been the ambition for years of Bloomington, Peoria, Springfield, Decatur, and other central Illinois cities, falls to Danville. The Dixie highway is now practically completed between Chicago and the Indiana state line, via Danville, and the dedication, to be arranged at some convenient point, will be a notable event of the fall.

Good roads boosters of this city have labored faithfully to put over a hard road between Chicago and St. Louis. As the crow flies, the distance between the two metropolitan cities is 275 miles. The shortest railroad, via Bloomington, is 283. The proposed hard road will parallel the railroad, and the mileage will be but slightly greater. Short stretches of the Chicago-St. Louis hard road via Bloomington have been completed, but the mileage does not begin to compare with that between Chicago and Danville, and the latter city will be privileged to claim the distinction and enjoy the advantages that would have come to Bloomington or other central Illinois cities had the citizens along the route displayed the same progressiveness and liberality as that of the men who line the Dixie highway.

The few remaining gaps in the Dixie highway pavement will be finished by Sept. 1 if there is no delay in forwarding road making supplies. The contractors are requiring ten days for each mile.

If Bloomington lost out in the distinction of being the first central Illinois city to be connected with Chicago by a hard road, she may be successful in the effort to become the second. The Mississippi Valley highway, which extends from Chicago to St. Louis via Bloomington and Springfield, and which is marked all the way from Chicago to New Orleans, will, it is believed, be the first hard road between Chicago and St. Louis; with the shortest milage, this road, when completed, promises to be one of the busiest for motor vehicles of the Mississippi valley.

The program outlined by the state highway commission in utilizing the $60,000,000 bond issue, will provide funds for the construction of a long section of this highway. County, city, township, and village agitation in the other district will doubtless be successful in closing the gaps.

Peoria is certain to profit by the advantage of a hard road connecting that city with Springfield. Notable progress has been made in the various counties between those two cities. Peoria is ambitious to see a hard road completed between that city and Chicago, skirting the Illinois river and going via the picturesque sections of Starved Rock and Deer Park. It is hardly possible that the Peoria-Chicago road will be completed ahead of the Bloomington-Chicago, but there will be much rivalry between the two cities to close the gap first.

Vermilion county will not only have the distinction of having the first city in this section of the state to have a hard road connection with Chicago, but it also promises to be able to boast of the greatest mileage of hard roads in other directions. The road between Danville and Rankin has been completed and the section between Georgetown and Indianola will soon be ready for public use. Ogle county is to boast of twenty miles of hard roads to be constructed this fall.

Livingston county is also to add to its hard roads mileage. Sunbury township, east of Streator, voted a bond issue of $60,000 for hard roads and other townships are falling into line to take care of other sections.

The contract has been let for five miles of hard road between Freeport and Rockford. It is estimated that the hard road mileage in Illinois will be increased by 400 before the year is ended. Next year it is promised that 1,000 miles of the trunk line system will be constructed.

The scandal of the price of gasoline smells to heaven—American Motorist.

AN ILLINOIS BOULEVARD.—Just west of Morris it was necessary to crank her up without going overboard into the mud. Fortunately there was an acrobat along.

The Experts Say---

The wood wheels with which the average car are equipped need little attention, but there are certain small formalities that must be attended to if the part is to go on doing its strenuous duty. The spokes must be tightened and the wood be given protection at least twice every year. Paint and varnish protect the wood against the entrance of water, which will rot it. Where the paint chips off the wood may easily become affected even though it has been treated before it was made up into a wheel. Spook looseness on cheap wheels may be generally obviated by giving the wood proper treatment. If the spokes do become loose at the felloe or hub they may be tightened by the use of wedges. In the case of rear wheels the brake drum bolts are rarely if ever given any care, yet these bolts do strenuous service; they ought to be tightened whenever opportunity offers. Hub bolts in front, if tightened, will never give trouble through spoke looseness, which in turn will produce squeaking.

When the outside temperature rises to 60 degrees or more the carburetor choke is useful only in starting. If a spring such as is used on pedals or brake rods is attached from the choke handle to the dash or cowl frame during hot weather this control will return to normal position automatically. This not only saves gas but tends to reduce the formation of carbon deposits.

The ordinary screw driver is not adapted to all classes of work. By making a heavy screw driver with the center portion in the form of a heavy square of metal a socket wrench may be placed on the tool so that all the leverage necessary may be obtained.

An admirable tool set was recently designed by an ingenious motorist. This consisted of eleven tools and an adjustable handle to be used with all the weapons. This handle has a wind nut on the side so as to hold firmly the particular tool being used. The set comprises three carbon scrapers, one small mirror for inspections, one rod for testing electrical connections, a hook for removing cotter pins, a knife blade for cutting and cleaning electric wire, a small bearing scraper, four edged reamer, and an awl.

Duplex engineering

—maximum power from low grade gasoline

The low grade gasoline commonly sold today resists vaporization. Drops of insufficiently vaporized "gas" escape the conventional carburetor and pass into the firing chamber of the ordinary motor, forming carbon which hampers performance.

Duplex Manifold —another Saxon advantage

Saxon

In Saxon, Duplex Engineering finds the answer to this problem in Double Carburetion. Not once, but twice is each particle of gasoline subjected to a thorough process of carburetion, by reason of Saxon's patented Duplex Manifold and double wall construction.

Even when the motor is cold, the tiny drops of raw gasoline which escape carburetion are caught in the Duplex chamber and held in the grill until literally fried to complete vaporization. In Saxon, pure dry gas only reaches the firing chamber and every exploded particle produces a maximum of power.

Duplex Engineering in Saxon does more than solve the carbon problem. This scientific principle of engineering extends clear through to every vital part of Saxon. Ask us to show you why Saxon with its patented features is a car at least two years ahead of present standards. The proof is waiting for you at our showroom.

Upon request we will gladly send you "Brass Tacks," an interesting and informative booklet containing the story of Duplex Engineering

Think of the pleasure on a warm, sultry day of leaving the din and dust of the city behind you and gliding out into the cool, refreshing waters of Lake Michigan for a week's cruise through four great lakes—a trip of over 2,000 miles of beautiful scenery, shore line, islands, rivers and bays—care-free, you will give yourself up to a spell of enjoyment — you will eat well and sleep well, and after a too quickly ending week you will return home thoroughly refreshed and invigorated. Take this wonderful trip via Lake Michigan to Mackinac Island, via Beautiful St. Mary's River to the Locks at the "Soo;" via Lake Superior and Portage Canal to Houghton (Hancock) and Duluth. Returning via Lake Superior, Lake Huron and Georgian Bay (30,000 Islands) to Mackinac Island then via Lake Michigan to Chicago.

If you enjoy seeing places of interest, the numerous stops and short cruising distance from the shore, during the greater part of the trip, offer sights of wonder and beauty that are sure to please you. You can be quiet and excluded, if desired, or if you like a real good time there is the continual round of deck games, cards, etc., during the day, and dancing, musicales and other entertainments in the evening. If you want to go fishing or take a tramp in the woods, stop-over privileges at a number of points will enable you to do so.

For the children there are the open-air playgrounds and deck games, with attendant in charge to relieve the parents of care. Combined with all these pleasures, you will have conveniences and comforts on this magnificent steamer equal to those on the best Atlantic Liners. The dining service and food equal to that of the best hotels. All state-rooms and parlor rooms are outside rooms and have windows or ports to insure perfect ventilation. Have running water, call bells and electric light—beds have the finest mattresses and springs; extra long and extra large—bath and toilet in connection with parlor rooms and close by all state-rooms. # FARM AND GARDEN

More and Better Wheat Grown on Fertilized Land

By Frank Ridgway.

"HOW is it that you have a crop of wheat which is almost 100 per cent this year while many of the farmers have been hit by the Hessian fly?" This question was asked one of Chicago's leading business men at a recent convention of grain growers who met here to solve their marketing problems. He owns a large farm just over the state line in Indiana.

"Principally because we have a live county agent," he snapped. Then he told the story of how farmers have been working together to solve some of their production problems. His farm is in a vicinity representative of the average section where wheat is grown to any extent in the middle west, where, like in most places, farmers have grown first one variety of wheat and then another in an attempt to increase the yield.

Most of them followed out the tradition of trying new varieties every year. If Bill Jones' field of reliable Harvest King produced twenty bushels an acre last year and his next neighbor, Ed Smith, only raised fifteen bushels an acre from another variety Ed Smith usually changed to Harvest King. Then probably for some reason he obtained fewer bushels than ever, with the result that the next year he would change again to another variety, which produced especially well for some other neighbor. "The result was," said the Chicagoan, "a conglomerated collection of varieties, none producing satisfactory yields and often a poor milling wheat."

Worry Proved Constructive.

Mr. Richards (that is not the correct name of the Chicago land owner, but he is modest and his name makes no difference) did considerable worrying about his farm, that is now in the hands of a tenant. His land was not producing good yields and the fertility was being decreased more and more every year. He worried constructively, however, and it is readily apparent that he has found a solution.

In answer to several questions asked him concerning his own troubles in growing wheat he replied: "Dell, I realized it was a community affair—another problem to be solved through the farmers' organized efforts—the way we have handled many other problems and the way those of us who live in the cities are going to be brought into closer touch with the farmers."

"I went down to my farm, studied the situation, called in the county agent, and together we went over the problem carefully. We decided to begin at the beginning, get a carload of seed of a good variety we knew would grow well and bring a high price on the market, clean it thoroughly, remove all weed seeds, treat it with formaldehyde, issue cultural instructions, which included methods of combating the Hessian fly, advise the farmers to fertilize, and watch results.

Convincing the Farmer.

"You should have seen the difference when they thrashed the crop. On the land where they planted our seed and used our methods, applying fertilizer, they got 27.3 bushels of wheat, and on the other the average was only 13.1 bushels. And not only did they get more bushels from an acre but the wheat was two to five pounds heavier per bushel.

"You can bet these farmers did what was suggested the next year.

An Ohio wheat field on June 29. Note well filled heads on left, where fertilizer was used, and the unfertilized strip with scraggy plants and scattering heads on right.

Scene from Ohio State university farm, showing field thickly dotted with shocks—200 pounds of fertilizer scattered on each acre did it.

Ever since, except when nature has been unusually hard on our section, we have grown big yields of good quality wheat.

"We apply the fertilizer at the time of planting with a combination seeder which plants the seed and drills in the fertilizer at the same time. In my neighborhood we used 200 to 250 pounds of fertilizer on each acre.

"There is one point I overlooked," added Mr. Richards. "Suitable fertilizer not only increases the yield but it adds much to the quality. The grower used to get about ten to fifteen bushels of wheat with about 50 per cent shriveled kernels; now he gets twenty to thirty bushels from an acre, but about 90 per cent of the grains are plump and the wheat grades No. 1 and No. 2, instead of No. 4, No. 5, or lower.

Dodging the Fly Pest.

When asked how he handled the Hessian fly, he said: "O! We fix that pest easily. The life of the adult fly is but a few days—about a week or less—and the great mass of flies will appear about the same time. So the most effective method of control is to delay the seeding of the wheat for a week or ten days after the normal date of seeding, and usually the females will have come and gone before the wheat is up.

"We had the farmers hold off planting their wheat until the county agent said 'go.' The fertilizer forces the wheat, making it grow faster, and the young plants go into the winter in much better condition than unfertilized wheat planted two weeks earlier."

Summary of Program.

For the benefit of the growers who live in communities where farmers are not organized and do not have county agents, he was asked if any farmer could carry out such a program individually. He explained that there are extension men in all state agricultural colleges who will help with the technical questions, and he summarized the most important points in his program as follows:

Ask the county agent or agricultural experiment stations to help choose the variety of wheat which will yield well in your community; clean the seeds well of all impurities; treat them with formaldehyde; rotate, and avoid growing wheat on the same ground year after year; use fertilizer and plant late to avoid the Hessian fly.

Sharing Fertilizer Cost.

He realized that the price of fertilizer was considerably higher than in 1914, he said, but referred to a recent government report, which shows that an acre of farm crops could buy more fertilizer last year than it did in the years immediately preceding the war. As a land owner himself, Mr. Richards said he believed the landlord could well afford to insist that his tenant buy fertilizer, sharing half the cost with him.

To substantiate his statement, he quoted figures based on the results of actual farm operations, showing that on a 160 acre farm—being farmed on the shares, two-thirds to the renter and one-third to the owner—he could pay half the cost of the fertilizer and still receive $170 more for his rental than he would if no fertilizer had been used; and the tenant would be better off by $410.

Fertilizer Table to Follow.

Here is the fertilizer table he follows, which may serve as a guide to others:

| | Per cent— | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Clay soils— | Ammonia. | Phos. acid. | Potash. |
| Without manure | 2 | 12 | 0 |
| With manure | 0 | 16 | 0 |
| Loam soils— | | | |
| Without manure | 2 | 12 | 4 |
| With manure | 0 | 12 | 2 |
| Sandy soils— | | | |
| Without manure | 2 | 10 | 4 |
| With manure | 0 | 12 | 4 |

Select the analysis that best fits the condition on your farm and apply 250 pounds to the acre at wheat sowing time. You are not only feeding the wheat crop but also the hay crop which follows, and it has been figured out that the increase from the latter should more than pay the cost of fertilizing.

PAIGE

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA

THE first appeal of our five-passenger "Glenbrook" model is, quite properly, its exquisite beauty and distinctiveness. To merely look at the car is a pleasing experience.

The second appeal develops upon acquaintance with one of the most remarkable power plants in the entire field of six cylinder engineering. Thus admiration is supplemented by profound respect and both appeals merge into Pride of Ownership.

This new Paige motor is an unusual achievement. It is the result of more than three years of patient research and experiment. It is actually and literally a product of our war time experience.

Furthermore this power plant is an altogether distinctive product—conceived by our own engineers and built in our own plants by our own workmen. It represents in fullest measure all that the Paige nameplate implies.

by Special Steels

Just as superfluous weight handicaps the heart and mind of a man, so does superfluous weight handicap the action of a motor car.

Such weight kills tires—
"Eats up gas"—
Kills "pep" in an engine—
Slows down car speed—
Makes repairs costly and too frequent.

Maxwell has no useless weight. Special steels have been used in its construction. They are made to Maxwell's own formulae. They have great strength.

That is why a Maxwell is responsive, develops a high average road speed, is not tiring to drive, has a quick and sure brake action, has long "gas" and tire mileage, and why it is a stranger to the repairman.

Such high efficiency wins many friendships. Figures like these speak eloquently: 5,000 a year six years ago; 100,000 a year today; now over 400,000 in service the world over.

Seven Striking Jordan Colours —for August Only

Seven striking Jordan models for people who choose to be distinctive will constitute the production of the Jordan factory for the month of August.

Seven charming body designs, finished in seven special enchanting colors, are ready for the selection of those who want to rise above the commonplace.

Only three of each model will be available for delivery in this territory—only three.

The Bluebird Playboy with Ivory Wheels

The Playboy with ivory wheels, in the plumage of a blue-bird—distinctive—different—has a little touch of something that only women can describe. A dash of devil-may-care for the man who plays as hard as he works—a promise to the woman who loves the range of the open road, yet practical as any doctor's car must be.

Dawn Gray with Shamrock Wheels

A woman said "why don't you paint a car in snappy gray that doesn't show the dust—and start it on its way with wheels from old Killarney"—so we finished one and drove it down the avenue. Dawn Gray, with wheels of Shamrock Green—a knockout of course—even the Fliver owners showed respect. Only three for this town—for August.

The Jordan Brougham in Saraband Green

Alive, modern and superb, with all the ease and splendid poise that charming women prize, the Jordan Brougham in Saraband Green, is the special for August.

Men to whom the world is never dull, turn on their heel to pay the fleeting tribute of a glance to this trig, tailor-made, bewitching thing.

The Jordan Brougham in Coventry Blue

Comfort, good taste, and atmosphere have made this car beautiful.

Special for August, in fine, old Coventry Blue,—its exquisite contour, studied detail in workmanship and thorough reliability has made it the choice of those who admire the unusual.

A Fascinating Sedan in Maxfield Blue

Here is a car that gives that exhilirating thrill which comes only with the sense of perfect control. Balanced, economical, nimble on its feet; spacious in capacity, this light, yet powerful Jordan Sedan slips through the city canyons, helps you to dispatch the day's work, and grants an hour to loiter and let the world go by.

Maxfield Blue is interesting. You will discover that when you come and see.

The Arabian Red Playboy

Smashing in color—light as a feather—instantly responsive—the Playboy in Arabian Red throbs with eagerness to be off and away—a wonderful, light-footed car of economy and distinction.

The Burgundy Old Wine Silhouette

It is a car of muscle and brawn—quick, responsive, with balance that is superb.

The spacious Jordan Silhouette Seven is finished for August in Burgundy old wine and Saraband Green, just for those who like to look like individuals instead of appearing on the Avenue in ordinary garb.

Remember there can be but three each of these models this month. Come in—tell us your preference.

SALESMAN—ALUMINUM WARE.
The American Aluminum Company of St. Louis and New York has a few vacancies for very high grade selling representatives in good territories in the Middle and Far West.
For a lengthy period orders have so far exceeded a continually increasing production that our sales force has been allowed to drop to one-half its normal numbers.
With the demand for our product still very heavy, we have so greatly increased our output that we are able to fill several of our best vacant territories with the expectation of giving prompt shipments for an indefinite time to come on a good percentage of the most staple items.
Applications are invited especially from experienced aluminum ware salesmen or specialty salesmen in other lines whose efforts are at present limited by slow and uncertain shipments. Such salesmen should welcome the opportunity for large compensation our present great output affords.
This company reminds all its representatives on a liberal commission basis with weekly drawing and expense accounts.
Capable salesmen can earn from $6,000 to $15,000 per annum.
Apply by letter, giving full particulars of experience, which will be held as strictly confidential to MR. CHAS. E. LUNTZ, General Sales Manager, American Aluminum Company, 7th-st. and Clark-av., St. Louis, Mo. An interview will be arranged in Chicago early in August with applicant whose letters impress us favorably.

SALESMEN—EXPERIENCED REAL ESTATE
This is the big year in the acre field. We are about to open a large 600 acre tract into ½ acres, acres, 2½ and 5 acre tracts; about ½ of this land is beautifully wooded and will sell like hot cakes. We will conduct an advertising campaign, such as was never known in the acre field before. We are getting ready for results and prospects our present small organization can handle. Our men have averaged since January 1st as high as $1,200 per month; you can do the same if you are made out of the same stuff or will develop yourself according to instructions. This is a great opportunity for salesmen who speak English, German, Bohemian, or Polish. Real advancement guaranteed to the men who make good. See me at once.

SALESMAN
"WHO HAS THE MAKIN'S."
This ad for salesmen who want to improve their earning capacity now and provide a permanent future and increased yearly earnings. Our 18 successful men originally knew nothing of our line, but "they had the makin's" and made good from the go. We finance our men. 80% of their business is closed on live leads furnished by us. Average yearly earnings are well over $8,000 and exceeds the 1st year. The product is high grade; sold through dealers only, is in great demand and backed with a sound advertising and selling campaign. The firm is old, located in Chicago, has a high commercial rating, and are live wires. Men over 30. Lots of good personality and appearance, who can think quickly, reason soundly, and talk forcibly, will be engaged at once for virgin out of town territory on a permanent and liberal basis. Give age, nationality, and such experience for interview. Address B K 74, Tribune.

SALESMAN — A REAL POSITION FOR A hustler. We need a high class man under 40 who can command $4,000 and a perfectly legitimate business. This is positively the biggest proposition of its kind in this country—unlimited opportunity for immediate advancement to an executive position. Address B K 248, Tribune.

SALESMAN—YOU WILD LIKE TO SHOW you what 66 of our salesmen did last month; if you are surprised, I am hiring salesmen and executives for the West, biggest and best proposition in the entire country. If you're not a quitter, come in and let me show you the biggest big thing you've ever seen. Address C K 246, Tribune.

SALESMEN—HARDWARE: HERE IS YOUR big chance; we have $5,000 first year selling our very high grade but popular priced line of aluminum cooking utensils to hardware dealers, department and general stores; this is a straight, exclusive sales proposition and unless you are a real salesman with ability we cannot use you; desirable territory still open; give references and territory covered in replying. Address B Y 21, Tribune.

SALESMEN—TO PROVE TO ME THAT you are 100% trustworthy and I will give you a legitimate, high class, permanent position, with a future, paying an income that will exceed your fondest hopes. Send a business to which you are or can be adapted in a short time, and if I am convinced you are set for all time. Answer in confidence, giving phone number. Address C K 158, Tribune.

LIVE AT THE

STANLEIGH

Sheridan Road & Pratt Boulevard

One of Chicago's Newest and Most Distinctive North Shore Kitchenette Apartment Hotels.

This is a hotel of quality and individuality, luxuriously furnished, combining all the comforts of private home life with first class hotel service.

Situated on Sheridan-rd., one block from the lake, its rooms are cooled by the refreshing breezes of old Michigan, requiring covers for comfortable sleep on the hottest, most humid nights of summer.

The Stanleigh caters to PARTICULAR PEOPLE, although its prices are moderate. Its atmosphere is one of culture and refinement.

Splendid transportation is afforded by the bus line and by the Chicago elevated system three blocks away.

A few one and two room suites are now available.

BIG REDUCTION

4 DOORS.

Picture in your mind's eye the most luxurious and perfectly appointed enclosed motor car you ever beheld. Then you have a faint idea of this 7 passenger Marmon equipped. Not any more a used car than the new cars now driven in from the factory.

You must really see this one, and, better still, own it.

ONE WOMAN FIXES WORRYLESS TOUR DE LUXE FOR 125

Real Estaters' Vacation Trip Is Carefree.

BY AL CHASE.

This is a little story of how 125 people had the time of their lives on a de luxe special train tour through the west of several thousand miles—all due to the thoughtfulness, originality, and capability of one young woman, Miss Helen M. McCullough, executive secretary and office manager of the Cook county real estate board.

MISS HELEN M. McCULLOUGH.

Several months ago the de luxe tour idea popped into Miss McCullough's agile brain. She petted it and let it grow until it was big enough to submit to the board. The members greeted it like an Uncle Bim from Australia. And it was worth a bang-up greeting, for it meant a thirteen day vacation to the Yellowstone and back without a worry for anyone—except Miss McCullough. She did all the worrying, but it brought so much happiness to every one that, she says, it was worth it.

What She Did.

Here's what she did: Hired a special train de luxe of six sleepers, one of them an observation, two diners, and a baggage car; made all the arrangements for the trip, such as meals and rooms in the best hotels wherever the party stopped and special motor trips; bought bottled drinking water for the entire tour; a gigantic ice box in the baggage car was packed full to the top with boxes of candy, salted nuts, soft drinks, cigars, and cigarets—all free and ready for the taking whenever anyone felt hungry or thirsty—and the thousand other details of a worryless trip skillfully arranged. And to show how carefully she managed, the popular big ice box kept the party supplied with good things up to the last mile of the trip.

Another big factor in making this trip memorable was I. Whiteson, chairman of the entertainment committee. He planned the star indoor event of the tour—the "grand carnival" which was held the last night on the train. The two diners were cleared of tables and decorated and a prize costume, confetti strewn entertainment given in which everyone took part. No one knew about it until the afternoon of the event, so only a few amateur aids to costuming could be purchased at Omaha.

A Humdinger.

But everyone admits it was a humdinger. Mr. Whiteson had provided all the confetti and noise producing implements necessary and the 125 did the rest.

Miss McCullough was queen of the carnival. The prize winners were Miss Juanita Brooks, daughter of Robert E. L. Brooks, a former president of the board, who appeared as a Japanese girl; Miss Helen Mehaffy, who managed to tear out enough feathers from the porter's duster to make the proper headpiece for an Indian girl; Edward J. Goldblatt, who knocked 'em cold as a "dancing girl," and Charles Ringer and George W. Reinecke, who by skillful application of iodine and brown paper transformed themselves into hula hula girls.

Miss Marion Ringer, daughter of the above mentioned hula hula dancer, appeared as Charlie Chaplin; George J. McCabe was Beau Brummel; Miss Nancy O'Connell, daughter of John T. O'Connell, was a riding girl; Richard W. Wolfe, a former board president, appeared as George Washington; President A. W. Stanmeyer was Uncle Sam; Frederick E. Hummel, a director of the board, did some startling steps as a dancing girl; the bunny hug of 1913 was skillfully performed by Joseph Browarsky, who appeared as a bear.

Doug and Mary There.

Mr. Whiteson dolled up as a farmer; Harry Lauder was impersonated by Theodore F. Kilburg; Albert J. Brock, man was Huckleberry Finn; Fred A. Froelich was Douglas Fairbanks, with Richard Martin as Mary Pickford Fairbanks. Andy and Min were there, better known to the rest of the party as William D. Rogers and daughter, Miss Adda Bell Rogers. N. M. Guettel chewed a bit of straw and posed as a rube, while Mrs. F. T. Field was a blonde Pullman porter.

Morton T. Culver was Sunny Jim; Herman Teninga, treasurer of the board, was a millionaire; Frank L. Dean, former president, appeared as May I Not Wilson; Mrs. George W. Reinecke was a 1920 suffragist; George W. Walker was a gambler.

The tour began on Tuesday, July 13. It ended last Sunday at 9:30 a. m., on schedule. The party stopped at Omaha, Ogden, and Salt Lake City going west, spent five days touring the Yellowstone in motors, and visited Colorado Springs, Pike's peak, and Denver coming back. Local real estate boards met the Chicagoans at trains and showed them the sights at all the big cities.

Fox Trotting 'n Everything.

There were dances every evening spent "ashore." The governors of Utah and Arkansas were their guests at a dinner at Ogden canyon. Every one took a salt water dip at Salt Air beach, and nearly every one played cards while the train wheels were turning, with $100 in prizes.

"We had a camera contest," said Miss McCullough, "and on Aug. 11 at our annual picnic to be held at Ravinia we're going to award five prizes for the five best pictures. Also five prizes for the five best 300 word articles about the trip. The carnival prizes also will be given out then."

And if Miss McCullough manages the picnic half as well as she did the tour, we'll say it's going to be a pippin.

This is how the Lexington hotel will look when the new twelve story, 44x161 annex is built just north of the hotel, fronting on Michigan avenue, and two stories are added to the old section. This will make it a twelve story building fronting 169 feet on the boulevard and 161 feet on East Twenty-second street. A sixty-five foot tower will top the annex. Walter W. Ahlschlager is architect. Details of the project were given in this department on July 4.

According to Herman Mack, president of the Interstate Hotel company and proprietor of the Lexington, the additional room space will be to care for more permanent guests without curtailing the commercial trade, which at present is keeping the hotel full. The hotel now has 450 rooms. When the additions are completed it will have approximately 850. Work will begin as soon as building conditions improve somewhat. The total cost is estimated at $650,000.

Beg Your Pardon

Mrs. T. J. Engh, a member of the board of directors of the Lydia Children's Home association, writes that the association purchased the former home of the Irving Park Country club at the northwest corner of Kildare and Irving Park boulevard for $31,500, subject to $15,000, and not $16,500, as given in this department last Sunday. THE TRIBUNE'S figures were taken from a copy of the sale furnished by the county recorder's office, in which no mention was made of a mortgage. The revenue stamps indicated a price of $16,500.

Through a typographical error the selling price of the residence at 240 Sheridan road, Hubbard Woods, by Harry G. Phillips to George E. Routh was given in Friday's real estate department as $10,000, subject to $18,000. It should have read $40,000, subject to $18,000.

Austin Company to Build $150,000 West Side Plant

A two story building to cost $150,000, with foundations for four additional stories, is to be built at once at 106-16 South Desplaines street, east front, just north of St. Patrick's church, on a 117x91 lot, by the M. B. Austin company, manufacturers of electrical material.

The site was purchased from George E. Spry for an indicated $100,000, subject to $32,000. It is improved with old two and three story buildings. The company is now at 700 West Jackson boulevard, but will move to its new plant the first of the year. The Wurlitzer company has rented its old quarters. The additional four stories will be added to the new plant some time during 1921.

The Austin company has given two trust deeds to the Chicago Title and Trust company for $170,000, five years at 6 per cent, secured by the property.

Dixon Transfer to Build Garage in South State St.

The Arthur Dixon Transfer company has acquired 40x143 vacant at 1343 South State street from Emelia J. Smith for $28,000, adjoining the four story building, 40x143, recently bought from Franklin MacVeagh for $28,000. Hibbard Porter & Bro. were brokers in the Smith sale and Perkins B. Bass & Co. in the MacVeagh deal. As recently reported, the Dixon company will build a garage. The cost is given as $44,000. The building will be 80x143. Holabird & Roche are architects.

Shop Building to Take Place of Peacock House

A two story building to contain high class shops is planned by John L. Inderrieden at 824 South Michigan avenue on the 40x180 now occupied by the old Peacock residence and which was purchased through Frank S. Pagin & Co. for $210,667 at a recent auction of the Peacock estate properties. Zimmerman, Saxe & Zimmerman are architects for the new building. Mr. Inderrieden has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company for $140,000, five years, at 6 per cent, secured by this property.

CAN COMPANY BUYS SITE FOR BIG ADDITION

Planning for the erection in the next few years of a big addition to its present can factory, the Continental Can company has just purchased from Mrs. Lily Busch, widow of Adolphus Busch and chief owner in the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. of St. Louis, enough land to give them the entire tract bounded by Grand, North and Kilpatrick avenues and the Belt Line.

The two parcels just bought are 188x434 at the southeast corner of Grand and Kilpatrick, and 302x615 at the northeast corner of Kilpatrick and North avenues. The revenue stamps indicate $155,000 paid. In addition to its Grand avenue plant, the company has a large factory in the Clearing district and one at Halsted and Twenty-second street.

According to Wheelock, Newey & MacKenzie, attorneys, who represented the company, no definite plans for a new plant have been drawn, though it is expected the company will utilize the entire tract within a few years. J. J. Harrington & Co. represented the seller.

$150,000 Foundry Plant for the Southwest Side

A $150,000 foundry plant, with a main one story building 200x100, and several other structures, is planned by the Charles H. Milles Foundry company for the six sided piece of property bounded by West Thirty-fifth and South Leavitt streets, Irving avenue, Thirty-fifth place, and the Alton tracks.

The present plant on West Twenty-first street will be abandoned. Charles H., Charles T., and William Milles took title to the site, paying an indicated $21,500. William Gibson, William J. Sufferin, James N. Litsey, William F. Klemp, Robert A. Cook, the Chicago Title and Trust company, and the Chicago and Alton railroad were the grantors. The property is crossed by the Alton.

Forest Preserve Buys in Leyden and Palos

The forest preserve commissioners have purchased forty acres in Leyden township, on the east bank of the Desplaines river, east of East River road, half a mile south of Higgins road, from John C. Gunderson and others for $24,000.

Another addition to Chicago's big forest park belt was the purchase of fifty-two and one-half acres in Palos, a mile south of Archer avenue, bounded on the north by Ninety-fifth street and by One Hundred and Fourth avenue on the west, from Margaret E. Green for $15,210.

REALTY DEAL IN STARCH TOWN.

One of Argo's liveliest corners, where Archer avenue crosses Sixty-third street, figured in a realty deal. The two story store and office building at the northeast corner was sold by Robert I. Stout of Tekemah to Joseph Strzelczyk for an indicated $40,000. The property is only a short distance from the big Corn Products plant.

"TUMBLE IN" DOORS BRING BUSINESS ALONG PIANO ROW

"Tumble in" doorways and the individual "listening rooms" for trying out talking machine records are two important changes which are slowly but surely changing the character of piano row interiors.

Several years ago every piano house on South Wabash avenue which could afford it had a "recital hall" where phonograph concerts were given to supposedly enraptured prospective customers. But in these days, when talking machines are as common in the workingman's home as grand pianos on the Gold Coast, customers balk at public tests—they want to try their records in the privacy of an individual room.

One of the latest firms to recognize this point in salesmanship is the Adam Schaaf Piano company, 319 South Wabash avenue. Four years ago they installed a 150 seat recital hall at big expense. Yesterday work began on a $40,000 alteration from plans by George C. Nimmons & Co., architects, which will turn the hall into fifteen attractive, well ventilated, luxuriously furnished, soundproof booths for trying out talking machine records.

"The Schaaf company also is going to have a complete new entrance put in," said Mr. Nimmons. "Probably in no other line of business does the kind of doorway have so important a bearing on sales as in piano row. It must be a sort of 'tumble in' affair, close to the show windows, and with no vestibules or corridors to hamper the person who has just about made up his mind to buy after looking at the window display. Piano row experts say that the 'tumble in' doorways lead to very much larger sales than the intricate entrances once common."

Ravenswood District to Get Specialties Plant

A new industry for the Ravenswood district will result from the purchase by Augie L. Hansen and James R. Offield, patent attorney, of the two story factory building at the northeast corner of West Ravenswood and Winnemac avenues, lot 37x125, at a reported $27,500 subject to $7,000, from the Mallott-Johnson Grocery company.

The purchasers are operating under the name of Augie L. Hansen Manufacturing company and will employ 100 in the manufacture and merchandising of patented metal specialties. Mr. Hansen is president of the company, and Mr. Offield, who is son in law of William Wrigley Jr., is secretary and treasurer.

Operation of the new plant will start within thirty days. The E. E. Stults Realty company represented the seller and Paul C. Loeber & Co. the buyers.

Ontario Street House to Be Made Office Building

Another of the near north side old residences is to be made into an office building. Frederick M. Bowes of the Bowes Realty company has bought from the estate of John H. Leslie the three story brick and stone house at 150 East Ontario street, lot 19x100, just east of Michigan avenue, for a reported $14,820, or $780 a front foot. Mr. Bowes intends within a few months to completely remodel the building for office use. The Bowes Realty company was broker.

Boy! Rush This to B. L. T.: Mr. Kravit—Haberdasher

Introducing Mr. Frank H. Kravit of Chicago, who surely lives close to his name. Mr. Kravit has just leased from Ralph M. and Harry C. Thayer the front part of store 216 South Clark street, through E. F. Keebler & Co., for a necktie and men's furnishings shop, for nine years at a term rental of $37,800. The shop is 19x25, and is in the building which for forty years prior to the near-beer era was occupied by Hannah & Hogg.

Benjamin Electric Buys Factory for $115,000

The Benjamin Electric company has purchased from Emma L. Dickinson the four story building at 120-28 South Sangamon street for a reported $115,000, subject to $40,000. The lot is 117x117. The building is at present under lease and occupied by the buyers, who will continue there. Quinlan & Tyson were brokers.

STANDARD CLUB PLANS 2 MILLION LOOP BUILDING

Will Sell Old Michigan Avenue Home.

Chicago's largest and wealthiest Jewish social organization—the Standard club—is planning to abandon its big stone building at the southwest corner of Michigan avenue and Twenty-fourth street and erect a $2,000,000 twenty-one story clubhouse in the loop as soon as building conditions improve. Several attractive offers for the present south side building have been made by motor concerns.

The new clubhouse will equal anything in the country, according to President Jacob Ringer of the law firm of Ringer & Wilhartz. It will have the finest swimming pool in Chicago, with a big gymnasium, and will have approximately 200 sleeping rooms, each with bath, for both members and out of town visitors.

In Heart of Motor Row.

"When the Standard club put up its building at Michigan and Twenty-fourth it was in the heart of the south side residence district," said Mr. Ringer. "Now it's surrounded by automobile concerns, and most of the members live on the north side or the north shore. You can't expect a club member to spend much time in a club so far south.

"But with a magnificent big clubhouse in the loop we figure our club membership would jump from the present 530 to around 1,500. A good many of us want our boys who are getting around 21 or so to have a swimming pool and a gym, and we'll have them in the new club.

Preliminary Plans Drawn.

"We've had several sites in mind, and preliminary plans drawn for one site, but just now everything is at a standstill, and will be until building conditions change. We'll have no difficulty in financing the project when we get ready to go ahead, but we do have difficulty in finding a contractor who could tell us what it would cost, so we're sitting tight. But we'll start work just as soon as labor and material conditions improve."

LOGAN SQUARE LOAN.

The Noel State bank has made a $160,000 ten year, 6 per cent loan to Charles Lange, president of Charles Lange & Bros. company, on the new building he is erecting at 2623-27 Milwaukee avenue.
